This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

https://books.google.com

4780.0.3

- Google

ILLUSTRATIONS

MASONRY.

By WILLIAM PRESTON,

PAST MASTER OF THE LODGE OF ANTIQUITY,
ACTING BY IMMEMORIAL CONSTITUTION.

The man, whose mind on virtue bent,
Pursues some greatly good intent
With undiverted aim;
Serene, beholds the angry crowd,
Nor can their clamours, sierce and loud,
His stubborn honour tame.

BLACKLOCK.

THE ELEVENTH EDITION, WITH CONSIDERABLE ADDITIONS.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR G. WILKIE, N° 57, PATERNOSTER-ROW. 1804.

Printed by Strahan and Preston, New-Street-Square.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE

THE EARL OF MOIRA,

ACTING GRAND MASTER

OF THE SOCIETY OF FREE-MASONS,

AND THE LIVING PATTERN OF RANK, TALENTS, AND MORAL EXCELLENCE,

THIS IMPROVED EDITION

OF

A WELL-KNOWN TREATISE

16

WITH DUE DEFERENCE, MOST HUMBLY INSCRIBED;

ВY

HIS LORDSHIP'S

MOST DEVOTED SERVANT,

AND BROTHER,

THE AUTHOR.

PREFACE.

THE favourable reception this Treatife has metwith in the feveral Editions through which it has passed, encourages the Author to hope that its appearance on a more enlarged scale will not render it less deserving the countenance of his Brethren. He would be wanting in gratitude to his friends, not to acknowledge his obligations to several gentlemen for many curious extracts, and the perusal of some valuable manuscripts, which have enabled him to illustrate his subject with greater accuracy and precision.

This Tract is divided into Four Books. In the First Book, the excellency of Masonry is displayed, -In the Second Book, the general plan of the subjects treated in the three Degrees is illustrated, with occasional remarks; and a brief description is given of the ancient Ceremonies of the Order. This part of the treatife, which the Author confiders most effential for the instruction and improvement of his Brethren, is confiderably extended in the later Editions.—The Third Book contains the copy of a curious old Manuscript on Masonry, with annotations, the better to explain this authentic document of antiquity.—The Fourth Book is restricted to the history of Masonry from its first appearance in England, to the beginning of the year 1804, in which are introduced the most remarkable occurrences of the Society both at home and abroad, with some account of the principal Patrons and Protectors of the Fraternity at different periods. The progress of Masonry on the Continent, as well as in India and America, is also traced, while the proceedings of the Brethren of Scotland particularly claim attention. Throughout the whole are interspersed several explanatory notes, containing some useful information; and a few general remarks are introduced on some of the late publications against the Society of Freemasons.

At the end of the volume is given a collection of Anthems and Songs; which, being occasionally introduced in our assemblies, may tend greatly to enliven the proceedings.

The fucces of this Treatise has far exceeded its merit; the Author, therefore, shall only observe, that should his additions or corrections be considered real improvements, he will be amply gratified for any pains he may have taken.

Dean-street, Fetter-lane, Aug. 31, 1804.

3 AU59

INTRODUCTION.

Whoever attentively considers the nature and tendency of the Masonic Institution, must readily perceive its general utility*. From an anxious desire to display its value, I have been induced to offer the following sheets to the Public. Many reasons might have with-held me from the attempt; my inexperience as a writer, my attention to the duties of a laborious profession, and the many abler hands who have treated the subject before me: yet, under all these disadvantages, the persuasion of friends, added to a warm zeal in the cause, have stimulated me to risk my reputation on the fate of my performance.

When I first had the honour to be elected Master of the Lodge, I thought it proper to inform myself fully of the general rules of the Society, that I might be better enabled to execute my own duty, and officially enforce obedience in others. The methods which I adopted with this view, excited in some of superficial knowledge an absolute dislike of what they considered as innovations; and in others who were better informed, a jealousy of pre-eminence which the principles of Masonry ought to have checked. Notwithstanding these discouragements, however, I persevered in my intention of supporting the dignity of the Society, and of discharging with sidelity the duties of my office.

* Mr. Arnold, in his Dutch Dictionary, under the word Freemasonry, says, that it is "A Moral Order, instituted by virtuous men, with the praise-worthy design of recalling to our remembrance the most sublime truths, in the midst of the most innocent and social pleasures, sounded on liberality, brotherly love, and charity."

As candour and integrity, uninfluenced by interest or favour, will ever support a good cause, some of my opponents (pardon the expression) soon began to discover their error, and cheerfully concurred in the execution of my measures; while others of less liberality tacitly approved, what their former declared opinions forbad them publicly to adopt.

This fuccess, which exceeded my most fanguine wishes, encouraged me to examine with more attention the contents of our Lectures. The rude and impersect state in which I found them, the variety of modes established at our meetings, and the dissipation of the design, I continued the pursuit; and with the assistance of a sew brethren, who had carefully preserved what ignorance and degeneracy had rejected as unintelligible and absurd, I diligently sought for, and at length happily acquired, some of the ancient and venerable landmarks of the Order.

Fortunate in the acquisition of friends, and fully determined to pursue the design of effecting a general reformation, we perfevered in an attempt to correct the irregularities which had crept into our affemblies, and exemplify at all our meetings the beauty and utility of the Masonic system.

Paigitized by Google

We commenced our plan by enforcing the value of the ancient charges and regulations of the Order, which inattention had fuffered to fink into oblivion, and established those charges as the basis of our work. To imprint on the memory a faithful discharge of our duty, we reduced the more material parts of the system into practice; and in order to encourage others to promote the plan, we made it a general rule of reading one or more of these charges at every regular meeting, and elucidating such passages as seemed obscure. The useful hints which were afforded by these means enabled us gradually to improve the plan, till we at last succeeded in bringing into a connected form all the Sections which now compose the three Lectures of Masonry.

The progress daily made by our system pointed out the propriety of obtaining the sanction of our Patrons; several brethren of acknowledged honour and integrity, therefore, united in an application to the most respectable Members of the Society for countenance and support. They happily succeeded to the utmost of their wishes, and since that time the plan has been universally admitted as the basis of our Moral Lectures. To that circumstance the present publication owes its success.

Having thus ventured to appear in vindication of the ceremonies, and in support of the privileges of the Order, I shall be happy to be considered a feeble instrument in promoting its prosperity. Should I be honoured with a continuance of the approbation of my brethren, and succeed in giving the world a favourable idea of the institution, I shall be fully gratified for my past exertions; and should my hopes be frustrated, I shall yet indulge the not unpleasant restection, of having discharged my duty in the character of a Mason.

CONTENTS.

** The Lines in, Italies are not inferted in any of the former Editions.

BOOK I.

The Excellency of Masonry displayed.
Sect.
1. Reflections on the symmetry and proportion in the works of Nature, and on the harmony and affection among the va rious species of beings - Page
II. The advantages refulting from Friendship
111. Origin of Masonry, and its general advantages
1V. Masonry considered under two denominations
V. The Government of the Fraternity
VI. Reasons why the secrets of Mason: yought not to be publicly ex posed; and the importance of those secrets demonstrated 10
VII Few Societies exempted from censure. Irregularities of Ma-
IONS no argument pagin A sha in Airest
Will. Charity the diffinguishing characteristic of Masone
IX. The difcernment displayed by Majons in the choice of objects
Of Charity
X. Friendly admonitions
20
BOOK II.
General Remarks: including an Illustration of the Lectures; a particular Description of the ancient Ceremonies and the Charges what is all the sancient Cere. monies; and the Charges used in the different Degrees.
SECT.
I. General Remarks
11. The Ceremony of opening and cloting the Lodge Frayer used at opening the Lodge
-at closing the Lodge
- Charges and Regulations for the conduct and behaviour or Maions
On the management of the Craft in working, to be re-hearfed at opening the Lodge, ib.
A 6

				1
SECT.			**		-
	Laws for the govern			&amp;	29
*	Charge on the beha	aviour of l	Malons, to	be rehear	:fed at closing the Lodge	, -	· ′ •	• •	30 (
III. Ren	narks on the First 1	LECTURE	•	• '	32
	First Section	-	•	-	33
-	Second Section	•,	-	•	ib.
	Declaration to be	affented to l	y every Ca	ındidate pr	evious
	to Initiation	•	-	•	34
	Form of Propositi		-		ib.
	Prayer used at Ini	itiation	•	-	35
	Third Section	-	, •	•	ib.
	Charge at Initiati	on into the	Firft Degi	·ce -	36
	EULOGIUM	`•	-	•	40
•	Fourth Section	•	•	•	41
	Origin of masonic	: hieroglypł	ics	•	ib.
	Fifth Section	•	•	-	42
	Sixth Section	•	-	•	43
	Grand Principles	explained	•	•	ib.
	Cardinal Virtues	explained		•	44
	Equality among I	Malons exe	mplified	4	45
IV. R	emarks on the Sucon	SD LECTU	R.E.		46
	First Section	•	•	-	48
	Charge at Initiati	on into the	Second De	egree	49
	Second Section	.=	. •	•	51
	Origin of Orders	in Archite	Aure	• `	52
	Five Orders expl	ained	-	/ - '	ib.
	General Remarks	s on the Sei	nses .	.	55
	Five Senfes expla	ained	•	•	56
	Moral advantages	of Geome	try .	. ,-	61
	Third Section	•	-	•	63
	Invocation of So	lomon at t	he Dedicat	ion of the	Femple
-	of Jerufalem	٠.		. •	65
	Fourth Section	•	-	-	66
•	Seven liberal Ar	ts explained	3' -	•	ib.
	The Globes expl		• ,		68
V. R	temarks on the Turn	D LECTUR		. .	69
	First Section	′ 	-	•	70
•	Prayer at Initiati	on into the	Third De	ree -	- 71
	Charge at Initia	tion into th	e Third D	egree .	. ib.
	Second Section			· •	72
	Third Section	•	•	-	ib.
	Fourth Section		, ·		ik
		, -

CONTENTS.	xili
RCT.
Fifth Section	73
Sixth Section	ib.
Seventh Section	ib.
Eighth Section	ib.
Ninth Section	ib.
Tenth Section	74
Eleventh Section	ib.
Twelfth Section	ib.
VI. Of the ancient Ceremonies of the Order	75
Manner of conflituting the Lodge	ib.
Application for a Constitution	ib.
Ceremony of Constitution	77
Ceremony of Confecration	. 79
Ceremony of Installation -	80
Ancient Charges from an old MS	81
Charges delivered at the Constitution of a Lodge	82
Regulations delivered at ditto	. 84
Ceremony of laying a Foundation-stone •	92
Ceremony of Dedication	95
Ceremony at Funerals	98
General Remark on Funeral Processions	- 99
Funeral Service	101
	,
воок ии.	,
The Principles of Masonry explained.
I. A Letter from the learned Mr. John Locke, to the	Earl of
Pembroke	110
Old Dialogue on Majonry	111
Gloffary to ditto	117
II. Remarks on the Old Dialogue and on Mr. Locke's	Anno-tations	118
Some Account of Pythagoras	120
The wife Policy of Masons with respect to Relig	DZI bre mi
Government -	126
Remarks on Secrecy
Instances of the great Veneration paid to it	129
Ancients -
The Story of Papyrus	130
Curious Explanation of the Word Arrae.	ib.
	133
Artrology originally practifed by Majons	134
Advantages derived from this Study	335

BOOK IV.

The History of Masonry in England, &c.

GEC 1.	· •
1. 1	Mafonry carly	introduced into	England	Account	of the
	Druids—Prog	refs of Mafonry	in England	under ti	he Ro-
	· mans — Mafor	ns highly favour	ed by St. All	ban:	120
	St. Alban	procures a Cha	rter for the	Maions	from
•	Carausiu		- .		142
	- Some Acco	unt of this vene	rable Martyr		142
И. Е	liftory of Malon	ry in England un	der St. Aufli	n, King	Alfred.
	Edward, Ath	elstane, Edgar,	Edward the	Confessor.	. Wil-
٠.	liam the Con	queror, Henry	I. Stephen,	and Hen	ry 11. :
	and also under	the Knights T	emplars		145
	Austin pati	onifes the Mafo	ns -		146
· · ·	Alfred lavo	ours the Mafons		-	147
	· Character of	f that Prince	•	-	ib.
• .	First Grand	Lodge of Engla	nd formed at	York	148
	- Athelstane	grants a Charter	to the Major	s there	ib.
	Claims of th	e present Grand	Lodge at You	k-examin	ed 140
. * -	A general o	r Grand Lodge e	xplained '	-	150
: .	Why allegia	nce is due to the	Grand Lode	e at York	141
	Athelstane	faifely accused	of murderin	ng his h	rother
	Edwin		•		152
	Magna Cha	arta first of tain	ed by the I	Normans	from:
	Henry I.	• .	-	•	154
	Mafonry une	der, the Grand M	lafter of the	Knights '	Templars				100
II. Hi	tory of Masonry	in England duri	ng the reigns	of Henr	v III.
	Edward I. Edv	vard II Edward	III. Richard	Il. Henr	v IV.
	Henry V. and	Henry VI.	_	_	ib.
	Edward III.	revises the Conf	titutions of M	/alonry	156
	Extract from	an old record in	his reign	,	ih.
	Curious defei	ription of the pla	n and orname	ents of St.	Sten
	phen's Cha	pel, Westminst	er, now the l	doule of	Commons, late	ly difcovered .	-		1 - 0
	Act (3 Hen.	VI.) for abolish	ing Chapters	of Majon:	S 162:
	Juage Coke a	opinion on that	: statute	_	ib.
	Circumstance	s which gave ri	fe to this Ac	i	163
	Dr. Andersor	s observation or	this Act		165
	Civil Co me	otions at this per	ad.	,	3

-Diguized by Google

SECT.	· ·
	Duchess of Gloucester accused of witchcraft,	and	condemned to perpetual imprisonment	-	170
	Duke of Gloucester murdered		ib
.,	Character of that Prince		171
	Cardinal of Winchester's death, and anecdote	conc	ern-
	ing it		jb
	King Henry initiated into Masonry, revises the	.: he coi
	tutions, and patronifes the lodges		172
•	History of Masonry in Scotland at this period	_	ib.
IV. Hift	ory of Masonry in the South of England from	1 47	to
	1567	•4/	173
. 1	Masonry under the patronage of the Knights of M	alta	174
1	Description of Henry the Seventh's Chapel	-	ib.
. (	Queen Elizabeth fends an armed force to break u	n the nual communication at York	pc	176
	A Grand Mafter first appointed for the South of	Engla	nd .
_	Sir T. Gresham elected	D11514	17 7
I	Foundation stone of the Royal Exchange laid	hu Sir	· T
, -	Gresham -	J, 5.1	ib.
V. Pros	gress of Masonry in the South of England from	the r	eian
0	of Elizabeth to the Fire of London 1666		178
	Inigo Jones a zealous patron of Masons	•
•	Some account of this artist		179 ib.
	The appellation of Grand Master of England first		 : L
	Banqueting house, Whitehall, described	Bive	180
-	Other works executed by him	•
	Extracts from Elias Ashmole's diary		183 ib .
	Sir Christopher Wren presides over the Masons	•	185
•	Short account of this architect		ib.
•	Regulations of the Majons in the reign of Charle	. ii	-25
VI. Hift	ory of Masonry in England from the Fire of Lo	10.11.5 10.11.5	100
t	he Accession of George I.		188
*4	London visited by the plague	_	ıь.
	Fire of London	. •
	Dr. Wren prepares a plan for the new city	-	iķ.
	Citizens averse to it		189
•	Foundation-stone of the new Royal Exchange !	la:4	190
• •	Description of the building		ib.
	Custom-house of London built	•	191
•	Theatrum Sheldonium at Oxford built		ib.
	Monument in London erected; description of it	•	ib.
	Dr. Wren designs St. Paul's cathedral		193
	The foundation-from laid by King Charles		194

SECT.
•	Accurate description of the building	•	195
	Bethlehem hospital in Moorfields built	••	202
- · · · · -	Parish churches in London rebuilt, or repaired,	after	the Fire		203
-	State of Masonry at the Revolution	-	207
vII. Hif	tory of the Revival of Masonry in the South of Eng	gland	208
	History of Masonry in London at that time	, •	209
` (	Establishment of the present Grand Lodge in Lo	pecon	ib.
.*	Nature of its establishment -	-	210
	Particular account of the four Old Lodges w	hich	ArA formed the Grand Lodge, and the privilege
	by them	-	212
·	Duke of Montague the first noble Grand Ma	after :	after the Revival	-	217
	State of Masonry in the North of England from	n 170	s to
	1725 inclusive	- ′	218
	The Grand Lodge of York deemed the Moth	er L	odge
	of the kingdom	_	219
,	First division between the Lodges in the North	and Se	outh
	on account of innovations made by the latter		220
WEST 1016	tory of Masonry from its Revival in the South of
AIII. DIII	to the death of King George I		22 I
	Book of Conftitutions first published	•	223
	Committee of Charity established -	-	214
	Majons of Wales unite under the banner of t	he G
	Lodge of England	_	225
	Provincial Grand Masters first appointed	-	226
: : :	Office and Privilege of a Provincial Grand M
		_	ib.
	plained	of B
			227
•	George II.	4
	Masonry first established in India, and its rapid	a broi	228
	there	_•
	Duke of Norfolk's handsome present to the So	ciety
	Regulations in the Committee of Charity		231
	Privileges granted to the Stewards	•	il.
	Francis late Emperor of Germany initiated into	) Mai
- `.		•	ib.
. * /	First country seast held at Hampstead	•	232
•	Lodge at Hamburgh opened under the English	a Co	-iRa

Anderson's Edition of Constitutions published 234

SECT.	TCT.
-------	------	--

	Regulations established, and further privileges gran	ted
'	to the Stewards	234
	Encroachment on the jurifdiction of the Grand Lo	dge 235
	The Lodge at York acknowledged to act independ	635
	under its own Grand Master	ib.
	Stewards first appear at the Grand Lodge in their reg	alia
		236
	Certain privileges of the Stewards disputed	37
	Remarks on these privileges	ib,
	Frederick the late Prince of Wales initiated	138
	The late King of Pruffia initiated -	240
	Grand Lodge in Prussia instituted under a Constitut from Scotland
	Regulations established by his Prussian Majesty for	164
	government of the Society	ib.
	Rife of the Society in London calling themselves And 27 6
	Made adams to the contract of	41
'	601 C 161 M	142
	Harmony of the Society restored through the influen	43
_	Grand Lodge of Antigua instituted	45 ib.
٠.	• • • • • · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	46
	The foundation-stone of the New Exchange at Ed	40
-		48
		•
	New Regulations respecting the irregular Masons	49
		57
-		58
X. Hi	ftory of Masonry in the South of England from the A
,	M 10	59
	Subscriptions voted for purchasing furniture for	) y
		61
		62
	Compliment voted to the Dukes of York, Gloucest 63
		ib.
		65
	^	ib.
	Compact with the National Grand Lodge of the Unit 67
	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	-,

SECT.

	Bill for incorporating the Society brought into Par	lia-
	ment, and on the second reading rejected	268
	Hall Committee instituted - ' -	ib.
	Report to the Grand Lodge of the purchase of gro	und
3	and premises for the Hall	ib.
	5cool raised on tontine by subscription, for build
•	the Hall	269
	Foundation-stone of the new Hall laid -	270
	Hall completed and dedicated	27 E
	The Office of Grand Chaplain instituted -	ib.
	The tavern rebuilt, and expences incurred	269
	Brethren of St. John's lodge at Newcastle build a	hall for their meetings	273
	Propofals for an alliance with the Grand Lodge of Be	rlin
	approved	273
	Deputy or Affistant Secretary appointed -	ib.
•	Past Grand Officers to be distinguished by a jewel	ibı
٠.	Observations thereon	ib.
	Further regulations respecting ancient Masons	274
:	The cenfure against them not extended to the lodges	un-
•	der the banner of Scotland, Ireland, or York	ib.
í.	Appendix to the Book of Constitutions ordered to	be
٠.	printed	275
	Freemasons Calendar first published -	ib.
	Fee of Constitutions raised	ib.
	Masons at Sunderland build a hall for their meetir	igs.
•	which is destroyed by fire, and rebuilt -	ib.
	The tranquillity of the Society interrupted by priv	at c
	diffensions	276
	Consequence of these dissensions	ib.
	the contract of the contract o	277
	Proceedings of the Grand Lodge on that occision	278
	Lodge of Antiquity separates from the Grand Lodge,	and forms an alliance with the Grand Looge at York	ib.
	Resolution of the Grand Lodge in justification of	its proceedings in giving a fanction to three expe	led members of the Lodge of Antiquity, with their at	Tociates, to bear the rank and title of that Lodge	ib.
	Reflections on that event	ib.
	Lodge of Antiquity renews its alliance with the Gra	nd
		28 I.
XI.	History of the most remarkable events in the Society fr	om
		- 2 -

SECT.

Flourishing state of Masonry in India under th	ic En	_
constitution	-	281
Omdit-ul-Omrah, eldest fon of the Nabob
initiated in the lodge at Tritchinopoly		ib
Congratulatory letter from the Grand Lodge	, wi	th a prefent of a blue apron, and Book of Conf	stitut	ions, fent to his Highness by Sir John Day	-	ib.
The answer returned -		283
Omur-ul-Omrah, brother to Omdit-ul-Om	rah,	initiated		284
Proceedings of the Society at Madras under	Briga	adier
General Horne -	•	ib.
Grand Lodge established at Madras	-	285
Union of the brethren there	-	ib.
Lodge of Perfect Unanimity No. 1. at Mad	ras i	nsti-
tuted	- '	286
One hundred pounds fent to America for the	relic	f of
diftreffed brethren		388
Proposal for diftingishing the Grand Officers w	vith r	obes
at public meetings, fet afide	-	289
New fubscription raised for the Hall fund, and	hono	rary
jewels prefented to the subscribers	-	ib.
Privileges granted to them -		290
Grand Officers at their appointment to be me	mber	s of the Stewards' lodge		ib.
An Extra-Committee of Charity appointed to	mee	t in fummer during the receis	•	ib.
An additional Grand Secretary appointed		ib.
Grand Lodge of Germany agreed to be repres	entec	l in
London		29 T
Measures proposed to establish an union with th	ne lo	dges
in Scotland and Ireland	•	ib.
Duke of Cumberland elected Grand Master		293
Acting Grand Master first appointed	- '	ib.
1000l. of the Charity confolidated with the Hall	fund	ib.
Regulations for the increase of the Hall fund		293
Office of Grand Portrait Painter appointed		294
Lodge erafed for making Masons in the King	's Be	nch
prifon		ib.
Fines to be levied on Deputy Grand Master ar	ıd Gr	and
Wardens when abient		95
Great improvements in the city of Rdinkwash		:1

roundation-mone of the South Bridge there, laid	295
Ceremony observed on that occasion -	ib.
Inscription deposited in the stone	297
Plan for building the new College of Edinbur	gh approved	298
Ceremony observed at laying the foundation st	one of that Argane	. 200
Address of the Grand Master on that occasion	to the
Lord Provost and Magistrates -	300
Principal Robertson's speech, in answer to the	Grand
Master's Address	301
Inscription placed in the stone	304
New bridge at Montrole opened	_ 306
Duke of Clarence initiated into Masonry -	307
Grand Chapter of the Order of Harodim institu	ated at
London	ib.
Nature of its establishment	ib.
Prince of Wales initiated into Masonry -	308
Duke of York initiated -	ib.
Royal Cumberland Preemafons' School instituted	309
House built for the children in St. George's Field	s at the expence of 2500l.	310
General Regulations of the Charity	ib.
Patrons of the School	311
General principles upon which the Charity	is conducted	312
Death of his royal highness the Duke of Cumberla	nd 313
Prince Edward, now Duke of Kent, initiated	ib.
Prince Augustus Frederick, now Duke of Suffe	ex, ini.
tiated	· ib.
Princes of the blood honoured with the close	thing of
Grand Officers	ib.
Members of the Lodge of Antiquity reflected	to their privileges at the Grand Feast in 1790 -	314
Prince of Wales elected Grand Master -	ib.
Three elegant cheirs and candlesticks provided	for the Grand Lodge	ib.
liftory of Masonry from the Installation of the P
Wales as Grand Master, to the Grand Feast is	n 1795
inclusive	315
Installation of the Prince of Wales -	ik.
Brethren in Lincoln transmit an Address to l highness in a column of heart of oak	416

Sict.

	Freemasons of Cornwall address his royal highness	316
	Address of the Grand Lodge to the King -	318
,	Address of the Grand Lodge to the Prince of Wales	320
	King of Sweden initiated	32 I
	Brethren in America present a new edition of their	- stitutions to General Washington -	ib.
	Address to him on that occasion	ib.
	General Washington's Answer	322
	His death, and the ceremony observed at his funera	_
	Respect paid to his memory by the House of Re
	fentatives	324
	Foundation stone of the bridge over the Wear laid	325
	First stone of the New Chapel at Brighthelmstone la	id ib.
	Freemasons' Magazine published	327
	Shakespear Lodge at Stratford on-Avon constituted
	Royal Brunswick Lodge at Sheffield constituted	ib.
	Lodge of Apollo at Alcester constituted	328
	Address of the Grand Lodge on the Prince of W	•
	Marriage - •	ib.
	His royal bighness's Answer	329
	Proceedings at the Grand Feast in May 1705	ib.
XIII. Th	e History of Masonry from the Grand Feast in 1795
	end of the year 1800	330
2	The publication of some tracts against the Masons	damo :
	for some time the progress of the Society in Europ	C 22 I
	Remarks on the Life of Zimmerman by Dr. Tiffot	332
	Some account of the Illuminati-	333
•	Zimmerman's irritable nervous system -	335
	Particulars of his death at the age of 67 -	336
•	Remarks on the Abbé Barruel's Memoirs of Jacob
	in France	ib.
	English Masons not implicated in the charge again
	Illuminati	337
	Remarks on Professor Robison's Proofs of a Conf	piracy
•	against all the religions and governments of Eu	rope, carried on in the fecret meetings of Freemafon
	luminati, and Reading Societies -	338
	The Lodges of Masons fully exonerated from the c laid against them	140
	No conspiracy of men brought about the late great	eltera-
-	tions in government	348
	Professor Rebison exempts the English Masons fro charge of diffovalty

SECT.

	Earl of Moira addresses the Grand Lodge on	he fuh	j∈Ct:
	of the publications against Masonry	•	344
_	Clauses respecting the Society of Masons in the	he A 🗗	for the suppression of Societies established for fed	litious	and
	treasonable purposes	-	345
	Form of Certificate	_	347
	Form of Register	-	348
	General Infirmary at Sheffield opened		349
	Inflitution of the New Masonic Society for the	e relie	fof
	fick, lame, or distressed brethren, their	wide	ws,
	children, and orphans -		it.
	Prudent mode of felecting the members of this S	ociety	250
•	The Rules and Orders	•	351
	Letter from the National Grand Lodge of Swe	đen	352
9	Prince of Wales's Answer	_	354
	Attempt to affaffinate the King at Drury-lane t	heatre
٠.	His Majesty's dignified conduct on that occas		ib.
•	Indignation of the populace	-
	Private Examination of the Affaffin	_	357 ib.
7	Is tried, and acquitted as a lunatic		358
	Address of the Grand Lodge to his Majest	T on	this event -	.,	ib.
	Regulations adopted to liquidate the debts	of the
· .	ciety	Ci the	160
	The magnificent range of Buildings at the	TAR T	•
. 4	house in Leadenhall-street erected	Lait I
•		-	362
-	Description of the Pediment -	-	ib.
	Rodney Lodge at Hull dedicated	- , m	363
•	ry of Masonry from the year 1800, to the Gra	na Feq	•
1	804		ib.
	Ceremony observed at laying the foundation-stone	if the l
ti i	docks at Leith -		3.64
	Grand Master's Address to the Lord Provest.	and IV	_
	frates -	•	367
	Lord Provost's Answer	-	368
, ~	Earl of Moira attends the Grand Lodge of Scotlar
	plains the refractory conduct of the irregular	Major
Ç1 -	England -	•	369
;	Mr. Laurie's account of the origin of the correspond
, m 1	on between the irregular Majons of Englan	d and	the Grand Lodge of Scotland	-	370
. ത്രവം	Flourishing state of the Society under the patronage	of the	Earl of Moira	-	ib.

CONTENTS.		XXIII
Sect.		-
Lodges in Berlin solicit a friendly intercurse with	b ibe C	Grand
Lodge of England	-	371
Four Lodges in Portugal apply for a warrant of	fconfti	tution
from England	-	ib.
Office of Grand Architect discontinued	-	373
Proceedings of the Grand Lodge against the irre	ezular	Ma-fons	•	ib.
Earl of Moira's portrait ordered to be painted b	y an e	minent
g tift, and put up in the Hall -	•	374
Provincial Grand Masters appointed since 1790	-	ib.
, , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , , ,
	% ∪ % >(	c‱:Xx
ODES.		-
I. Hail to the Crast, &c		376
11. What solemn sounds, &c.	-	377
111. Order is Heaven's first law, &c	-	379
IV. When first the golden morn, &c	-	380
V. Thou fairest Type of Excellence divine	-	382
VI. Strike to melodious notes the golden lyre	-	ib.
VII. Wake the lute and quiv'ring strings -	1 , ,	384
VIII. Almighty Site! our heavenly king -	÷.	385
IX. Hail, universal Lord!	. 4.	386
X. Assist me, ye fair tuneful Nine -	• .	ib.
XI. Urania, hail! to thee we fing -		387
XII, Arise, gentle Muse, &c	•	ib.
		1/2
ANTHEMS.
I. Grant us, kind Heaven! what we request		388
II. By Masons' Art, th' aspiring dome -	-	389
III. Let there be light! the Almighty spoke	_	ib.
IV. To Heaven's high Architect all praise	_
	_	390
SONGS.
I. Arife, and blow thy trumpet, Fame	-	ib.
11. Unite, unite, your voices raise		391
III. When earth's foundation first was laid	_	ib.
IV. Ere God the Universe began		392
V. While trifles lead the world affray -	-	393
VI. Not the fictions of Greece, &c.	-	394
VII. Ye dull stupid mortals, &c.		395
		373

SECT.				,
VIII.	While Princes and Heroes, &c.	-	-	395
1X.	No Sect in the world, &c.	•	. •	296
x.	A fyftem more pure, &c.	-	_	397
XI.	Genius of Masonry, descend	-	1 -	398
XII.	When my divine Althea's charms		-	399
XIII.	On, on, my dear brethren, &c.	-	-	ib.
	Hail Masonry, thou crast divine!	-		400
xv.	Let Mafonry, from pole to pole	-	-	401
	Hail, Masonry! thou sacred Art	-	-	402
XVII.	When Heav'n defign'd, &c.	- :	· ·	ib.
XVIII.	Ye sons of fair Science, impatient t	to learn	-	403
	Hail, Masonry divine!	•	-	404
XX.	Let drunkards boaft the power of w	ine	-1	405
XXI.	Come let us prepare	-	· -	406
XXII.	Ye thrice happy few -	•	•	407
XXIII.	When a lodge of Freemafons, &c.		-	409
XXIV.	In history we're told, &c.		-	410
XXV.	O what a happy thing it is, &c.	•	-	411
XXVI.	Adieu ? a heart-warm, fond adieu	!	. •	412
XXVII.	As long as our coaft, &c.	-	-	413
XXVIII.	When Masonry expiring lay, &c.	-	•	ib.
	Come, ye Masons, hither bring		•	415
	A Majon's life 's the life for me	-	-	416
XXXI.	Whilst each poet sings, &c.	•'	-	417
	Thus happily met, &c.	•	-	418
	Grave bus'ness being clos'd, &c.	•.	-	ib.
	When the Sun from the East, &c.	-	-	410

3 AU59

ILĻUS-

ILLUSTRATIONS

o F

MASONRY.

BOOK I.

THE EXCELLENCY OF MASONRY DISPLAYED.

SECT. I.

Reflections on the symmetry and proportion in the works of Nature, and on the harmony and affection among the various species of beings.

WHOEVER attentively observes the objects which furround him, will find abundant reason to admire the works of Nature, and to adore the Being who directs such aftonishing operations: he will be convinced, that infinite wisdom could alone design, and infinite power finish, such amazing works.

Were a man placed in a beautiful garden, would not his mind be affected with exquisite delight on a calm survey of its rich collections? Would not the groves, the grottos, the artful wilds, the flowery parterres, the opening vistas, the lofty cascades, the winding streams, the whole variegated scene, awaken his sensibility, and inspire his soul with the most exalted ideas? When he observed the delicate order, the nice symmetry, and beautiful disposition of every part, seemingly complete in itself, yet reslecting new beauties on the other, and all contributing to make one perfect whole, would not his mind be agitated with the most bewitching sensations; and would not the view of the delightful scene naturally lead him to admire and venerate the happy genius who contrived it?

If the productions of art so forcibly impress the mind with admiration, with how much greater astonishment and reverence must we behold the operations of Nature, which presents to view unbounded scenes of utility and delight, in which divine wisdom is most strikingly conspicuous? These scenes are indeed too expanded for the narrow capacity of man to comprehend; yet whoever contemplates the general system, from the uniformity of the plan, must naturally be directed to the original source, the Supreme Governor of the world, the one perfect and unfullied beauty!

Beside all the pleasing prospects that everywhere surround us, and with which our senses are every moment gratistied: beside the symmetry, good order, and proportion, which appear in all the works of creation, something farther attracts the reslecting mind, and draws its attention nearer to the Divinity—the universal harmony and affection among the different species of beings of every rank and denomination. These are the cements of the rational world, and by these alone it subsists.

When they cease, nature must be dissolved, and man, the image of his Maker and the chief of his works, be overwhelmed in the general chaos.

In the whole order of beings, from the feraph which adores and burns, down to the meanest insect, all, according to their rank in the scale of existence. have, more or lefs, implanted in them, the principle of affociation with others of the same species. Even the most inconsiderable animals are formed into different ranks and focieties, for mutual benefit and protection. Need we name the careful ant, or the industrious bee; insects which the wifest of men has recommended as patterns of unwearied industry and prudent forefight? When we extend our ideas, we shall find, that the innate principle of friendship increases in proportion to the extension of our intellectual faculties; and the only criterion by which a judgment can be formed respecting the superiority of one part of the animal creation above the other. is by observing the degrees of kindness and goodnature in which it excels.

Such are the general principles which pervade the whole fystem of creation; how forcibly then must such lessons predominate in our assemblies, where civilization and virtue are most zealously cherished, under the fanction of science and the arts?

SECT. II.

The advantages refulting from Friendship.

No subject can more properly engage the attention, than the benevolent dispositions which indulgent Nature has bestowed upon the rational species. These are replete with the happiest effects, and afford to the mind the most agreeable reslections. The breast which is inspired with tender seelings, is naturally prompted to a reciprocal intercourse of kind and generous actions. As human nature rises in the scale of beings, the social affections likewise arise. Where friendship is unknown, jealousy and suspicion prevail; but where that virtue is the cement, true happiness substitute is the revery breast there is a propensity to friendly acts, which being exerted to effect, sweetens every temporal enjoyment; and although it does not remove the disquietudes, it tends at least to allay the calamities, of life.

Friendship is traced through the circle of private connexions to the grand system of universal benevolence, which no limits can circumscribe, as its influence extends to every branch of the human race. Actuated by this sentiment, each individual connects his happiness with the happiness of his neighbour, and a fixed and permanent union is established among men.

Nevertheless, though friendship, considered as the source of universal benevolence, be unlimited, it exerts its influence more or less powerfully, as the objects it savours are nearer or more remote. Hence the love of friends and of country takes the lead in our affections, and gives rise to that true patriotism, which fires the soul with the most generous slame, creates the best and most disinterested virtue, and inspires that public spirit and keroic ardour, which enables us to support a good cause, and risk our lives in its defence.

This commendable virtue crowns the lover of his country with unfading laurels, gives a lustre to his actions, and confecrates his name to latest ages. The warrior's glory may consist in murder, and the rude ravage of the desolating sword; but the blood of thousands will not stain the hands of his country's friend. His virtues are open, and of the noblest kind. Conscious integrity supports him against the arm of power; and should he bleed by tyrant-hands, he gloriously dies a martyr in the cause of liberty, and leaves to posterity an everlasting monument of the greatness of his soul.

Though friendship appears divine when employed in preserving the liberties of our country, it shines with equal splendor in more tranquil scenes. Before it rises into the noble stame of patriotism, aiming destruction at the heads of tyrants, thundering for liberty, and courting danger in desence of rights; we behold it calm and moderate, burning with an even glow, improving the soft hours of peace, and heightening the relish for virtue. In those happy moments, contracts are formed, societies are instituted, and the vacant hours of life are employed in the cultivation of social and possibled manners.

On this general plan the universality of our system is established. Were friendship confined to the spot of our nativity, its operation would be partial, and imply a kind of enmity to other nations. Where the interests of one country interfere with those of another, Nature dictates an adherence to the welfare of our own immediate connexions; but fuch interference apart, the true mafon is a citizen of the world, and his philanthropy extends to all the human race. Uninfluenced by local prejudices, he knows no preference in virtue but according to its degree, from whatever clime it may fpring.

SECT. III.

Origin of Masonry, and its general advantages.

FROM the commencement of the world, we may trace the foundation of Masonry. Ever fince fymmetry began, and harmony displayed her charms, our Order has had a being. During many ages, and in many different countries, it has flourished. No art, no science, preceded it. In the dark periods of antiquity, when literature was in a low state, and the rude manners of our forefathers withheld from them that knowledge we now fo amply share, Masonry dissused its instance. This science unveiled, arts arose, civilization took place, and the progress of knowledge and philosophy gradually dispelled the gloom of ignorance and barbarism. Government being settled, authority was given to laws, and the affemblies of the fraternity acquired the patronage of the great and the good, while the tenets of the profession diffused unbounded philanthropy.

Abstracting from the pure pleasures which arise from friendship so wisely constituted as that which subsists among Masons, and which it is scarcely possible that any circumstance or occurrence can eraze, Masonry is a science confined to no particular country, but extends over the whole terrestrial globe. Wherever arts flourish, there it flourishes too. Add to this, that by fecret and inviolable figns, carefully preferved among the fraternity, it becomes an universal language. Hence many advantages are gained: the distant Chinese, the wild Arab, and the American favage, will embrace a brother Briton, and know, that befide the common ties of humanity, there is still a stronger obligation to induce him to kind and friendly offices. The spirit of the fulminating priest will be tamed; and a moral brother, though of a different perfusion, engage his esteem: for mutual toleration increligious opinions, is one of the most distinguishing and valuable characteristics of the Craft. As all religions teach morality, if a brother be found to act the part of a truly honest man, his private speculative opinions are left to God and himself. Thus, through the influence of Masonry, which is reconcilable to the best policy, all those disputes which embitter life, and four the tempers of men, are avoided; while the common good, the general object, is zealously pursued.

From this view of our fystem, its utility must be sufficiently obvious. The universal principles of the art unite, in one indissoluble bond of affection, men of the most opposite tenets, of the most distant countries, and of the most contradictory opinions; so that in every nation a Mason may find a friend, and in every climate a home.

Such is the nature of our institution, that in the lodge, which is confined to no particular spot, union is cemented by fincere attachment, and pleafure reciprocally communicated in the cheerful obfervance of every obliging office. Virtue, the grand object in view, luminous as the meridian fun, shines refulgent on the mind, enlivens the heart, and heightens cool approbation into warm sympathy and cordial attention.

SECT. IV.

Masonry considered under two denominations.

MASONRY passes under two denominations,—operative and speculative. By the former, we allude to a proper application of the useful rules of architecture, whence a structure derives figure, strength, and beauty; and whence result a due proportion and a just correspondence in all its parts. By the latter, we learn to govern the passions, act upon the square, keep a tongue of good report, maintain secrecy, and practise charity.

Speculative Masonry is so far interwoven with religion, as to lay us under the strongest obligations to pay that rational homage to the Deity, which at once constitutes our duty and our happiness. It leads the contemplative to view with reverence and admiration the glorious works of creation, and inspires them with the most exalted ideas of the perfections of the divine Creator. Operative Masonry surnishes us with dwellings, and convenient shelter from the inclemencies of seasons; and while it displays the effects of human wisdom, as well in the choice as in the arrangement of the materials of which an edifice is composed, it demonstrates that a fund of science and industry is implanted in man, for the best, most falutary, and beneficent purposes.

The lapse of time, the ruthless hand of ignorance, and the devastations of war, have laid waste and destroyed many valuable monuments of antiquity, on which the utmost exertions of human genius have been employed. Even the temple of Solomon, fo spacious and magnificent, and constructed by so many celebrated artists, escaped not the unsparing ravages of barbarous force. masonry, notwithstanding, has still survived. attentive ear receives the found from the instructive tongue, and the facred mysteries are safely lodged. in the repository of faithful breasts. Tools and implements of architecture, symbols the most expressive! are selected by the fraternity, to imprint on the memory serious truths; and thus the excellent tenets of the institution are transmitted unimpaired, under circumstances precarious and adverse, through a succession of ages.

SECT. V.

The Government of the Fraternity.

THE mode of government observed by the fraternity, will give the best idea of the nature and design of the masonic institution.

Three classes are established among Masons, under different appellations. The privileges of each class are distinct, and particular means adopted to preserve those privileges to the just and meritorious. Honour and probity are recommendations to the first class; in which the practice of virtue is enforced, and the duties of morality are inculcated, while the mind is prepared for a regular progress in the principles of knowledge and philosophy.-Diligence, affiduity, and application, are qualifications for the fecond class; in which is given an accurate elucidation of science, both in theory and practice. Here human reason is cultivated, by a due exertion of the intellectual powers and faculties; nice and difficult theories are explained; new discoveries are produced, and those already known beautifully embellished.—The third class is restricted to a felected few, whom truth and fidelity have distinguished, whom years and experience have improved, and whom-merit and abilities have entitled to preferment. With them the ancient landmarks of the Order are preserved; and from them we learn the necessary instructive lessons, which dignify the art, and qualify the professors to illustrate its excellence and utility.

Such is the established plan of the masonic system. By this judicious arrangement, true friendship is cultivated among different ranks of men, hospitality promoted, industry rewarded, and ingenuity encouraged.

SECT. VI.

Reasons why the secrets of Masonry ought not to be publicly exposed; and the importance of those secrets demonstrated.

Ir the fecrets of Masonry are replete with such advantage to mankind, it may be asked, why are they not divulged for the general good? To ithis it may be answered;—Were the privileges of Mafonry to be indiscriminately dispensed, the purposes of the institution would not only be subverted; but our secrets being familiar, like other important matters, would lose their value, and fink into disregard.

It is a weakness in human nature, that men are generally more charmed with novelty, than with the intrinsic value of things. Innumerable testimonies might be adduced to confirm this truth: Do we not find that the most wonderful operations of the Divine Artificer, however beautiful, magnificent, and useful, are overlooked, because common and familiar? The fun rifes and fets, the fea flows and reflows, rivers glide along their channels, trees and plants vegetate, men and beafts act, yet these being perpetually open to view, pass unnoticed. The most astonishing productions of Nature on the same account escape observation, and excite no emotion, either in admiration of the great cause, or of gratitude for the bleffing conferred. Even Virtue herfelf is not exempted from this unhappy bias in the human frame. Novelty influences all our actions and determinations. What is new, or difficult in the acquisition, however trisling or insignificant, readily captivates the imagination, and ensures a temporary admiration; while what is familiar, or easily attained, however noble or eminent, is fure to be difregarded by the giddy and the unthinking.

Did the effence of Masonry consist in the knowledge of particular secrets or peculiar forms, it might be alleged that our amusements were trisling and superficial. But this is not the case; they are only the keys to our treasure, and having their use, are preserved; while, from the recollection of the lessons which they inculcate, the well-informed Mason derives instruction: he draws them to a near inspection, views them through a proper medium, adverts to the circumstances which gave them rise, and dwells upon the tenets they convey. Finding them replete with useful information, he prizes them as facred; and being convinced of their propriety, estimates their value from their utility.

Many are deluded by the vague fuppolition that our mysteries are merely nominal; that the practices established among us are frivolous; and that, our ceremonies may be adopted or waved at pleasure. On this false basis we find the brethren hurrying through all the degrees of the Order, without adverting to the propriety of one step they pursue, or possessing a single qualification requisite for advancement. Passing through the usual formalities, they consider themselves entitled to rank as masters of the art, folicit and accept offices, and even assume the government of the lodge, equally unacquainted with the rules of the institution they pretend to support, or the nature of the trust they are bound to perform. The confequence is obvious; anarchy and confusion enfue, and the substance is lost in the shadow.—Hence men who are eminent for ability, rank and fortune, frequently view the honours of Masonry with indifference, and when their patronage is folicited, either accept offices with reluctance, or reject them with disdain.

Masonry has long laboured under these disadvantages, and every zealous friend to the Order must earnestly wish for a correction of the abuse. Of late years it must be acknowledged, that our assemblies are in general better regulated, of which the good effects are sufficiently displayed, in the judicious selection of our members, and the more proper observance of the general regulations.

Were the brethren who preside at our meetings, to be properly instructed previous to their appointment, and regularly apprized of the importance of the offices they are chosen to support, a general reformation would speedily take place. This conduct would establish the propriety of our government, and lead men to acknowledge, that our honours were not undeservedly conferred. The ancient consequence of the Order would be restored, and the reputation of the Society preserved. Till genuine merit shall distinguish our claim to the honours of Masonry, and regularity of deportment display the influence and utility of our rules, the world in general will not be led to reconcile our proceedings with the tenets of the profession.

SECT. VII.

Few Societies exempted from censure. Irregularities of Masons no argument against the Institution.

Among the various focieties of men, few, if any, are wholly exempted from censure. Friendship, however valuable in itself, and however universal may be its pretensions, has seldom operated so powerfully in general associations, as to promote that fincere attachment to the welfare and prosperity of each other, which is necessary to constitute true happiness. This may be ascribed to sundry causes, but to none with more propriety, than to the reprehensible motives which too frequently lead men to a participation of social entertainments. If to pass an idle hour, to oblige a friend, or probably to gratify an irregular indulgence, be the only inducement to mix in company, is it surprising that the important duties of society should be neglected; and that, in the quick circulation of the cheerful glass, the noblest faculties should be sometimes buried in the cup of ebriety?

It is an obvious truth, that the privileges of Masonry have long been prostituted for unworthy confiderations, and hence their good effects have been lefs conspicuous. Many have enrolled their names in our records for the mere purposes of conviviality, without inquiring into the nature of the particular engagements to which they are fubjected by becoming Masons. Several have been prompted by motives of interest, and many introduced to gratify an idle curiofity, or to pleafe as jolly companions. A general odium, or at least a careless indifference, must be the result of such conduct. But the evil stops not here. Persons of this description, ignorant of the true nature of the institution, probably without any real defect in their own morals, are induced to recommend others of the same cast, to join the society for the same purpose. Hence the true knowledge of the art decreases with the increase of its members, and the most valuable part of the institution is turned into ridicule; while the diffipations of luxury and intemperance bury in oblivion principles which might have dignified the most exalted characters.

When we consider the variety of members of which the fociety of Masons is composed, and the fmall number who are really conversant with the tenets of the inftitution, we need not wonder that few should be distinguished for exemplary lives. From persons who are precipitately introduced into the mysteries of the art without the requisite qualifications, it cannot be expected that much regard will be paid to the observance of duties which they perceive to be openly violated by their own initiation; and it is an incontrovertible truth, that fuch is the unhappy bias in the disposition of some men, though the fairest and best ideas were imprinted on the mind, they are so careless of their own reputation as to difregard the most instructive lessons. We have reason to regret, that even persons who are distinguished for a knowledge in the art, are too frequently induced to violate the rules to which a pretended conformity may have gained them applause. The hypocrify, however, is foon unveiled; no foonerare they liberated from the trammels, as they conceive, of a regular and virtuous deportment, in the temporary government of the lodge, than, by improperly abusing the innocent and cheerful repast, they become flaves to vice and intemperance, and not only diffrace themselves, but reslect dishonour on the fraternity. By fuch indifcretion, the best of institutions is brought into contempt, and the more deserving part of the community justly conceives a prejudice against the society, of which it is difficult afterwards to wipe off the impression.

But if some do transgress, no wise man will thence argue against the institution, or condemn the whole fraternity for the errors of a few mifguided individuals. Were the wicked lives of men admitted as an argument against the religion which they profess, the wifest and most judicious establishments might be exposed to censure. It may be averred in favour of Masonry, that whatever imperfections are found among its profesfors, the institution countenances no deviation from the rules of right reason. Those who violate the laws. or infringe on good order, are kindly admonished by fecret monitors; when these means have not the intended effect, public reprehension becomes necessary; and at last, when every mild endeavour to effect a reformation in their conduct is of no avail, they are expelled the lodge, as unfit members of the fociety.

Vain, therefore, is each idle furmife against the plan of our government; while the laws of the Craft, are properly supported, they will be proof against every attack. Men are not aware, that by decrying any laudable institution, they derogate from the dignity of human nature itself, and from that good order and wise disposition of things, which the almighty Author of the world has framed for the government of mankind, and established as the basis of the moral system. Friendship and social delights can never be the object of reproach; nor can that wisdom which hoary Time has sanctified, be subject to ridicule. Whoever attempts to censure what he does not comprehend, degrades himself; and the generous heart will pity the mistakes of such ignorant presumption.

SECT. VIII.

Charity the distinguishing characteristic of Masons.

CHARITY is the chief of every focial virtue, and the distinguishing characteristic of Masons. This virtue includes a supreme degree of love to the great Creator and Governor of the universe, and an unlimited affection to the beings of his creation, of all characters and of every denomination. This last duty is forcibly inculcated by the example of the Deity himself, who liberally dispenses his beneficence to unnumbered worlds.

It is not particularly our province to enter into a disquisition of every branch of this amiable virtue; we shall only briefly state the happy effects of a benevolent disposition toward mankind, and shew that charity, exerted on proper objects, is the greatest pleasure man can possibly enjoy.

The bounds of the greatest nation, or the most extensive empire, cannot circumscribe the generosity of a liberal mind. Men, in whatever situation they are placed, are still, in a great measure, the same. They are exposed to similar dangers and missfortunes. They have not wisdom to sore-see, or power to prevent, the evils incident to human nature. They hang, as it were, in a perpetual suspense between hope and scar, sickness and health, plenty and want. A mutual chain of dependence subsists throughout the animal creation. The whole human species are therefore proper objects for the exercise of charity.

Beings who partake of one common nature, ought to be actuated by the same motives and interests. Hence, to sooth the unhappy, by sympathizing with their missortunes, and to restore peace and tranquillity to agitated spirits, constitute the general and great ends of the masonic system. This humane, this generous disposition fires the breast with manly feelings, and ensirens that spirit of compassion, which is the glory of the human frame, and which not only rivals, but outshines, every other pleasure the mind is capable of enjoying.

All human passions, when directed by the superior principle of reason, tend to promote some useful purpose; but compassion toward proper objects, is the most beneficial of all the affections, and excites more lasting degrees of happiness; as it extends to greater numbers, and alleviates the infirmities and evils which are incident to human existence.

Possessed of this amiable, this godlike disposition, Masons are shocked at misery under every form and appearance. When they behold an object pining under the miseries of a distressed body or mind, the healing accents which slow from the tongue mitigate the pain of the unhappy sufferer, and make even adversity, in its dismal state, look gay. When pity is excited, they assuge grief, and cheerfully relieve distress. If a brother be in want, every heart is moved; when he is hungry, we feed him; when he is naked, we clothe him; when he is in trouble, we fly to his relief. Thus we confirm the propriety of the title we bear, and convince the world at large, that BROTHER among Masons is more than the name.

SECT. IX.

The discernment displayed by Masons in the choice of objects of charity.

THE most inveterate enemies of Masonry must acknowledge, that no fociety is more remarkable for the practice of charity, or any affociation of men more famed for difinterested liberality. cannot be faid that Masons indulge in convivial mirth, while the poor and needy pine for relief. Our charitable establishments and quarterly contributions, exclusive of private subscriptions to relieve distress, prove that we are ready with cheerfulness, in proportion to our circumstances, to alleviate the misfortunes of our fellow-creatures. Confidering, however, the variety of objects, whose distress the dictates of Nature as well as the ties of Masonry incline us to relieve, we find it necessary fometimes to inquire into the cause of misfortune; lest a misconceived tenderness of disposition, or an impolitic generofity of heart, might prevent us from making a proper distinction in the choice of objects. Though our ears are always open to the diffresses of the deferving poor, yet charity is not to be dispensed with a profuse liberality on impostors. The parents of a numerous offspring, who, through age, fickness, infirmity, or any unforeseen accident in life, may be reduced to want, particularly claim our attention, and seldom fail to experience the happy effects of our friendly associations. To such objects, whose situation is more easy to be conceived than expressed, we are induced liberally to extend relief. Hence we give convincing proofs of wisdom and discernment; for though benevolence, like our laws, be unlimited, yet our hearts glow principally with affection toward the deserving part of mankind.

From this view of the advantages which refult from the practice and profession of Masonry, every candid and impartial mind must acknowledge its utility and importance to the state; and surely, if the picture here drawn be just, it must be no trisling acquisition to any government, to have under its jurisdiction, a society of men, who are not only true patriots and loyal subjects, but the patrons of science and the friends of mankind.

SECT. X.

Friendly admonitions.

As useful knowledge is the great object of our defire, let us diligently apply to the practice of the art, and steadily adhere to the principles it inculcates. Let not the difficulties we have to encounter, check our progress, or damp our zeal; but let us recollect, that the ways of wisdom are beautiful, and lead to pleasure. Knowledge is attained by degrees, and cannot every where be found. Wisdom seeks the secret shade, the lonely cell designed for contemplation. There enthroned she sits, delivering her sacred oracles. There let us seek her, and pursue the real bliss. Though the passage be difficult, the farther we trace it, the easier it will become.

Union and harmony constitute the essence of free-masonry; while we enlist under that banner, the fociety must flourish, and private animosities give place to peace and good fellowship. Uniting in one design, let it be our aim to be happy ourfelves, and contribute to the happiness of others. Let us mark our superiority and distinction among men, by the fincerity of our profession as Masons; let us cultivate the moral virtues, and improve in all that is good and amiable; let the Genius of Masonry preside over our conduct, and under her fway let us perform our part with becoming dignity; let us preserve an elevation of understanding, a politeness of manner, and an evenness of temper; let our recreations be innocent, and purfued with moderation; and never let irregular indulgences lead to the subversion of our system, by impairing our faculties, or expoling our character to derision. In conformity to our precepts, as patterns worthy of imitation, let the respectability of our character be supported by the regularity of our conduct, and the uniformity of our deportment; then, as citizens of the world, and friends to every clime, we shall be living examples of virtue and benevolence, equally zealous to merit, as to obtain, universal approbation.

BOOK II.

GENERAL REMARKS: INCLUDING AN ILLUSTRA-TION OF THE LECTURES; A PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION OF THE ANCIENT CEREMONIES; AND THE CHARGES USED IN THE DIFFERENT DEGREES.

SECT. I.

General Remarks.

Masonry is an art useful and extensive. In every art there is a mystery, which requires a progress of study and application to arrive at any degree of perfection. Without much instruction, and more exercise, no man can be skilful in any art; in like manner, without an assiduous application to the various subjects treated in the different lectures of masonry, no person can be sufficiently acquainted with the true value of the institution.

From this remark it is not to be inferred, that those who labour under the disadvantage of a confined education, or whose sphere of life requires assiduous attention to business or useful employment, are to be discouraged in their endeavours to gain a knowledge of Masonry. To qualify an individual to enjoy the benefits of the society at large, or to partake of its privileges, it is not absolutely necessary that he should be acquainted with all the intricate parts of the science. These are only intended for persons who may have leisure and opportunity to indulge the pursuit.

Some may be more able than others, fome more eminent, fome more useful, but all, in their different fpheres, may prove advantageous to the community; and our necessities, as well as our consciences, bind us to love one another. To perfons, however, whose early years have been dedicated to literary pursuits, or whose circumstances and situation in life render them independent, the offices of the lodge ought principally to be restricted. The industrious tradesman proves himself a valuable member of fociety, and worthy of every honour that we can confer; but the nature of every man's profession will not admit of that leisure which is necessary to qualify him to become an expert Mason, so as to discharge the official duties of the lodge with propriety. And it must also be admitted, that those who accept offices and exercise authority in the lodge, ought to be men of prudence and address, enjoying the advantages of a wellcultivated mind and retentive memory. All men are not blessed with the same powers and talents; all men, therefore, are not equally qualified to govern. He who wishes to teach, must submit to learn; and no one can be qualified to support the higher offices of the lodge, who has not previously discharged the duties of those which are subordinate. Experience is the best preceptor. Every man may rife by gradation, but merit and industry. are the first steps to preferment. Masonry is wisely instituted for different ranks and degrees of men; and every brother, according to his station and ability, may be employed in the lodge, and class with his equal. Actuated by the best principles, no disquietude is found among the professors of the art. Each class is happy in its particular affociation; and when all the classes meet in general convention, one plan regulates the whole: neither arrogance or presumption appear on the one hand, nor dissidence or inability on the other; every brother vies to excel in promoting that endearing happiness, which constitutes the essence of civil society.

SECT. II.

The Ceremony of Opening and Closing the Lodge.

In all regular affemblies of men, who are convened for wife and useful purposes, the commencement and conclusion of business is accompanied with some form. In every country of the world the practice prevails, and is deemed essential. From the most remote periods of antiquity it is traced, and the refined improvements of modern times have not abolished it.

Ceremonies, fimply confidered, are little more than visionary delutions; but their effects are sometimes important.—When they impress awe and reverence on the mind, and attract the attention to solemn rites by external forms, they are interesting objects. These purposes are effected when judicious ceremonies are regularly conducted and properly arranged. On this ground they have received the sanction of the wisest men in all ages, and consequently could not escape the notice of Masons. To begin well, is the most likely means to end well: and it is justly remarked, that when order and method are neglected at the beginning, they will be feldom found to take place at the end.

The ceremony of opening and closing the lodge with folemnity and decorum, is therefore univerfally adopted among Masons; and though the mode in some meetings may vary, and in every Degree must vary, still an uniformity in the general practice prevails in the lodge; and the variation (if any) is folely occasioned by a want of method; which a little application will easily remove.

To conduct this ceremony with propriety, ought to be the peculiar study of every Mason; especially of those who have the honour to rule in our assemblies. To persons who are thus dignissed, every eye is directed for regularity of conduct and behaviour; and, by their example, other brethren, less informed, may naturally expect to derive instruction.

From a share in this ceremony no Mason is exempted; it is a general concern, in which all must assist. This is the first request of the Master, and the prelude to business. No sooner has it been signified, than every officer repairs to his station, and the brethren rank according to their degrees. The intent of the meeting becomes the object of attention, and the mind is insensibly drawn from the indiscriminate subjects of conversation which are apt to intrude on our less serious moments.

Our first care is directed to the external avenues of the lodge, and the proper officers, whose province it is to discharge that duty, execute the trust with fidelity. By certain mystic forms, of no recent date, it is intimated that we may safely proceed. To detect impostors among ourselves, an adherence to order in the character of Masons ensues, and the lodge is opened or closed in solemn form.

At opening the lodge, two purposes are effected: the Master is reminded of the dignity of his character, and the brethren of the homage and veneration due from them in their fundry stations. These are not the only advantages resulting from a due observance of the ceremony; a reverential awe for the Deity is inculcated, and the eye fixed on that object from whose radiant beams light only ran be derived. Hence in this ceremony we are taught to adore God, and supplicate his protection on our well-meant endeavours. The Master affumes his government in due form, and under him his Wardens; who accept their trust, after the customary falutations. Then the brethren, with one accord, unite in duty and respect, and the ceremony concludes.

At closing the lodge, a similar form takes place. Here the less important duties of the Order are not passed over unobserved. The necessary degree of subordination which takes place in the government of the lodge is peculiarly marked, while the proper tribute of gratitude is offered up to the beneficent Author of life, whose blessing is invoked, and extended to the whole fraternity. Each brother then faithfully locks up the treasure which he has acquired in his own repository; and, pleased with his reward, retires, to enjoy, and disseminate among the private circle of his friends, the fruits of his labour and industry in the lodge.

These are faint outlines of a ceremony which universally prevails among Masons, and distinguishes all their meetings. Hence it is arranged as a general Section in every Degree of the Order, and takes the lead in all our illustrations.

A Prayer used at opening the Lodge.

May the favour of Heaven be upon this meeting! and as it is happily begun, may it be conducted in order, and closed in harmony! Amen.

A Prayer used at closing the Lodge.

May the bleffing of Heaven rest upon us, and all regular Masons! may brotherly love prevail, and every moral and social virtue cement us! Amen.

Charges and Regulations for the conduct and behaviour of Masons.

A rehearfal of the Ancient Charges properly fucceeds the opening, and precedes the closing, of the lodge. This was the constant practice of our ancient brethren, and ought never to be neglected in our regular assemblies. A recapitulation of our duty cannot be disagreeable to those who are acquainted with it; and to those to whom it is not known, should any such be, it must be highly proper to recommend it.

Ancient Charges.

[To be rehea: fed at opening the Lodge.]

On the Management of the Craft in working.

Masons employ themselves diligently in their fundry vocations, live creditably, and conform with cheerfulness to the government of the country in which they reside.

The most expert craftsman is chosen or appointed Master of the work, and is duly honoured in that character by those over whom he presides.

The Master, knowing himself qualified, undertakes the government of the lodge, and truly dispenses his rewards, according to merit.

A craftsman who is appointed Warden of the work under the Master, is true to Master and Fellows, carefully oversees the work, and the brethren obey him.

The Master, Wardens, and brethren are just and faithful, and carefully finish the work they begin, whether it be in the First or Second Degree; but never put that work to the First, which has been appropriated to the Second Degree.

Neither envy nor censure is discovered among Masons. No brother is supplanted, or put out of his work, if he be capable to finish it; for he who is not perfectly skilled in the original design, can never with equal advantage to the Master finish the work begun by another.

All employed in Masonry meekly receive their rewards, and use no disobliging name. Brother or Fellow are the appellations they bestow on each other. They behave courteously within and without the lodge, and never desert the Master till the work is finished *.

* These Charges were originally rehearsed by the seven representatives of the three Degrees of the Order; but it is now the province of the Chaplain, or Secretary of the lodge, to deliver them.

Laws for the Government of the Lodge.

[To be rehearfed at opening the Lodge.]

You are to falute one another in a courteous manner, agreeably to the forms established among Masons *; you are freely to give such mutual instructions as shall be thought necessary or expedient, not being overseen or overheard, without encroaching upon each other, or derogating from that respect which is due to a gentleman were he not a Mason; for though as Masons we meet as brethren on a level, yet Masonry deprives no man of the honour due to his rank or character, but rather adds to his honour, especially if he has deserved well of the fraternity, who always render honour to whom it is due, and avoid ill-manners.

No private committees are to be allowed, or separate conversations encouraged: the Master or Wardens are not to be interrupted, or any brother who is speaking to the Master; but due decorum is to be observed, and a proper respect paid to the Master, and presiding officers.

These laws are to be strictly enforced, that harmony may be preserved, and the business of the lodge carried on with order and regularity.

Amen. So mote it be.

* In the lodge, Masons meet as members of the same family, and representatives for the time being of all the brothren throughout the world; every prejudice, therefore, on account of religion, country, or private opinion, is removed.

Charge on the Behaviour of Masons.

[To be rehearfed at clofing the Lodge.]

When the lodge is closed, you are to enjoy yourfelves with innocent mirth, and carefully avoid excess. You are not to compel any brother to act contrary to his inclination, or give offence by word or deed, but enjoy a free and easy conversation. You are to avoid immoral or obscene discourse, and at all times support with propriety the dignity of your character.

You are to be cautious in your words and carriage, that the most penetrating stranger may not discover, or find out, what is not proper to be intimated; and, if necessary, you are to wave the discourse, and manage it prudently, for the honour of the fraternity.

At home, and in your feveral neighbourhoods, you are to behave as wife and moral men. You are never to communicate, to your families, friends, or acquaintances, the private transactions of our different affemblies; but, on every occasion, confult your own honour, and the reputation of the fraternity at large.

You are to study the preservation of health, by avoiding irregularity and intemperance, that your families may not be neglected and injured, or your-felves disabled from attending to your necessary employments in life.

If a stranger apply in the character of a Mason, you are cautiously to examine him in such a method as prudence may direct, and agreeably to the forms established among Masons; that you may not to be imposed upon by an ignorant false pretender, whom you are to reject with contempt *; and beware of giving him any secret hints of knowledge. But if you discover him to be a true and genuine brother, you are to respect him; if he be in want, you are without prejudice to relieve him, or direct him how he may be relieved; you are to employ him, or recommend him to employment: however, you are never charged to do beyond your ability, only to prefer a poor Mason, who is a good man and true, before any other person in the same circumstances †.

Finally, These rules you are always to observe and enforce, and also the duties which have been communicated in the lecture; cultivating brotherly love, the foundation and cape-stone, the cement and glory of this ancient fraternity; avoiding, on every occasion, wrangling and quarrelling, slandering and backbiting; not permitting others to slander honest brethren, but defending their characters, and doing them good offices; as far as may be consistent with your honour and safety, but no farther. Hence all may see the benign insluence of Ma-

*This injunction may feem uncharitable; but when it is conficered that the feerets of Malonry are open to all men of probity and honour who are well recommended, an illegal intruder who would wish to obtain that to which he has no claim, and deprive the public charity of a small pittance at his admission, can deserve no better treatment.

+ On this principle, unfortunate captives in war, and fojourners accidentally cast on a distant shore, are particular objects of attention, and seldom fail to experience indulgence from Masons; and it is very remarkable, that there is not an instance on record of a breach of sidelity, or ingratitude, where that indulgence has been liberally extended.

fonry, as all true Masons have done from the beginning of the world, and will do to the end of time.

Amen. So mote it be.

SECT. III.

REMARKS on the FIRST LECTURE.

HAVING illustrated the ceremony of opening and closing the lodge, and inserted the Prayers and Charges usually rehearsed in our regular assemblies on those occasions, we shall now enter on a disquisition of the different Sections of the Lectures which are appropriated to the three Degrees of the Order, giving a brief summary of the whole, and annexing to every Remark the particulars to which the Section alludes. By these means the industrious Maton will be better instructed in the regular arrangement of the Lectures, and be enabled with more ease to acquire a competent knowledge of the Art.

The First Lecture is divided into Sections, and each Section into Clauses. In this Lecture, virtue is painted in the most beautiful colours, and the duties of morality are strictly enforced. Here we are taught such useful lessons as prepare the mind for a regular advancement in the principles of knowledge and philosophy; and these are imprinted on the memory by lively and sensible images, to insuence our conduct in the proper discharge of the duties of social life.

The First Section.

The First Section of this Lecture is suited to all capacities, and ought to be known by every person who wishes to rank as a Mason. It consists of general heads, which, though short and simple, carry weight with them. They not only serve as marks of distinction, but communicate useful and interesting knowledge when they are duly investigated. They qualify us to try and examine the rights of others to our privileges, while they demonstrate our own claim; and as they induce us to inquire more minutely into other particulars of greater importance, they serve as a proper introduction to subjects which are more amply explained in the following Sections.

As we can annex to this remark no other explanation confistent with the rules of Masonry, we must refer the more inquisitive to our regular assemblies for farther instruction.

The Second Section.

The Second Section makes us acquainted with the peculiar forms and ceremonies which are adopted at the initiation of candidates into Masonry; and convinces us, beyond the power of contradiction, of the propriety of our rites, while it demonstrates to the most sceptical and hesitating mind their excellence and utility.

The following particulars relative to the ceremony of initiation may be introduced here with propriety:

The Declaration to be affented to by every Candidate previous to Initiation.

"Do you feriously declare, upon your honour, before these gentlemen *, that, unbiassed by friends against your own inclination, and uninstuenced by mercenary motives, you freely and voluntarily offer yourself a candidate for the mysteries of Masonry?"

—I do.

"Do you feriously declare, upon your honour, before these gentlemen, that you are solely prompted folicit the privileges of Masonry, by a favourable opinion conceived of the institution, a desire of knowledge, and a sincere wish of being serviceable to your fellow-creatures?"—I do.

"Do you feriously declare, upon your honour, before these gentlemen, that you will cheerfully conform to all the ancient established usages and customs of the Order?"—I do.

The Candidate is then proposed in open lodge, as follows:

" R. W. Mafter, and Brethren,

"At the request of Mr. A. B. [mentioning his profession and residence] I propose him in form as a proper Candidate for the mysteries of Masonry; I recommend him, as worthy to share the privileges of the fraternity; and, in consequence of a Declaration of his intentions, voluntarily made and properly attested, I believe he will strictly conform to the rules of the Order."

• The Stewards of the lodge...

The Candidate is ordered to be prepared for Initiation.

A Prayer used at Initiation.

"Vouchfase thine aid, Almighty Father of the Universe, to this our present convention! and grant that this Candidate for Masonry may dedicate and devote his life to thy service, and become a true and faithful Brother among us! Endue him with a competence of thy divine wisdom, that, by the secrets of this Art, he may be better enabled to display the beauties of godliness, to the honour of thy holy Name! Amen."

Note. It is a duty incumbent on the Master of the lodge, before the ceremony of initiation takes place, to inform the Candidate of the purpose and design of the institution; to explain the nature of his solemn engagements; and, in a manner peculiar to Masons, to require his cheerful acquiescence to the tenets of the Order.

The Third Section.

The Third Section, by the reciprocal communication of our marks of distinction, proves the regularity of our initiation; and inculcates those necessary and instructive duties which at once dignify our character in the double capacity of Men and Masons.

We cannot better illustrate this Section, than by inferting the following

Charge at Initiation into the First Degree .

BROTHER,

.[As you are now introduced into the first principles of our Order, it is my duty to congratulate you, on being accepted a Member of an ancient and honourable Society: ancient, as having fubfifted from time immemorial; and honourable, as tending, in every particular, fo to render all men who will be conformable to its precepts. No institution was ever raised on a better principle, or more folid foundation; nor were ever more excellent rules and useful maxims laid down, than are inculcated on every person when he is initiated into our mysteries. Monarchs in all ages have beeter encouragers and promoters of the Art, and have never deemed it derogatory from their dignities; to level themselves with the brethren, to extend their privileges, and to patronise their assemblies.]

As a Mason, you are to study the moral law, as it is contained in the sacred code †; to consider it as the unerring standard of truth and justice, and to regulate your life and actions by its divine precepts.

The three great moral duties, to God, your neighbour, and yourfelf, you are strictly to obferve:—To God, by holding his name in awe and veneration; viewing him as the chief good, imploring his aid in laudable pursuits, and suppli-

The paragraphs enclosed in brackets [] may be occasionally emitted, if time will not admit of delivering the whole Charge.

† In England, the Bible; but in countries where that book is un-known, whatever is understood to contain the will or law of God.

cating his protection on well-meant endeavours:—
To your neighbour, by acting upon the fquare, and, confidering him equally entitled with your-felf-to share the blessings of Providence, rendering unto him those favours, which in a similar situation you would expect to receive from him:—And to yourfelf, by not abusing the bounties of Providence, impairing the faculties by irregularity, or debasing the profession by intemperance.

In the state, you are to be a quiet and peaceable subject, true to your sovereign, and just to your country; you are not to countenance disloyalty or rebellion, but patiently submit to legal authority, and conform with cheerfulness to the government under which you live; yielding obedience to the laws which afford you protection, and never forgetting the attachment you owe to the place of your nativity, or the allegiance due to the sovereign or protectors of that spot.

[In your outward demeanour you are to avoid censure or reproach; and beware of all who may artfully endeavour to infinuate themselves into your esteem, with a view to betray your virtuous resolutions, or make you swerve from the principles of the institution. Let not interest, savour, or prejudice, bias your integrity, or influence you to be guilty of a dishonourable action; but let your conduct be uniform, and your deportment suitable to the dignity of the profession.]

Above all, practife benevolence and charity; for these virtues have distinguished Masons in every age and country. [The inconceivable pleasure of contributing toward the relief of our fellow-creatures, is truly experienced by persons of a humane disposition; who are naturally excited, by sympathy, to extend their aid in alleviation of the miseries of others. This encourages the generous Mason to distribute his bounty with cheerfulness; by supposing himself in the situation of an unhappy sufferer, he listens to the tale of woe with attention, bewails missortune, and speedily relieves distress.

The Constitutions of the Order are next to engage your attention. [These consist of two points, oral and written communication. The former comprehends the mysteries of the Art, and are only to be acquired by practice and experience in the lodge; the latter includes the history of genuine Masonry, the lives and characters of its patrons, and the ancient charges and general regulations of the Craft.]

A punctual attendance on the duties of the Order we earnestly enjoin, more especially in that assembly where your name is enrolled as a member. [There, and in all regular meetings of the fraternity, you are to behave with order and decorum, that harmony may be preserved, and the business of Masonry properly conducted. The rules of good-breeding you are never to violate, by using unbecoming language, in derogation of the name of God, or toward the corruption of good manners; neither are you to enter into any dispute about religion or politics; or behave irreverently, while the lodge is engaged in what is serious and important.] On every occasion you are to pay a proper deference and respect to the Master and presiding officers, and diligently apply to the work of Masonry, that you may sooner become a proficient therein, as well for your own credit, as the honour of the company with whom you associate.

Although your frequent appearance at our regular meetings be earneftly solicited, your necessary employments are not to be neglected on that account: neither are you to suffer your zeal for Maforry to exceed the bounds of difcretion, or lead you into argument with persons who may ridicule our system; but extend your pity toward those who may be apt through ignorance to contemn, what they never had an opportunity to comprehend. All that is required for your general obfervance is, that you study the liberal arts at leifure, trace science in the works of eminent masters, and improve in the disquisitions of the System, by the conversation of well-informed brethren, who will be equally ready to give, as you can be to receive, instruction.

Finally; Adhere to the constitutions, and support the privileges which are to distinguish you as a Mafon above the rest of the community, and mark your consequence among the fraternity. If, in the circle of your acquaintance, you find a person desirous of being initiated into the Order, be particularly attentive not to recommend him, unless you are convinced he will conform to our rules; that the value of Masonry may be enhanced by the difficulty of the purchase; the honour and reputation of the institution established on the firmest basis; and the world at large convinced of its benign influence.

[From the attention you have paid to the recital of the duties of the Order, we are led to hope that you will form a proper estimate of the value of Free-masonry, and imprint on your mind the dictates of truth, honour, and justice.]

This Section usually closes with the following:

EULOGIUM.

MASONRY comprehends within its circle every branch of useful knowledge and learning, and stamps an indelible mark of pre-eminence on its genuine professors, which neither chance, power, nor fortune can bestow. When its rules are strictly observed, it is a sure foundation of tranquillity amidst the various disappointments of life; a friend that will not deceive, but will comfort and affist, in prosperity and adversity; a blessing that will remain with all times, circumstances, and places, and to which recourse may be had, when other earthly comforts sink into disregard.

Masonry gives real and intrinsic excellency to man, and renders him fit for the duties of society. It strengthens the mind against the storms of life, paves the way to peace, and promotes domestic happiness. It meliorates the temper, and improves the understanding; it is company in solitude, and gives vivacity, variety, and energy to social conversation. In youth, it governs the passions, and employs usefully our most active faculties; and in age, when sickness, imbecility, and disease have benumbed the corporeal frame, and rendered the union of soul and body almost intolerable, it yields a fund of comfort and satisfaction.

These are its general advantages; to enumerate them separately, would be an endless labour: it may be sufficient to observe, that he who cultivates this science, and acts agreeably to the character of a Mason, has within himself the spring and support of every social virtue; a subject of contemplation, that enlarges the mind, and expands all its powers; a theme that is inexhaustible, ever new, and always interesting.

The Fourth Section.

The Fourth Section rationally accounts for the origin of our hieroglyphical instruction, and points out the advantages which accompany a faithful observance of our duty; it illustrates, at the same time, certain particulars, of which our ignorance might lead us into error, and which, as Masons, we are indispensably bound to know.

To make daily progress in the Art, is a constant duty, and expressly required by our general laws. What end can be more noble, than the pursuit of virtue? what motive more alluring, than the practice of justice? or what instruction more beneficial. than an accurate elucidation of fymbols which tend, to improve and embellish the mind? Every thing that strikes the eye, more immediately engages the attention, and imprints on the memory ferious and folemn truths. Masons have therefore universally adopted the plan of inculcating the tenets of their-Order by typical figures and allegorical emblems, toprevent their mysteries from descending within the familiar reach of inattentive and unprepared novices, from whom they might not receive due veneration.

The usages and customs of Masons have ever corresponded with those of the ancient Egyptians, to which they bear a near affinity. These philofophers, unwilling to expose their mysteries to vulgar eyes, concealed their particular tenets and principles of polity and philosophy under hieroglyphical figures; and expressed their notions of government by figns and symbols, which they communicated to their Magi alone, who were bound by oath not to reveal them. Pythagoras feems to have eftablished his system on a similar plan, and many Orders of a more recent date have copied the example. Masonry, however, is not only the mostancient, but the most moral Institution that ever fublisted; as every character, figure, and emblem, depicted in the lodge, has a moral tendency, and tends to inculcate the practice of virtue.

[This Section closes with a definition of Charity, for which see page 17.]

The Fifth Section.

The Fifth Section explains the nature and principles of our constitution, and teaches us to discharge with propriety the duties of the different departments which we are appointed to sustain in the government of the lodge. Here, too, our ornaments are displayed, and our jewels and furniture specified, while a proper attention is paid to our ancient and venerable patrons.

To explain the subjects treated in this Section, and affist the industrious Mason to acquire them, we can only recommend a punctual attendance on the duties of the lodge, and a diligent application to the lessons which are there inculcated.

The Sixth Section.

The Sixth Section, though the last in rank, is not the least considerable in importance. It strengthens those which precede, and enforces, in the most engaging manner, a due regard to character and behaviour, in public as well as in private life, in the lodge as well as in the general commerce of society.

This Section forcibly inculcates the most instruc-Brotherly Love, Relief, and Truth, are tive lessons. themes on which we here expatiate. - By the exercise of Brotherly Love, we are taught to regard the whole human species as one family, the high and low, the rich and poor; who, as children of the same Parent and inhabitants of the same planet, are to aid, support, and protect each other. On this principle, Masonry unites men of every country, fect, and opinion; and conciliates true friendship among those who might otherwise have remained at a perpetual distance.—Relief is the next tenet of the profession. To relieve the distressed, is a duty incumbent on all men; particularly on Masons, who are linked together by an indiffoluble chain of fincere affection. To foothe calamity, alleviate miffortune, compassionate misery, and restore peace to the troubled mind, is the grand aim of the true Mason. On this basis he establishes his friendships, and forms his connexions.—Truth is a divine attribute, and the foundation of every virtue. To be good and true, is the first lesson we are taught in Masonry. On this theme we contemplate, and by its dictates endeavour to regulate our conduct: influenced by this principle, hypocrify and deceit are unknown in the lodge, sincerity and plain-dealing distinguish us, while the heart and tongue join in promoting the general welfare, and rejoicing in each other's prosperity.

To this illustration succeeds an explanation of the four cardinal virtues, Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence, and Justice.-By Temperance, we are instructed to govern the passions, and check unruly defires. The health of the body, and the dignity of the species, are equally concerned in a faithful observance of it. - By Fortitude, we are taught to refift temptation, and encounter danger with spirit and resolution. This virtue is equally distant from rashness and cowardice; and he who possesses it, is. feldom shaken, and never overthrown, by the storms. that furround him.—By Prudence we are instructed: to regulate our conduct by the dictates of reason, and to judge and determine with propriety in the execution of every thing that tends to promote either our present or future well-being. On this virtue, all others depend; it is therefore the chief jewel that can adorn the human frame. - Justice, the boundary of right, constitutes the cement of civil society. This virtue in a great measure constitutes real goodness, and is therefore represented as the perpetual study of the accomplished Mason. Without the exercife of justice, universal confusion would ensue; lawless force might overcome the principles of equity, and social intercourse no longer exist.

The explanation of these virtues is accompanied with fome general observations on the Equality obferved among Masons. In the lodge, no estrangement of behaviour is discovered; influenced by the fame principle, an uniformity of opinion, which is useful in exigencies and pleasing in familiar life. univerfally prevails, strengthens the ties of friendship, and equally promotes love and esteem. Masons are brethren by a double tie, and among them as brothers no invidious distinctions exist; merit being always respected, and honour rendered to whom it is due. - A king in the lodge is reminded, that although a crown may adorn the head, or a sceptre the hand, the blood in the veins is derived from the common parent of mankind, and is no better than that of the meanest subject.-The statesman, the senator, and the artist, are there taught that, equally with others, they are by nature exposed to infirmity and disease; and that an unforeseen misfortune, or a disordered frame, may impair their faculties, and level them with the most ignorant of their species. This checks pride, and incites courtefy of behaviour.-Men of inferior talents, or who are not placed by fortune in fuch exalted stations, are there instructed to regard their superiors with peculiar esteem, when they discover them voluntarily divested of the trappings of external grandeur, and condefcending, in the badge of innocence and bond of friendship, to trace wisdom, and follow virtue, asfifted by those who are of a rank beneath them. Virtue is true nobility, and wisdom is the channel by which Virtue is directed and conveyed, Wisdom and Virtue only mark distinction among Masons.

Such is the arrangement of the Sections in the First Lecture, which, including the forms adopted at opening and closing the lodge, comprehends the whole of the First Degree. This plan has not only the advantage of regularity to recommend it, but the support of precedent and authority, and the fanction and respect which flow from antiquity. The whole is a regular system of morality, conceived in a strain of interesting allegory, which readily unfolds its beauties to the candid and industrious inquirer.

SECT. IV.

REMARKS on the SECOND LECTURE.

MASONRY is a progressive science, and is divided into different classes or Degrees, for the more regular advancement in the knowledge of its mysteries. According to the progress we make, we limit or extend our inquiries; and, in proportion to our talents, we attain to a less or greater degree of perfection.

Masonry includes almost every branch of polite learning under the veil of its mysteries, which comprehend a regular system of science. Many of its illustrations may appear unimportant to the confined genius; but the man of more enlarged faculties will consider them in the highest degree useful and interesting. To please the accomplished scholar and ingenious artist, the institution is planned; and in the investigation of its latent doctrines, the philosopher and mathematician may experience equal satisfaction and delight.

To exhaust the various subjects of which Masonry treats, would transcend the powers of the brightest genius; still, however, nearer approaches to perfection may be made, and the man of wisdom will not check the progress of his abilities, though the task he attempts may at first seem insurmountable. Perseverance and application will remove each dissibility as it occurs; every step he advances, new pleasures will open to his view, and instruction of the noblest kind attend his researches. In the diligent pursuit of knowledge, great discoveries are made, and the intellectual faculties are wisely employed in promoting the glory of God, and the good of man.

Such is the tendency of all the illustrations in Mafonry. Reverence for the Deity, and gratitude for the bleffings of heaven, are inculcated in every Degree. This is the plan of our fystem, and the refult of our inquiries.

The First Degree being intended to ensorce the duties of morality, and imprint on the memory the noblest principles which can adorn the human mind; the Second Degree extends the plan, and comprehends a more disfusive system of knowledge. Fractice and theory are united to qualify the industrious Mason to share the pleasures which an advancement in the Art necessarily affords. Listening with attention to the wise opinions of experienced men on important subjects, the mind of the crastsman is gradually familiarised to useful instruction, and he is soon enabled to investigate truths of the utmost concern in the general transactions of life.

From this fystem proceeds a rational amusement; while the mental powers are fully employed, the judgment is properly exercised: a spirit of emulation prevails; and every brother vies, who shall most excel in promoting the design of the institution.

The First Section.

The First Section of the Second Degree elucidates the mode of introduction into this class; and instructs the diligent craftsman how to proceed in the proper arrangement of the ceremonies which are used on that occasion. It enables him to judge of the importance of those rites, and convinces him of - the necessity of adhering to all the established usages of the Order. Here he is entrusted with particular tests, to prove his title to the privileges of this Degree, and fatisfactory reasons are given for their origin. The duties which cement in the firmest union the well-informed brethren, are illustrated; and an opportunity is given to make fuch advances in the Art, as will always distinguish the abilities of able craftsmen.

Beside the ceremony of initiation into the Second Degree, this section contains many important particulars, with which no officer of the lodge should be unacquainted. Gharge at Initiation into the Second Degree BROTHER.

Being advanced to the Second Degree of the Order, we congratulate you on your preferment. [The internal, and not the external, qualifications of a man, are what Masonry regards. As you increase in knowledge, you will consequently improve in social intercourse.

It is unnecessary to recapitulate the duties which, as a Mason, you are now bound to discharge; or enlarge on the necessity of a strict adherence to them, as your own experience must have established their value. It may be sufficient to observe, that Your past behaviour and regular deportment have merited the honour which we have conferred; and in your new character, it is expected that you will not only conform to the principles of the Order, but steadily persevere in the practice of every commendable virtue.

The study of the liberal arts [that valuable branch of education, which tends so effectually to polish and adorn the mind] is earnestly recommended to your consideration; especially the science of Geometry, which is established as the basis of our Art. [Geometry, or Masonry, originally synonimous terms, is of a divine and moral nature, and enriched with the most useful knowledge; while it proves the wonderful properties of Nature, it demonstrates the more important truths of Morality.]

* The fentences inclosed in brackets [] may be occasionally omitted.

As the folemnity of our ceremonies requires a ferious deportment, you are to be particularly attentive to your behaviour in our regular affemblies; you are to preferve our ancient usages and customs facred and inviolable; and induce others, by your example, to hold them in due veneration.

The laws and regulations of the Order you are frequously to support and maintain. You are not to palliate, or aggravate, the offences of your brethren; but, in the decision of every trespass against our rules, judge with candour, admonish with friendship, and reprehend with mercy.

As a Craftsman, in our private assemblies you may offer your sentiments and opinions on such subjects as are regularly introduced in the Lecture, under the superintendance of an experienced Master, who will guard the land-marks against encroachment. By this privilege you may improve your intellectual powers; qualify yourself to become an useful member of society; and, like a skilful brother, strive to excel in what is good and great.

[*All regular figns and fummonses, given and received, you are duly to honour, and punctually obey; imasmuch as they consist with our professed principles. You are to encourage industry and reward merit; supply the wants and relieve the necessities of brethren and fellows, to the utmost of your power and ability; and on no account to wrong them, or see them wronged, but apprise them of approaching danger, and view their interest as inseparable from your own.

* This and the following paragraph are to be omitted, if previously used in the course of the ceremony.

Such is the nature of your engagements as a Craftsman, and these duties you are now bound to observe by the most sacred ties.]

The Second Section.

The Second Section of this Degree prefents an ample field for the man of genius to perambulate. It curforily specifies the particular classes of the Order, and explains the requisite qualifications for preferment in each. In the explanation of our usages, many remarks are introduced, which are equally useful to the experienced artist and sage moralist. The various operations of the mind are demonftrated, as far as they will admit of elucidation, and a fund of extensive science is explored throughout. Here we find employment for leifure hours; trace science from its original source; and, by drawing the attention to the fum of perfection, contemplate with admiration the wonderful works of the Creator. Geometry is displayed, with all its powers and properties; and in the difquilition of this science, the mind is filled with rapture and delight. Such is the latitude of this Section, that the most judicious may fail in an attempt to explain it, the rational powers being exerted to their utmost stretch in illustrating the beauties of Nature, and demonstrating the more important truths of Morality.

As the orders of architecture come under confideration in this Soction, the following brief description of them may not be improper:

By order in architecture, is meant a system of the members, proportions, and ornaments of columns and pilasters; or, it is a regular arrangement of the projecting parts of a building, which, united with those of a column, form a beautiful, perfect, and complete whole. Order in architecture may be traced from the first formation of society. When the rigour of feafons obliged men to contrive shelter from the inclemency of the weather, we learn that they first planted trees on end, and then laid others across, to support a covering. The bands which connected those trees at top and bottom, are faid to have fuggested the idea of the base and capital of pillars; and from this simple hint originally proceeded the more improved art of architecture.

The five orders are thus classed: the Tuscan, Doric, Ionic, Corinthian, and Composite.

The Tuscan is the most simple and solid of the five orders. It was invented in Tuscany, whence it derives its name. Its column is seven diameters high; and its capital, base, and entablature have but sew mouldings. The simplicity of the construction of this column renders it eligible where solidity is the chief object, and where ornament would be supersluous.

The Doric order, which is plain and natural, is the most ancient, and was invented by the Greeks. Its column is eight diameters high, and it has seldom any ornaments on base or capital, except mouldings; though the frieze is distinguished by triglyphs and metopes, and the triglyphs compose the ornaments of the frieze. The solid composition of this order gives it a preference in structures where strength and a noble but rough simplicity are chiefly required.

The Doric is the best proportioned of all the orders. The several parts of which it is composed, are sounded on the natural position of solid bodies. In its first invention it was more simple than in its present state. In after-times, when it began to be adorned, it gained the name of Doric; for when it was constructed in its primitive and simple form, the name of Tuscan was conferred on it. Hence the Tuscan precedes the Doric in rank, on account of the resemblance to that pillar in its original state.

The Ionic bears a kind of mean proportion beeveen the more folid and delicate orders. Its column is nine diameters high; its capital is adorned with volutes, and its cornice has denticles. There is both delicacy and ingenuity displayed in this pillar; the invention of which is attributed to the Ionians, as the famous temple of Diana at Ephesus was of this order. It is said to have been formed after the model of an agreeable young woman, of an elegant shape, dressed in her hair; as a contrast to the Doric order, which was formed after that of a strong robust man.

The Corinthian, the richest of the five orders, is deemed a master-piece of art, and was invented at Corinth by Callimachus. Its column is ten diameters high, and its capital is adorned with two rows of leaves, and eight volutes, which sustain the abacus. The frieze is ornamented with curious devices, and the cornice with denticles and modillions. This order is used in stately and superb

Callimachus is faid to have taken the hint of the capital of this pillar from the following remarkable circumstance:—Accidentally passing by the tomb of a young lady, he perceived a basket of toys, covered with a tile placed over an acanthus root, having been lest there by her nurse. As the branches grew up, they encompassed the basket, till, arriving at the tile, they met with an obstruction, and bent downwards. Callimachus, struck with the object, set about imitating the figure; the vase of the capital he made to represent the basket; the abacus, the tile; and the volutes, the bending leaves.

The Composite is compounded of the other orders, and was contrived by the Romans. Its capital has the two rows of leaves of the Corinthian, and the volutes of the Ionic. Its column has the quarter-round as the Tuscan and Doric orders, is ten-diameters high, and its cornice has denticles or simple modillions. This pillar is generally found in buildings where strength, elegance, and beauty, are united.

The original orders of architecture were no more than three; the Doric; Ionic, and Corinthian. To these the Romans added two: the Tuscan, which they made plainer than the Doric; and the Composite, which was more ornamental, if not more beautiful, than the Corinthian. The first three orders alone shew invention and particular character, and essentially differ from each other: the two others have nothing but what is borrowed, and differ only accidentally; the Tuscan is the Doric in its earliest state; and the Composite is the Corinthian enriched with the Ionic. To the Greeks, and not to the Romans, we are indebted for what is great, judicious, and distinct in architecture.

These observations are intended to induce the industrious Crastsman to pursue his researches into the rise and progress of architecture, by consulting the works of the best writers on the subject.

An analysis of the human faculties is also given in this Section, in which the five external senses particularly claim attention. When these topics are proposed in our assemblies, we are not confined to any peculiar mode of explanation; but every brother is at liberty to offer his sentiments, under proper restrictions.

The fenses we are to consider as the gifts of Nature, and the primary regulators of our active powers; as by them alone we are conscious of the distance, nature, and properties of external objects. Reason, properly employed, confirms the documents of Nature, which are always true and wholesome: she distinguishes the good from the bad; rejects the last with modesty, and adheres to the first with reverence.

The objects of human knowledge are innumerable; the channels by which this knowledge is conveyed, are few. Among these, the perception of external things by the senses, and the information we receive from human testimony, are not the least considerable; the analogy between them is obvious. In the testimony of Nature given by the senses, as well as in human testimony given by information, things are signified by signs. In one as well as the other, the mind, either by original principles or by custom, passes from the sign to the conception and belief of the thing signified. The signs in the natural language, as well as the signs in our original perceptions, have the same signification in all climates and nations, and the skill of interpreting them is not acquired, but innate.

Having made these observations, we shall proceed to give a brief description of the five senses:

Hearing is that fense by which we distinguish sounds, and are capable of enjoying all the agreeable charms of music. By it we are enabled to enjoy the pleasures of society, and reciprocally to communicate to each other, our thoughts and intentions, our purposes and desires; while our reason is capable of exerting its utmost power and energy.

The wife and beneficent Author of Nature seems to have intended, by the formation of this sense, that we should be social creatures, and receive the greatest and most important part of our knowledge by the information of others. For these purposes we are endowed with Hearing, that, by a proper exertion of our rational powers, our happiness may be complete.

Seeing is that fense by which we distinguish objects, and are enabled in an instant of time, without change of place or situation, to view armies in battle-array, figures of the most stately structures, and all the agreeable variety displayed in the landscape of Nature. By this sense we find our way in the pathless ocean, traverse the globe of earth, determine its figure and dimensions, and delineate any region or quarter of it. By it we measure the planetary orbs, and make new discoveries in the fphere of the fixed stars. Nay more, by it we perceive the tempers and dispositions, the passions and affections, of our fellow-creatures, when they wish most to conceal them; so that though the tongue may be taught to lie and diffemble, the countenance will display the hypocrify to the discerning eye. In fine, the rays of light which administer to this sense, are the most astonishing parts of the inanimate creation, and render the eye, with all its appurtenances, a peculiar object of admiration.

Of all the faculties, fight is the noblest. The structure of the eye evinces the admirable contrivance of Nature for performing its various external and internal motions; and the variety that is displayed in the eyes of different animals, suited to their several ways of life, clearly demonstrates this organ to be the master-piece of Nature's work.

Feeling is that sense by which we distinguish the different qualities of bodies: such as, heat and cold, hardness and softeness, roughness and smoothness, sigure, solidity, motion, and extension. By means of certain corresponding sensations of touch, these are presented to the mind as real external qualities, and the conception or belief of them is invariably connected with corresponding sensations, by an original principle of human nature, which far transcends our inquiry.

All knowledge beyond our original perceptions is got by experience. The constancy of Nature's laws connects the sign with the thing signified, and we rely on the continuance of that connection which experience hath discovered.

The three fenses, hearing, seeing, and feeling, are deemed peculiarly essential among Masons.

Smelling enables us to distinguish odours, which convey different impressions to the mind. Animal and vegetable bodies, and indeed most other bodies, continually fend forth effluvia of vast subtilty, as well in the state of life and growth, as in the state of fermentation and putrefaction. The volatile particles probably repel each other, and fcatter themselves in the air, till they meet with other bodies to which they bear a chemical affinity, with which they unite, and form new concretes. These effluvia being drawn into the nostrils along with the air, are the means by which all bodies are smelled. Hence it is evident, that there is a manifest appearance of design in the great Creator's having planted the organ of smell in the inside of that canal, through which the air continually passes. in respiration.

Taffing enables us to make a proper distinction in the choice of our food. The organ of this sense guards the entrance of the alimentary canal, as that of smell guards the entrance of the canal for respiration. From the situation of these organs, it is plain that they were intended by Nature to enable us to distinguish wholesome food from that which is nauseous. Every thing that enters into the stomach must undergo the scrutiny of Tasting, and by it we are capable of differening the changes which the same body undergoes in the different compositions of art, cookery, chemistry, pharmacy, &c.

Smelling and Tasting are inseparably connected; and it is by the unnatural kind of life which men commonly lead in society, that these senses are rendered less fit to perform their natural offices.

Through the medium of the fenses, we are enabled to form just and accurate notions of the operations of Nature; and when we restect on the means by which the senses are gratified, we become conscious of the existence of bodies, and attend to them, till they are rendered familiar objects of thought.

To understand and analize the operations of the mind, is an attempt in which the most judicious may fail. All we know is, that the fenses are the channels of communication to the mind, which is ultimately affected by their operation; and when the mind is difeafed, every fense loses its virtue. The fabric of the mind, as well as that of the body, is curious and wonderful; the faculties of the one are adapted to their feveral ends with equal wifdom, and no less propriety, than the organs of the other. The inconceivable wisdom of an Almighty Being is displayed in the structure of the mind, which extends its powers over every branch of fcience; it is therefore a theme peculiarly worthy of attention. In the arts and sciences which have least connexion with the mind, its faculties are: still the engines which we must employ and the better we understand their nature and use, their defects and diforders, we will apply them with the greater fuccess. In the noblest arts, the mind is the subject upon which we operate.

Wise men agree, that there is but one way to the knowledge of Nature's works—the way of observation and experiment. By our constitution we have a strong propensity to trac particular facts and observations to general rules, and to apply those rules to account for other effects, or to direct us in the production of them. This procedure of the understanding is familiar in the common affairs of life, and is the means by which every real discovery in philosophy is made.

On the mind all our knowledge must depend; it therefore constitutes a proper subject for the investigation of Masons. Although by anatomical dissection and observation we may become acquainted with the body, it is by the anatomy of the mind alone we can discover its powers and principles.

To fum up the whole of this transcendent meafure of God's bounty to man, we may add, that memory, imagination, taste, reasoning, moral perception, and all the active powers of the soul, present such a vast and boundless sield for philosophical disquisition, as far exceeds human inquiry, and are peculiar mysteries, known only to Nature, and to Nature's God, to whom all are indebted for creation, preservation, and every blessing they enjoy.

From this theme we proceed to illustrate the moral advantages of Geometry:

Geometry is the first and noblest of sciences, and the basis on which the superstructure of Free-masonry is erected.

The contemplation of this science in a moral and comprehensive view, fills the mind with rapture. To the true Geometrician, the regions of matter with which he is surrounded, afford ample scope for his admiration, while they open a sublime field for his inquiry and disquisition. Every blade of grass which covers the field, every flower which blows, and every insect which wings its way in the bounds of expanded space, proves the existence of a first Cause, and yields pleasure to the intelligent mind.

The fymmetry, beauty, and order displayed in the various parts of animate and inanimate creation, are pleasing and delightful themes; and naturally lead to the fource whence the whole is derived. When we bring within the focus of the eve the variegated carpet of the terrestrial creation, and furvey the progress of the vegetative system, our admiration is justly excited. Every plant which grows, every flower that displays its beauties or breathes its sweets, affords instruction and delight. When we extend our views to the animal creation. and contemplate the varied clothing of every species, we are equally struck with astonishment! and when we trace the lines of Geometry drawn by the divine pencil in the beautiful plumage of the feathered tribe, how exalted is our conception of the heavenly work! The admirable structure of plants and animals, and the infinite number of fibres and veffels which runs through the whole, with the apt disposition of one part to another, is a perpetual subject of study to the true Geometrician; who, while he adverts to the changes which all undergo in their progress to maturity, is lost in rapture and veneration of the great cause which produced the whole, and governs the fystem.

When he descends into the bowels of the earth, and explores the kingdom of ores, minerals, and soffils, he finds the same instances of divine wisdom and goodness displayed in their formation and structure; every gem and pebble proclaim the handy-work of an Almighty Creator.

When he furveys the watery element, and directs his attention to the wonders of the deep, with all the inhabitants of the mighty ocean, he perceives emblems of the fame supreme intelligence. The scales of the largest whale, as well as the peneilled shell of the most diminutive sish, equally yield a theme for his contemplation, on which he fondly dwells, while the symmetry of their formation, and the delieacy of the tints, evince to his discerning eye the wisdom of the Divine Artist.

When he exalts his view to the more noble and elevated parts of Nature, and surveys the celestial orbs, how much greater is his astonishment! If, on the principles of Geometry and true philosophy, he contemplates the sun, the moon, the stars, the whole concave of heaven, his pride is humbled, and he is lost in awful admiration. The immense magnitude of those bodies, the regularity and rapidity of their motions, and the vast extent of space through which they move, are equally inconceivable; and, as far as they exceed human comprehension, baffle his most daring ambition, till, lost in the immensity of the theme, he sinks into his primitive insignificance.

By Geometry, then, we curiously trace Nature, through her various windings, to her most concealed recesses. By it we discover the power, the wisdom, and the goodness of the grand Artificer of the universe, and view with delight the proportions which connect this vast machine. By it we discover how the planets move in their different orbits, and demonstrate their various revolutions. By it we account for the return of seasons, and the variety of scenes which each season displays to the discerning eye. Numberless worlds are around us, all framed by the same Divine Artist, which roll through the vast expanse, and are all conducted by the same unerring law.

A furvey of Nature, and the observation of her beautiful proportions, first determined man to imitate the divine plan, and study symmetry and order. This gave rise to societies, and birth to every useful art. The architect began to design, and the plans which he laid down, improved by experience and time, produced works which have been the admiration of every age.

The Third Sections

The Third Section of this Degree has recourse to the origin of the institution, and views Masonry under two denominations, operative and speculative. These are separately considered, and the principles on which both are sounded are particularly explained. Their affinity is pointed out by allegorical figures and typical reprefentations. Here the rife of our government, or division into classes, is examined; the disposition of our rulers, supreme and fubordinate, is traced; and reasons are assigned for the establishment of several of our prefent practices. The progress made in architecture, particularly in the reign of Solomon, is remarked; the number of artists who were employed in building the temple of Jerusalem, with their privileges, are specified; the stipulated period for rewarding merit is fixed, and the inimitable moral to which that circumstance alludes, is explained; the creation of the world is described, and many particulars are recited, which have been carefully preferved among Masons, and transmitted from one age to another by oral tradition. In short, this Section contains a store of valuable knowledge, founded on reason and sacred record, both entertaining and instructive, and is well calculated to enforce the veneration due to antiquity.

We can afford little affistance, by writing, to the industrious Mason in this Section, as it can only be acquired by oral communication: for an explanation, however, of the connection between operative and speculative Masonry, we refer him to the Fourth Section of Book I. page 8.

The following Invocation of Solomon at the Dedication of the Temple of Jerusalem, particularly claims our attention in this Section:

INVOCATION.

And Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands; saying,

O Lord God, there is no God like unto thee, in heaven above, or in the earth beneath; who keepest covenant, and shewest mercy, unto thy servants; who walk before thee, with all their hearts.

Let thy Word be verified, which thou hast spoken unto David, my father.

Let all the people of the earth know, that the Lord is God; and that there is none else.

Let all the people of the earth know thy Name; and fear thee.

Let all the people of the earth know, that I have built this house, and consecrated it to thy Name.

But, will God indeed dwell upon the earth? Behold—the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain thee; how much less this house, which I have built!

Yet, have respect unto my prayer, and to my supplication, and hearken unto my cry:

May thine eyes be open toward this house, by day and by night; even toward the place of which thou hast said, My Name shall be there!

And when thy fervant, and thy people Ifrael, shall pray toward this house, hearken to their supplication; hear thou them in heaven, thy dwelling-place; and when thou hearest, forgive!

And the Lord answered, and said, I have hallowed the house which thou hast built, to put my Name there for ever; and mine eyes and mine heart shall be there perpetually.

And all the people answered, and faid—The Lord is gracious, and his mercy endureth for ever.

The Fourth Section.

The Fourth and last Section of this Degree is no less replete with useful instruction. Circumstances of real importance to the fraternity are here particularifed, and many traditional tenets and customs confirmed by facred and profane record. The celestial and terrestrial globes are confidered with accuracy; and here the accomplished gentleman may display his talents to advantage in the elucidation of the sciences, which are classed in a regular arrangement. The stimulus to preferment, and the mode of rewarding merit, are pointed out: the marks of distinction which were conferred on our ancient brethren as the reward of excellence. are explained; and the duties, as well as privileges, of the first branch of their male offspring, defined. In short, this Section contains some curious obfervations on the validity of our forms, and concludes with the most powerful incentives to the practice of piety and virtue.

As the feven liberal arts and sciences are illustrated in this Section, it may not be improper to give a short explanation of them:

Grammar teaches the proper arrangement of words, according to the idiom or dialect of any particular people; and that excellency of pronunciation, which enables us to fpeak or write a language with accuracy, agreeably to reason, and correct usage.

Rhetoric teaches us to speak copiously and fluently on any subject, not merely with propriety, but with all the advantages of force and elegance; wisely contriving to captivate the hearer by strength of argument and beauty of expression, whether it be to intreat or exhort, to admonish or applaud.

Logic teaches us to guide our reason discretionally in the general knowledge of things, and direct our inquiries after truth. It consists of a regular train of argument, whence we infer, deduce, and conclude, according to certain premises laid down, admitted, or granted; and in it are employed the faculties of conceiving, judging, reasoning, and disposing; which are naturally led on from one gradation to another, till the point in question is sinally determined.

Arithmetic teaches the powers and properties of numbers, which is variously effected, by letters, tables, figures, and instruments. By this art, reafons and demonstrations are given, for finding out any certain number, whose relation or affinity to others is already known.

Geometry treats of the powers and properties of magnitudes in general, where length, breadth, and thickness, are considered. By this science, the architect is enabled to construct his plans; the general, to arrange his soldiers; the engineer, to mark out ground for encampments; the geographer, to give us the dimensions of the world, delineate the extent of seas, and specify the divisions of empires, kingdoms, and provinces; and by it also the astronomer is enabled to make his observations, and fix the duration of times and seasons, years and cycles. In fine, Geometry is the foundation of architecture, and the root of the mathematics.

Music teaches the art of forming concords, so as to compose delightful harmony, by a proportional arrangement of acute, grave, and mixed sounds. This art, by a series of experiments, is reduced to a science, with respect to tones, and the intervals of sound only. It inquires into the nature of concords and discords, and enables us to find out the proportion between them by numbers.

Aftronomy is that art by which we are taught to read the wonderful works of the Almighty Creator in those facred pages the celestial hemisphere. Assisted by Astronomy, we observe the motions, measure the distances, comprehend the magnitudes, and calculate the periods and eclipses, of the heavenly bodies. By it we learn the use of the globes, the system of the world, and the primary law of nature. While we are employed in the study of this science, we perceive unparalleled instances of wisdom and goodness, and, through the whole of creation, trace the glorious Author by his works.

The doctrine of the Spheres, which is included in the science of Astronomy, is also particularly considered in this Section.

The globes are two artificial spherical bodies, on the convex surface of which are represented the countries, seas, and various parts of the earth; the face of the heavens, the planetary revolutions, and other important particulars. The fphere with the parts of the earth delineated on its furface, is called the terrestrial globe; and that with the constellations, and other heavenly bodies, the celestial globe. Their principal use, beside serving as maps to distinguish the outward parts of the earth, and the fituation of the fixed stars, is to illustrate and explain the phenomena arifing from the annual revolution, and the diurnal rotation, of the earth round its own axis. They are the noblest instruments for giving the most distinct idea of any problem or proposition, as well as for enabling us to solve it. Contemplating these bodies, Masons are inspired with a due reverence for the Deity and his works. and are induced to apply with diligence and attention to astronomy, geography, navigation, and all the arts dependent on them, by which fociety has been so much benefited.

Thus end the different Sections of the Second Lecture, which, with the ceremony used at opening and closing the lodge, comprehend the whole of the Second Degree of Masonry. Beside a complete theory of philosophy and physics, this Lecture contains a regular system of science, demonstrated on the clearest principles, and established on the sirmest foundation.

SECT. V.

REMARKS on the THIRD LECTURE.

In treating with propriety on any subject, it is necessary to observe a regular course; in the former Degrees we have recapitulated the contents

pigitized by Google

tents of the feveral Sections, and should willingly purfue the same plan in this Degree, did not the variety of particulars of which it is composed, render it impossible to give an abstract, without violating the rules of the Order. It may be fufficient to remark, that, in twelve Sections, of which this Lecture confifts, every circumstance that respects government and fystem, ancient lore and deep refearch, curious invention and ingenious discovery, is collected; and accurately traced; while the mode of practifing our rites on public as well as private occasions, is satisfactorily explained. Among the brethren of this Degree, the land-marks of the Order are preserved; and from them is derived that fund of information, which expert and ingenious Craftsmen only can afford, whose judgment has been matured by years and experience. To a complete knowledge of this Lecture, few attain; but it is an infallible truth, that he who acquires by merit the mark of pre-eminence to which this Degree entitles him, receives a reward which amply compensates for all his past diligence and affiduity.

From this class of the Order, the rulers of the Craft are felected; as it is only from those who are capable of giving instruction, that we can properly expect to receive it to advantage.

The First Section.

The ceremony of initiation into the Third Degree is particularly specified in this branch of the Lecture, and many useful instructions are given.

Digitized by Google

Such is the importance of this Section, that we may fafely aver, whoever is unacquainted with it, is ill-qualified to act as a ruler or governor of the work of Masonry.

Prayer at Initiation into the Third Degree.

O Lord, direct us to know and ferve thee aright! prosper our laudable undertakings! and grant that, as we increase in knowledge, we may improve in virtue, and still farther promote thy honour and glory! Amen.

Charge at Initiation into the Third Degree.

BROTHER,

Your zeal for the inftitution of Free-masonry, the progress which you have made in the art, and your conformity to the general regulations, have pointed you out as a proper object of our favour and esteem.

In the character of a Master-mason, you are henceforth authorised to correct the errors and irregularities of brethren and fellows, and guard them against a breach of fidelity. To improve the morals and correct the manners of men in society, must be your constant care; with this view, therefore, you are always to recommend to inferiors, obedience and submission; to equals, courtesy and affability; to superiors, kindness and condescension. Universal benevolence you are to inculcate; and, by the regularity of your own behaviour, afford the best example for the conduct of others. The motent land-marks of the Order, which are here intrusted to your care, you are to preserve facred and inviolable; and never suffer an infringement of our rites, or a deviation from established usage and custom.

Duty, honour, and gratitude, now bind you to be faithful to every trust; to support with becoming dignity your new character; and to enforce, by example and precept, the tenets of the system. Let no motive, therefore, make you swerve from your duty, violate your vows, or betray your trust; but be true and faithful, and imitate the example of that celebrated artist whom you have once represented. By this exemplary conduct you will convince the world, that merit has been the title to our privileges; and that, on you, our favours have not been undeservedly bestowed.

The Second Section.

The Second Section is an introduction to the proceedings of the Chapter of Master-masons, and illustrates several points which are well known to experienced Craftsmen. It investigates, in the ceremony of opening the Chapter, some important circumstances in the two preceding Degrees.

The Third Section.

The Third Section commences the historical traditions of the Order; which are chiefly collected from facred record, and other authentic documents.

The Fourth Section.

The Fourth Section farther illustrates the historical traditions of the Order; and presents to view a finished picture of the utmost consequence to the fraternity.

The Fifth Section.

The Fifth Section continues the explanation of the historical traditions of the Order.

The Sixth Section.

The Sixth Section concludes the historical traditions of the Order.

The Seventh Section.

The Seventh Section illustrates the hieroglyphical emblems restricted to the Third Degree, and inculcates many useful lessons, which are intended to extend knowledge, and promote virtue.

This Section is indifferentiably necessary to be understood by every Master of the lodge.

The Eighth Section.

The Eighth Section treats of the government of the fraternity, and the disposition of our rulers, supreme and subordinate. It is generally rehearsed at installations.

The Ninth Section *.

The Ninth Section recites the qualifications of our rulers; and illustrates the ceremony of installation in the Grand Lodge, as well as in the private affemblies of Masons.

* For many particulars to which this and the two following Sections relate, see the Ceremonies of Constitution, Consecration, Iastallation, &c. annexed to these Remarks.

The Tenth Section.

The Tenth Section comprehends the ceremonies of constitution and consecration, and a variety of particulars explanatory of those ceremonies.

The Eleventh Section.

The Eleventh Section illustrates the ceremonies used at laying the foundation-stones of churches, chapels, palaces, hospitals, &c. also the ceremonies observed at the Dedication of the Lodge, and at the Interment of Master-Masons.

The Twelfth Section.

The Twelfth Section contains a recapitulation of the effential points of the Lectures in all the Degrees, and corroborates the whole by infallible testimony.

Having thus given a general fummary of the Lectures restricted to the three Degrees of the Order, and made such remarks on each Degree as might illustrate the subjects treated, little farther can be wanted to encourage the zealous Mason to persevere in his researches. He who has traced the Art in a regular progress from the commencement of the First to the conclusion of the Third Degree, according to the plan here laid down, must have amassed an ample store of knowledge, and will restect with pleasure on the good effects of his past diligence and attention. By applying the improvements he has made to the general advantage of society, he will secure to himself the veneration of Masons, and the approbation of all good men.

SECT. VI.

Of the Ancient Ceremonies of the Order.

WE shall now proceed to illustrate the Ancient Ceremonies of the Order, particularly those observed at the Constitution and Consecration of the Lodge, and at the Installation of Officers, with the usual charges delivered on those occasions. We shall likewise annex an explanation of the Ceremonies used at laying the Foundation-Stones of Public Structures, at the Dedication of Public Halls, and at Funerals; and close this part of the treatise with the Funeral Service.

The Manner of constituting the Lodge, including the Ceremony of Consecration, Sc.

Any number of Master-masons, not under seven, resolved to form a new Lodge, must apply, by petition *, to the Grand Master; setting forth, That they are regular + masons, and are at pre-

*The mode of applying by petition to the Grand Master for a warrant to meet as a regular lodge, commenced only in the year 1718; previous to that time, lodges were empowered, by inherent pivileges vested in the fraterinty at large, to meet and act occasionally under the direction of some able architect, and the acting magittate of the country; and the proceedings of those meetings being approved by the majority of the brethren convened at another lodge affembled in the same district, were deemed constitutional. By such an inherent authority the Lodge of Antiquity in London now acts, having no warrant from the Grand Lodge, but an authority traced from time immemorial, which has been long and universally admitted and acknowledged by the whole fraternity, and which no warrant or other instrument of any particular masonic jurisdiction can possibly supertede.

† By regular Masons is to be understood persons initiated into Masonry in a regular lodge, acting agreeably to the Constitutions of the Order. fent, or have been, members of a regular lodge *:
That, having the prosperity of the fraternity at heart, they are willing to exert their best endeavours to promote and diffuse the genuine prin-4 ciples of the Art; and for the conveniency of their respective dwellings, and other good reafons, have agreed to form a new Lodge, to be : That, in consequence of this ∢ named resolution, they pray for a warrant of constitu-4 tion, to empower them to meet as a regular lodge, of every month, at on the s and then and there to discharge the duties of Mafonry in a regular and constitutional manner, according to the original forms of the Order, and the laws of the Grand Lodge: That they have nominated and do recommend A. B. to be the first Master, and C. D. to be the first Senior Warden, and E. F. to be the first Junior Warden, of the faid Lodge: That, the prayer of the petition being granted, they promife strict confor-mity to every regular edict and command of the Grand Master, and to all the constitutional laws and regulations of the Grand Lodge.

This petition, being signed by at least seven regular Masons, and recommended by the Masters of three regular lodges adjacent to the place where the new Lodge is to be formed, is delivered to the Grand Secretary; who, on presenting it to the Grand Master, or in his absence to the Deputy, and its being approved, is ordered to grant a dispensation, authorising the brethren specified in the petition to assemble as Masons in open lodge for forty days, and practife the rites of the Order, until such time as a constitution can be obtained by command of the Grand Lodge, or that authority be recalled.

* A Lodge regularly conftituted, or legally warranted by the Grand Lodge of the country to act.

In consequence of this dispensation, the lodge is formed at the place specified; and its transactions being properly recorded, are valid for the time being, provided they are afterwards approved by the brethren convened at the time of Constitution.

When the Grand Lodge has fignified its approbation of the new Lodge, and the Grand Master is thoroughly satisfied of the truth of the allegations set forth in the petition, he appoints a day and hour for constituting [and consecrating *] the new Lodge; and for installing the Master, Wardens, and Officers.

If the Grand Master in person attend the ceremony, the lodge is said to be constituted in AMPLE FORM; if the Deputy Grand Master acts as Grand Master, it is said to be constituted in DUE FORM; and if the power of persorming the ceremony be vested in the Master of a private lodge, it is said to be constituted in FORM.

- Ceremony of Constitution.

On the day and hour appointed, the Grand Master and his Officers, or the Master and Officers of any private lodge authorised by the Grand Master for that purpose, meet in a convenient room; and, when properly clothed, walk in procession to the lodge-room, where the usual ceremonies being obferved, the lodge is opened by the Grand Master, or Master in the Chair, in all the Degrees of the Order. After a short praver, an ode in honour of Masonry is sung. The Grand Master, or Master in the Chair, is informed by the Grand Secretary, or his locum tenens, 'That the brethren then present [naming them], being duly instructed in the mysteries of the Art, desire to be formed into a new Lodge, under the Grand Mafter's patronage; that a difpensation has been granted to them for the purpose; and that by virtue of this sauthority they had affembled as regular Masons, and duly recorded their proceedings.' The petition is read, as is also the dispensation, and the warrant or charter of constitution, which had been granted in confequence of it. The minutes of the new Lodge while under dispensation are likewise read, and being approved, are declared to be regular, valid, and conftitutional. The Grand Mafter, or Master in the Chair, then takes the warrant in his hand, and requests the brethren of the new Lodge, publicly to fignify their approbation or difapprobation of the Officers who are nominated in the warrant to prefide over them. This being fignified accordingly, an anthem is fung, and an oration on the nature and defign of the Inflitution is delivered.

* This is too frequently emitted.

E 3

The ceremony of Confecration fucceeds, which is never to be used but when it is specially ordered.

Ceremony of Confecration.

The Grand Master and his Officers, accompanied by fome dignified Clergyman, having taken their ftations, and the lodge, which is placed in the centre, being covered with white fatin, the cercmony of Confecration commences. All devoutly kneel, and the preparatory prayer is rehearfed. The chaplain or orator, produces his authority *, and being properly affisted, proceeds to confecrate +. Solemn music is introduced, while the necessary preparations are making. The lodge being then uncovered, the first clause of the consecration prayer is rehearfed, all devoutly kneeling. The response being made, GLORY TO GOD ON HIGH, incento is feattered over the lodge, and the grand honours are given. The Invocation is then pronounced, with the honours; after which the confecration prayer is concluded, and the response repeated as before, together with the honours. The lodge being again covered, all the brethren rife up, folemn music is refumed, a blessing is given, and the response made as before, accompanied with the honours. An anthem is then fung, and the brethren of the new Lodge having advanced according to rank, and offered homage to the Grand Master, the ceremony of consecration ends.

The above ceremony being finished, the Grand Master advances to the pedestal, and constitutes the new Lodge in the following form:

* The conflitution roll.

+ Corn, wine, and oil, are the elements of confecration.

In the elevated character of Grand Master, to which the suffrages of my brethren have raised

• me, I invoke the NAME of the MOST HIGH, to whom be glory and honour! May he be with you at your beginning, strengthen you in the principles of our royal Art, prosper you with all success, and direct your zealous efforts to the good of the Craft! By the divine aid, I constitute and form you, my good brethren, masters and fellows, into a regular Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons; and henceforth empower you to act in conformity to the rites of our venerable Order, and the charges of our ancient fraternity. May God be with you! Amen.

Flourish with drums and trumpets.

The grand honours are then given; and the ceremony of Installation succeeds.

Ceremony of Installation.

The Grand Master * asks his Deputy, Whether he has examined the Master nominated in the warrant, and finds him well-skilled in the noble science and royal Art? The Deputy having answered in the affirmative +, by the Grand Master's order takes the candidate from among his fellows, and presents him at the pedestal; saying,
Most worshipful Grand Master, [or right worshipful, as it happens,] I present my worthy

• In this, and fimilar instances, where the Grand Master is specified as acting, may be understood any Master of the lodge who performs the ceremony.

+ A private examination is always understood to precede the installation of every Officer.

- 6 brother A. B. to be installed Master of the Lodge.
- I find him to be of good morals, of great skill, .
- f true and trufty, and a lover of the whole frater-
- inity, wherefoever dispersed over the face of the
- earth; I doubt not therefore that he will discharge
- the duties of the office with fidelity.'

The Grand Master then orders a summary of the Ancient Charges * to be read by the Grand Secretary [or acting Secretary] to the Master elect.

- As the curious reader may wish to know the ancient charges that were used on this occasion, we shall here insert them verbatim, as they are contained in a MS. in possession of the Lodge of Antiquity in London, written in the reign of James the Second.
- ***** And furthermore, at diverse assemblies, have been put and ordained diverse crastics by the best advise of magistrates and fellows, Tune unus ex senioribus tenet librum, et illi ponent manum suam super librum.
- Every man that is a Mason take good heed to these charges (wee pray), that if any man find himselfe guilty of any of these charges, that he may amend himselfe, or principally for dread of God, you that be charged, take good heed that you keepe all these charges well, for it is a great evill for a man to forswear himselfe upon a book.
- 'The first charge is, That yee shall be true men to God and the holy church, and to use no error or hereshe by your understanding and by wise men's teaching. Allo,
- Secondly, That yee shall be true liege men to the King of England, without treason or any salshood, and that yee know no treasson or treachery, but yee shall give knowledge thereof to the King, or to his counsell; allso yee shall be true one to another, (that is to say) every Mason of the crast that is Mason allowed, yee shall doe to him as yee would be done unto yourselfe.
- *Thirdly, And yee shall keepe truely all the counsell that ought to be kept in the way of Masonhood, and all the counsell of the bodge of of the chamber.—Allio, that yee shall be no thiese nor thieves to your knowledge free: that yee shall be true to the king, lord, or master that yee serve, and truely to see and worke for his advantage.
- Fourthly, Yee shall call all Masons your fellows, or your bre thren, and no other namés.

I. You agree to be a good man and true, and frielly to obey the moral law.

'Fifthly, Yee shall not take your sellow's wife in villany, nor deflower his daughter or servant, nor put him to no disworship.

* Sixthly, You shall truely pay for your meat or drinke wherefoever * yee goe, to table or bord. Alifo yee shall doe no villany there, * whereby the craft or science may be standered.

"There be the charges general to every true Mafon, both Mafters and fellows."

 Now will I rehearfe other charges fingle for Mafens allowed or faccepted.

'Fift, That no Maton take on him no lord's worke, nor any other man's, unlets he know himfelfe well able to perform the worke, to that the craft have no flunder.

that the eraft have no flander.
 Secondly, Alifo, that no mafter take worke but that he take rea fonable pay for itt; to that the lord may be truely ferved, and the "mafter to live honeftly, and to pay his fellows truely. And that no mafter or fellow fup, lant others of their worke; (that is to fay) that fif he bath taken a worke, or elfe stand master of any worke, that he shall not put him out, unless he be unable of cunning to make an end of his worke. And no mafter nor fellow shall take no apprintice for less than seaven years. And that the apprintice he sreeborn, and of limbs whole as a man ought to be, and no baffard.

And that no mafter or fellow take no allowance to be made Mafon without the affent of his fellows, at the least fix or feaven.

* Thirdly, That he that be made he able in all degrees; that is, * free-born, of a good kindred, true, and no bondsman, and that he * have his right limbs as a man ought to have.

'Fourthly, That a mafter take no apprintice without he have oc-

'Fifthly, That no mafter or fellow put away any lord's worke to - taske that ought to be journey-worke.

*Sixthly, That every mafter give pay to his fellows and fervants as they may deferve, foe that he be not defamed with fulfe workeing. And that none flander another behind his backe, to make him loofe his good name.

Seaventhly, That no fellow in the house or abroad answear antother ungodly or reproveablely without a cause.

'Eighthly, That every mafter-mason doe reverence his elder; and that a mason be no common plaier at the cards, dice, or hazard; 'nor at any other unlawful plaies, through the which the science and craft may be dishonoured and slandered.

- 'II. You agree to be a peaceable subject, and cheerfully to conform to the laws of the country in which you reside.
- III. You promife, not to be concerned in plots or conspiracies against government, but patiently submit to the decisions of the supreme legislature.
- IV. You agree to pay a proper respect to the civil magistrate, to work diligently, live creditably, and act honourably by all men.
- 'Ninthly, That no fellow goe into the town by night, except he have a fellow with him, who may bear him record that he was in an honest place.
- * Tenthly, That every mafter and fellow shall come to the affem-* blie, if itt be within fifty miles of him, if he have any warning.

  * And if he have trespassed against the crast, to abide the award of * masters and fellows.

- Eleventhly, That every mafter-mason and sellow that hath trefpassed against the crast shall stand to the correction of other masters, and sellows to make him accord; and if they cannot accord, to go to the common law.
- Twelvethly, That a mafter or fellow make not a mould-ffone.
   fquare, nor rule, to no lowen, nor let no lowen works within their lodge, nor without, to mould ffone.
- 'Thirteenthly, That every Mason receive and cherish strange sel'lows when they come over the countrie, and set them on worke is
  'they will worke, as the manner is; (that is to say) if the Mason
  'have any mould-stone in his place, he shall give him a mould-stone,
  'and sett him on worke; and if he have none, the Mason shall refresh.
  'him with money unto the next lodge.
  - ' Fourteenthly, That every Mason shall trucly serve his master for his pay.
  - 'Fifteenthly, That every mafter shall truely make an end of his worke, taske or journey, whithersoe it be.
- These be all the charges and covenants that ought to be-read at the installment of master, or making of a Free-mason or Free-mason. The almighty God of Jacob, who ever have you and med in his keeping, bless us now and ever. Amen.

- V. You agree to hold in veneration the original rulers and patrons of the Order of Masonry, and their regular successors, supreme and sub-cordinate, according to their stations; and to-submit to the award and resolutions of your brethren in general chapter convened, in every case consistent with the constitutions of the Order.
- VI. You agree to avoid private piques and quarrels, and to guard against intemperance and excess.
- VII. You agree to be cautious in carriage and behaviour, courteous to your brethren, and faithful to the lodge.
- VIII. You promise to respect genuine brethren, and to discountenance impostors, and all dissensers from the original plan of the Institution.
- IX. You agree to promote the general good of fociety, to cultivate the focial virtues, and to propagate the knowledge of the Art of Masonry, as far as your influence and ability can extend?

On the Master Elect fignifying his assent to these Charges, the Secretary proceeds to read the sollowing Regulations:

- I. You admit that it is not in the power of any man, or body of men, to make innovation in the body of Masonry.
- II. You promife to pay homage to the Grand Master for the time being, and to his Officers, when duly installed; and strictly to conform to every edict of the Grand Lodge, or General Assembly of Masons, that is not subversive of the principles and groundwork of Masonry.

III. You promife regularly to attend the committees and communications of the Grand Lodge, on receiving proper notice; and to pay obedience to the duties of the Order on all convenient occasions.

• IV. You admit that no new lodge can be formed • without permission of the Grand Master or his • Deputy; nor any countenance given to any irregu-• lar lodge, or to any person clandestinely initiated • therein.

V. You admit that no person can be initiated into Masonry in, or admitted member of, a regular lodge, without previous notice, and due inquiry into his character.

VI. You agree that no visitors shall be received into the lodge without passing under due examination, and producing proper vouchers of a regular initiation.

'These are the Regulations of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons.'

The Grand Master then addresses the Master Elect in the following manner: 'Do you submit to those Charges, and promise to support those 'Regulations, as Masters have done in all ages before you?'

Having fignified his cordial submission, the Grand Master thus salutes him:

Brother A. B., in consequence of your cheerful conformity to the Charges and Regulations of the Order, I approve of you as Master of the Lodge, not doubting of your care, skill, and capacity.'

The new Master is then conducted to an adjacent room, where he is regularly installed, and bound to his trust in ancient form, in the presence of three installed Masters.

On his return to the Lodge, the new Master is conducted by the [Grand] Stewards to the left hand of the Grand Master, where he is invested with the badge of his office, and the warrant of constitution is delivered over to him in form; after which, the Sacred Law, with the square and compasses, the constitutions, the minute-book, the rule and line, the trowel, the chisel, the mallet, the moveable and immoveable jewels, and all the infignia of his different Ossicers, are separately presented to him, with suitable charges to each *. He is then chaired

* The fame ceremony and charges attend every fucceeding infallation.

For the accommodation of brethren, whose distance from the metropolis may deprive them of gaining the necessary instruction in this important rite, we shall here insert a few moral observations on the instruments of Masonry which are usually presented to the Master of the Ledge at installation.

The various implements of the profession, emblematical of our conduct in life, are upon this occasion carefully enumerated.

"The Rule directs, that we should punctually observe our duty; press forward in the path of virtue, and neither inclining to the right not to the left, in all our actions have eternity in view.

"The Line teaches the criterion of moral rectitude, to avoid diffimulation in convertation and action, and to direct our steps in the path which leads to immortality.

"The Trowel teaches, that nothing can be united without proper cement, and that the perfection of the building must depend on the fuitable disposition of the cement; so Charity, the bond of perfection and social union, must link separate minds and separate interests; that, like the radii of a circle which extend from the centre to every part of the circumserence, the principle of universal benevolence may be diffused to every member of the community.

amidst the acclamations of the brethren, after which he returns his becoming acknowledgments to the Grand Master, and the acting Officers, in order. The members of the new Lodge then advance in procession, pay due homage to the new Master, and signify their subjection and obe-

"The Chief demonstrates the advantages of discipline and education. The mind, like the diamond, in its original state, is unpolished; but as the effects of the chifel on the external coat soon prefents to view the latent beauties of the diamond, so education discovers the latent virtues of the mind, and draws them south to range the large field of matter and space, in order to display the summit of human knowledge, our duty to God, and to man.

"The Plumb admonithes to walk upright in our flation, to hold the feale of juffice in equal poife, to observe the just medium between intemperance and pleasure, and to make our passions and prejudices coincide with the line of our duty.

"The Level demonstrates, that we are descended from the same stock, partake of the same nature, and share the same hope; and that though distinctions among men are necessary to preserve subordination, yet no eminence of station can make us forget that we are brethren, and that he who is placed on the lowest spoke of fortune's wheel, may be entitled to our regard; because a time will come, and the wifest knows not how soon, when all distinctions, but that of goodness, shall cease; and death, the grand levelier of human greatness, reduce us to the same state.

"The Square teaches us to regulate our actions by rule and line, and to harmonife our conduct by the principles of morality and virtue.

"The Compeffer teach to limit our duty in every flation, that, rifing to eminence by merit, we may live respected, and die regretted

"The Mullet teaches to lop off excrefeences, and fmooth furfaces; or, in other words, to correct irregularities, and reduce man to a proper level; fo that, by quiet deportment, he may, in the school of discipline, learn to be content. What the Mallet is to the workman, enlightened reason is to the passions; it curbs ambition, depresse envy, moderates anger, and encourages good dispositions; whence arise that comely order, Which nothing earthly gives, or can destroy, The foul's calm funshine, and the heart-feit jog." dience by the usual salutations in the three Designees.

This ceremony being concluded, the new Master enters immediately on the duties of his office, by appointing his Wardens, who are separately conducted to the pedestal, presented to the Grand Master, and installed * by the Grand Wardens; after which he † proceeds to invest them with their badges of office in the following manner:

- Grother C. D. I appoint you Senior Warden of the lodge; and invest you with the ensign of office ‡. Your regular attendance on our stated meetings is essentially necessary; as in my abfence you are to govern the lodge, and in my presence to assist me in the government of it. I sirmly rely on your knowledge of the Art, and attachment to the lodge, for the faithful discharge of the duties of the office.
  - Grother E. F. I appoint you Junior Warden of the lodge; and invest you with the badge of office t. To you I entrust the examination of visitors, and the introduction of candidates. Your regular and punctual attendance is particularly requested; and I have no doubt that you will faithfully execute every duty which you owe to your present appointment.

* The Master and Wardens are installed as the representatives of all the Master Masons who are absent.

† When the Grand Master and his Officers attend to constitute a new Lodge, the D. G. M. usually invests the Master, the Grand Wardens invest the Wardens, the Grand Treasurer and Grand Secretary invest the Treasurer and Secretary, and the Grand Stewards the Stewards.

# Here specify its moral excellence.

The new Master then addresses the Wardens together:

- Brother Wardens, you are both too expert in the principles of Masonry, to require much in-
- formation in the duties of your respective offices:
- fuffice it to mention, that what you have feen
- praife-worthy in others, it is expected you will
- carefully imitate; and what in them to you may
- have appeared defective, you will in yourselves
- amend. Good order and regularity you must en-
- deavour to promote; and, by a due regard to the
- laws in your own conduct, enforce obedience to
- them in the conduct of others.'

The Wardens retiring to their feats, the Treasurer * is next invested. The Secretary is then called to the pedestal, and invested with the jewel of his office; upon which the new Master addresses him:

- I appoint you, Brother G. H., Secretary of the lodge. It is your province to record the
- minutes, fettle the accounts, and iffue out the
- fummons for the regular meetings. Your good
- inclinations to Masonry and the lodge will, no
- doubt, induce you to discharge the duties of the
- office with fidelity, and by so doing you will merit the esteem and applause of your brethren.
- This officer is not appointed by the Mafter, but elected by the lodge.

The Deacons * are then named, and invested; on which the Master addresses them as follows:

Grothers I. K. and L. M. I appoint you Deacons of the lodge. It is your province to attend on the Master, and to assist the Wardens in the active duties of the lodge; such as in the reception of candidates into the different Degrees, and in the immediate practice of our rites. Those columns +, the badges of your office, I entrust to your care, not doubting your vigilance and attention.

The Stewards ‡ are next called up, and invested; upon which the following charge is delivered to them by the new Master:

Brothers N. O. and P. Q. I appoint you Stewards of the lodge. The duties of your office are, to introduce vifitors, and fee that they are properly accommodated; to collect fubscriptions and other fees, and keep an exact account of the lodge expences. Your regular and early attendance will afford the best proof of your zeal and attachment.

The new Master then appoints the Tyler, and delivers over to him the instrument of his office, with a short charge on the occasion; after which he addresses the Members of the lodge as follows:

* The Deacons are the acting Deputies of the Wardens, and Reprefentatives of all the abtent Craftimen.

† When the work of Majorry in the lodge is carrying on, the column of the Senior Deacon is raifed,; when the lodge is at refreshment the column of the Junior Deacon is raifed

‡ The Stewards are affiftants to the Deacons, and the Reprefentatives of all the absent Entered Apprentices.

BRETHREN,

Such is the nature of our constitution, that as some must of necessity rule and teach, so others must of course learn to submit and obey.

Humility in both, is an effential duty. The brethren whom I have appointed to affift me in the government of the lodge, are too well acquainted with the principles of Masonry, and the rules of good manners, to extend the power with which they are entrusted; and you are too sensible of the propriety of their appointment, and of too generous dispositions, to envy their preferment.

From the knowledge I have of both Officers and Members, I trust that we shall have but one aim-to please each other, and unite in the great design of communicating happiness.

The Grand Master gives the Brethren joy of their Ossicers, recommends harmony, and expresses a wish that the only contention in the lodge may be, a generous emulation to vie in cultivating the royal Art, and the moral virtues. The Lodge then joins in the general salute, and the newly installed Master returns thanks to the Grand Master for the honour of the constitution.

The Grand Secretary proclaims the new Lodge three times, with the honours of Masonry, and a slourish of horns each time: after which the Grand Master orders the lodge to be registered in the Grand Lodge books, and the Grand Secretary to notify the same to the regular lodges.

A fong * with a chorus, accompanied by the music, concludes the ceremony of Constitution,

* Many of the anthems and fongs used on this and other occafions, are inferred at the end of the volume. and the lodge is closed with the usual solemnities in the three Degrees by the Grand Master and his Officers; after which the procession is resumed, and returns to the apartment whence it set out.

This is the usual ceremony at the Constitution of a new Lodge, which the Grand Master may abridge, or extend, at pleasure; but the material points are on no account to be omitted.

The Ceremony observed at laying the Foundation-Stones of Public Structures.

This ceremony is conducted by the Grand Master and his Officers, affisted by the Members of the Grand Lodge only. No private mason, or inferior officer of any lodge, can be admitted to join in the ceremony. Provincial Grand Masters are authorised to execute this duty in their separate provinces, when they are accompanied by their Officers, and the Master and Wardens of the regular lodges under their jurisdiction; but the Chief Magistrate and civil officers of the place where the building is to be erected, must be invited to attend on the occasion. The ceremony is thus conducted:

At the time appointed, the Grand Lodge is convened at some convenient place approved by the Grand Master. A band of martial music is provided, and the brethren appear in the insignia of the Order, genteelly dressed, with white gloves and aprons. The lodge being opened by the Grand Master, and the rules for regulating the procession to and from the place where the ceremony is to be performed, rehearfed by the Grand Secretary, the necessary cautions are given from the chair, and the lodge is adjourned; after which the procession sets out in the following order:

Two Tylers, with drawn fwords;

Mufic;

Members of the Grand Lodge, two and two;

A Tyler, in his uniform;

Paft Grand Stewards;

Grand Tyler;

Prefent Grand Stewards, with white rods; Secretary of the Stewards' Lodge; Wardens of the Stewards' Lodge; Master of the Stewards' Lodge;

> Choiristers; Architect;

Sword-bearer, with the fword of state; Grand Secretary, with his bag; Grand Treasurer, with his staff;

The Bible *, Square, and Compaffes, on a crimfon velvet cushion, carried by the Master of a Lodge, supposted by two Stewards with white rods:

Grand Chaplain;

Provincial Grand Masters;

Past Grand Wardens;

Past Deputy Grand Masters;

Past Grand Masters;

Chief Magistrate and civil Officers of the Place;

Grand Wardens;

Deputy Grand Master;
The Constitutions carried by the Master of the oldest Lodge †;
GRAND MASTER.

Two Stewards close the procession.

Where the Bible is mentioned, it applies to whatever is confidered to be the law of God.

† In allusion to the Constitutions of the Order being originally, wested in that Officer; who, in case of the resignation, or death, of the Grand Master, is considered for the time being as the acting Governor and Director of the fraternity.

A triumphal arch is usually erected at the place. where the ceremony is to be performed, with proper scaffolding for the reception of the brethren. The procession passes through the arch, and the brethren repair to their stands, while the Grand Master and his Officers take their places on a temporary platform, covered with carpet; an ode on Masonry is sung, and the Grand Master having commanded filence, the necessary preparations are made for laying the Stone; on which is engraved the year of our Lord and of Masonry, the name of the reigning Sovereign, and the name, titles, &c. of the Grand Master. The upper part of the Stone * being raifed by an engine erected for the purpose, the Grand Charlain or Orator repeats a short prayer; and the Grand Treasurer having, by the Grand Master's command, placed on the lower part of the Stone various coin and medals of the present reign, solemn music is introduced, an anthem fung, and the upper part of the stone let down into its place, and properly fixed; upon which the Grand Master descends to the Stone, and gives three knocks with his mallet, amidst the acclamations of the spectators. The Grand Master then delivers over to the Architect the various implements of architecture, intrusting him with the superintendance and direction of the work; after which he re-ascends the platform, and an oration fuitable to the occafion is delivered. A voluntary subscription is then made for the workmen, and the fum collected placed upon the Stone by the Grand Treasurer.

* The foundation-stone is usually composed of two separate pieces, hollow in the centre, which when united appear as one stone.

fong in honour of Masonry concludes the ceremony, after which the procession returns to the place whence it set out, and the lodge is closed by the Grand Wardens.

The Ceremony observed at the Dedication of Masons' Halls.

On the day appointed for the celebration of the ceremony of Dedication, the Grand Master and his Officers, accompanied by all the Brethren who are Members of the Grand Lodge, meet in a convenient room adjoining to the place where the ceremony is to be performed, and the Grand Lodge is opened in ample form in all the Degrees. The order of procession being read by the Grand Secretary, and a general charge respecting propriety of behaviour given by the Deputy Grand Master, the lodge is adjourned, and the procession formed as follows:

Two Tylers, with drawn fwords;

Mufic;

Members of the Grand Lodge, two and two;

A Tyler in his uniform;

Paft Grand Stewards;

Grand Tyler;

Prefent Grand Stewards, with white rods;

Secretary of the Stewards' Lodge;

Wardens of the Stewards' Lodge;

Master of the Stewards' Lodg:;

Choirifters;

One Brother carrying a gold Pitcher, containing corn; Two Brethren, with filver Pitchers, containing wine and oil; Four Tylers, carrying the Lodge, covered with white fattin; Architect;

Grand Swordbearer, with fword of state; Grand Secretary, with his bag; Grand Treasurer, with his staff; Bible, Square, and Compasses, on a crimson velvet cushion, carried by a Master of the Lodge, who is supported by two Stewards;
Grand Chaplain;
Provincial Grand Masters;
Past Grand Wardens;
Past Deputy Grand Masters;
Past Officers of the Place;
Two large lights;
Grand Wardens;
One large light;
Deputy Grand Master;
Constitutions carried by the Master of the oldest Lodge *;

GRAND MASTER;
Two Stewards close the procession.

The Ladies are then introduced, and the musicians repair to their station. On the procession reaching the Grand Master's chair, the Grand Officers are feparately proclaimed according to rank, as they arrive at that station; and on the Grand Master's being proclaimed, the music strikes up, and continues during the procession three times round the Hall. The lodge is then placed in the centre, on a crimfon velvet couch; and the Grand Master having taken the chair, under a canopy of state, the Grand Officers, and the Master and Wardens of the Lodges, repair to the places which have been previously prepared for their reception: The three great lights, and the gold and filver pitchers, with the corn, wine, and oil, are placed on the lodge, at the head of which stands the pedestal, on which is laid a crimson velvet cushion, with the law open, the Square and Compasses put thereon, and the Constitution roll. An anthem is then fung, and an exordium on Mafonry given; after which the Architect, addressing the Grand Master, returns thanks for the honour conferred on him, and surrenders up the implements which had been entrusted to his care at laying the Foundation-Stone. The Grand Master expresses his approbation of the Architect's conduct; an ode in honour of Masonry is sung, accompanied by the band; and the ladies retire, as do also such of the musicians as are not Masons.

* See the note in p. 93.

The lodge is then tiled, and the business of M2fonry refumed. The Grand Secretary informs the Grand Master, that it is the design of the fraternity to have the Hall dedicated to Masonry; he then orders the Grand Officers to affift in the ceremony, during which the organ continues playing folemn music, excepting only at the intervals of Dedication. The lodge being uncovered, the first procession is made round it, and the Grand Master having reached the East, the organ is filent, and he proclaims the Hall duly dedicated to MASONRY, IN THE NAME OF THE GREAT JEHOVAH, TO WHOM BE ALL GLORY AND HONOUR; upon which the Chaplain strews corn over the lodge. The organ plays, and the fecond procession is made round the lodge, when, on the Grand Master's arrival at the East, the organ is filent, and he declares the Hall dedicated, as before, to VIRTUE; on which the Chaplain sprinkles wine on the lodge. The organ plays, and the third procession is made round the lodge, when, the Grand Master having reached the East, and the music being silent, the Hall is dedicated to Universal Benevolence; upon which the Chaplain dips his fingers in the oil, and sprinkles it over the lodge; and at each period of Dedication the grand honours are given. A solemn invocation is then made, and an anthem sung; after which, the lodge being covered, the Grand Master retires to his chair, and the business of Masonry is adjourned.

The ladies are again introduced; an ode for the occasion is performed; and an oration delivered by the Grand Chaplain, which is succeeded by an anthem. Donations for the charity are then collected, and the grand procession is resumed. After marching three times round the Hall, preceded by the Tylers carrying the lodge as at entrance, and the music continuing to play a grand piece, the brethren return to the place whence they set out, where the laws of the Order being reheatsed, the Grand Lodge is closed in ample form in all the Degrees.

The Ceremony observed at Funerals, according to ancient Custom: with the Service used on that Occasion.

No Mason can be interred with the formalities of the Order, unless it be at his own special request, communicated to the Master of the lodge of which he died a member, foreigners and sojourners excepted; nor unless he has been advanced to the Third Degree of Masonry, from which restriction there can be no exception. Fellow-crafts, or apprentices, are not entitled to the funeral obsequies. The Master of the lodge having received notice, of a Master-mason's death, and of his request to be interred with the ceremonies of the Order, he fixes the day and hour for the funeral, and issues his command to summon the lodge; if brethren from other lodges are expected to attend, he must make application through the Grand Secretary to the Grand Master, or his Deputy, for a dispensation, to enable him to supply the place of the Grand Master at such suneral, and to regulate the procession, which is to be solely under his direction; and all the brethren present must be properly clothed *.

By an express law of the Grand Lodge, it is enacted, That no regular Mason do attend any funeral, or other public procession, clothed with the badges and ensigns of the Order, unless a dispensation for that purpose has been obtained from the Grand Master, or his Deputy: under the penalty of forseiting all the rights and privileges of the Society; and of being deprived of the benefit of the general fund of charity, should he be reduced to want.

Dispensations for public processions are seldom granted but upon very particular occasions; it cannot, therefore, be thought that these will be very frequent, or that regular Masons will be induced to infringe an established law, by attending those which are not properly authorised. Many public parades under this character have been made of late years; but these have not received the sanction of the Grand Master, or the countenance of any regular. Mason conversant with the laws of the society. Of this the Public may be convinced, when they advert that the reputation of the whole fraternity would be at risk by irregularity on such an occasion. It cannot be imagined, that the Grand Master, who is generally of noble birth, would either so far degrade the dignity of his office, or the character of the Society at large, as to grant a dispensation for a public procession upon so tristing an occasion as a private benefit at a

+ By public procession is meant a general convention of Masons for the purpose of making a public appearance.

The dispensation being obtained, the Master may invite as many lodges as he thinks proper, and the members of those lodges may accompany playhouse, tea-garden, or other place of public resert; where neither the interest of the fraternity, nor the general good, can be concerned; and which, though it may be of some private advantage, can never redound to the credit of Masonry, or the honour of its patrons.

The above law was planned to put a stop to mixed and irregular conventions of Masons, and to prevent them from exposing to derision the infignia of the Order, by pavading through the streets on unimportant occasions; it was not intended, however, to reftrict the privileges of any regular lodge, or to encreach on the legal prerogative of any inftalled Mafter. By the univerfal practice of Masons, every regular lodge is authorised by the constitution to all on fuch occasions, when limited to its own members, if the Society at large be not dishonoured; and every installed Matter is sufficiently empowered by the constitution, without any other authority, to convene and govern his own lodge on any emergency, at, the funeral of its own members, or on any occation in which the honour of the Society is concerned, he being all vays amenable to the Grand Lodge for misconduct; but when brethren from other lodges are convened, who are not subject to his control, in that case a particular dispensation is required from the Grand Master, or his Deputy, who are the only general Directors of Maions. The Mafter of the lodge will never iffue a fummons for a public appearance of the lodge on a trifling occasion, or without approbation, will, knowing that he is amenable to the General Affembly for his conduct, and, by the charges of his office, must submit to their award; should he, however, be so imprudent as to act on this occasion improperly, the brethren of the lodge are warranted by the laws to refuse obedience to his summons, but they are also amenable to the Grand Lodge for contumacy.

A Dispensation is only necessary in cases where Masons from different lodges are indiscriminately convened, as it vests a power in the Master of the lodge for the time being to superintend the behaviour of such brethren, that no irregularity may ensu; but when a regular lodge is assembled under the auspices of its own Master, that Master is sufficiently empowered to preside over his lodge by the constitution, which is an authority that no dispensation can supersede; the former being an act of the Society at large, the latter only an act of the Grand Master as the general Governor.

their officers in form; but the whole ceremony must be under the direction of the Master of the lodge to which the deceased belonged, for which purpose only the dispensation is granted; and he and his officers must be duly honoured, and cheerfully obeyed, on the occasion, as the representative for the time being of the Grand Master, or his Deputy.

All the brethren who walk in procession, should ebserve, as much as possible, an uniformity in their dress. Decent mourning, with white stockings, gloves, and aprons*, is most suitable. No person should be distinguished by a jewel, who is not an officer of one of the lodges invited to attend in form, and all the officers of such lodges should be ornamented with sashes and hatbands; as also the officers of the lodge to whom the dispensation is granted, who are, moreover, to be distinguished with white rods.

The Funeral Service.

The brethren being affembled at the house where the body of the deceased lies, the Master of the lodge to which he belonged, opens the lodge in the Third Degree, with the usual forms, and an anthem is sung. The body being placed in the centre on a couch, and the cossin in which it is laid being open, the Master proceeds to the head of the corpse, and the service begins.

MASTER. 'What man is he that liveth, and fhall not fee death? shall he deliver his soul from the hand of the grave?

• This is the usual clothing of Master-masons..

' Man walketh in a vain shadow, he heapeth up riches, and cannot tell who shall gather them.

When he dieth, he shall carry nothing away;

his glory shall not descend after him.

'Naked he came into the world, and naked he must return: the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!'

The grand honours are then given, and certain forms used, which cannot be here explained. Solemn music is introduced, during which the Master strews herbs or slowers over the body, and taking the SACRED ROLL in his hand, he says,

Let us die the death of the righteous, and let our last end be like his!

The brethren answer.

'God is our God for ever and ever; he will be our guide even unto death!'

The Master then puts the ROLL into the coffin, and says,

'Almighty Father! into thy hands we com-'mend the foul of our loving brother!'

The Brethren answer three times, giving the grand honours each time,

'The will of God is accomplished! So be it!' The Master then repeats the following prayer:

Most glorious God! Author of all good, and Giver of all mercy! pour down thy bleffings upon us, and strengthen our solemn engagements with the ties of fincere affection! May the prefent instance of mortality remind us of our approaching fate; and draw our attention to Thee, the only refuge in time of need! that when the sawful moment shall arrive, that we are about to quit this transitory scene, the enlivening prospect of thy mercy may dispel the gloom of death;

and that, after our departure hence in peace and in thy favour, we may be received into thine ever-

Iasting kingdom, and there enjoy, in union with the fouls of our departed friends, the just reward of a pious and virtuous life!' Amen.

An anthem being fung, the Master retires to the pedestal, and the cossin is shut up. An oration, suitable to the occasion, is delivered; and the Master recommending love and unity, the brethren join hands, and renew their pledged vows. The lodge is then adjourned, and the procession to the place of interment is formed:

The different lodges rank according to feniority, the junior preceding; and each lodge forms one division. The following order-is then observed:

The Tykr, with his fword;
The Stewards, with white rods;
The Brethren, out of office, two and two;
The Secretary, with a roll;
The Treasurer, with his badge of office;
The Senior and Junior Wardens, hand in hand:
The Pastmaster;

The Master;
The Lodge to which the deceased Brother belonged, in the following order; all the members having flowers or herbs in their hands;

The Tyler;

The Stewards;

Martial Music [Drums mussed, and Trumpets covered];

The Members of the Lodge;

The Secretary and Treasurer;

The Senior and Junior Wardens;

The Pastmaster;
The Holy Writings, on a cushion, covered with black cloth, carried by the oldest Member of the Lodge;

The Mafter; The Choirifters, finging an anthem;

The Clergyman; The BODY, with the regalia placed thereon, and two fworde

Chief Mourner; Affistant Mourners; Two Stewards; A Tyler.

One or two lodges advance, before the proceffion begins, to the church-yard, to prevent confusion, and make the necessary preparations. The brethren are not to defert their ranks, or change places, but keep in their different departments. When the procession arrives at the gate of the church-yard, the lodge to which the deceased bro-'ther belonged, the mourners, and attendants on the corpse, halt, till the members of the other lodges have formed a circle round the grave, when an opening is made to receive them. They then advance to the grave; and the clergyman and officers of the acting lodge taking their station at the head of the grave, with the choiristers on each side, and the mourners at the foot, the service is resumed, an anthem fung, and the following exhortation given:

- · Here we view a striking instance of the uncertainty of life, and the vanity of all human pur-
- fuits. The last offices paid to the dead, are only
- uleful as lectures to the living; from them we are
- to derive instruction, and consider every solemnity of this kind, as a summons to prepare for our ap-

Notwithstanding the various mementos of mortality with which we daily meet, notwithstanding Death has established his empire over all the works of Nature, yet, through some unaccountable infatuation, we are apt to forget that we are born to die. We go on from one design to another, add hope to hope, and lay out plans for the employment of many years, till we are suddenly alarmed with the approach of Death, when we least expect him, and at an hour which, amidst the gaieties of life, we probably conclude to be the meridian of our existence.

What are all the externals of majesty, the pride of wealth, or charms of beauty, when Nature has paid her just debt? Fix your eyes on the last scene; view life stript of her ornaments, and exposed in her natural meanness; you will then be convinced of the sutility of those empty delusions. In the grave, all fallacies are detected, all ranks levelled, and all distinctions done away.

While we drop the fympathetic tear over the grave of our deceased friend, let charity incline us to throw a veil over his foibles, whatever they may have been, and not with-hold from his memory the praise which his virtues may have claimed. Suffer the apologies of human nature to plead in his behalf. Perfection on earth has never been attained; the wisest, as well as the best, of men, have erred. His meritorious actions it is our duty to imitate, and from his weaknefs we are to derive instruction.

Let the present example excite our most serious thoughts, and strengthen our resolution of amendment. Life being uncertain, and all earthly pursituits vain, let us no longer postpone the important concern of preparing for eternity; but embrace the happy moment, while time and opportunity offer, to provide against that great change, when all the pleasures of the world shall cease to delight, and the reslections of a virtuous conduct yield the only comfort and consolation. Our expectations will not then be frustrated, nor shall we be hurified, unprepared, into the presence of an all-wise and powerful Judge, to whom the secrets of all hearts are known, and from whose dread tribunal no culprit can escape.

Let us, while in this stage of existence, supf port with propriety the character of our profession, advert to the nature of our folemn ties, and purfue with affiduity the facred tenets of the Order: With becoming reverence, let us supplicate the Divine protection, and infure the favour of that seternal Being, whose goodness and power know no bounds; and when the awful moment arrives. that we are about to take our departure, be it foon or late, may we be enabled to profecute our joure ney, without dread or apprehension, to that far distant country from which no traveller returns. By the light of the divine countenance, we may pass, without trembling, through those gloomy mansions where all things are forgotten; and at the great and tremendous day of trial and retribution, when arraigned at the bar of Divine Juftice, we may hope that judgment will be proonounced in our favour, and that we shall receive our reward, in the possession of an immortal inheritance, where joy flows in one continued stream, and no mound can check its course.'

The following invocations are then made by the Master, the usual honours accompanying each:

Master. May we be true and faithful; and may we live and die in love!

Answer. 'So mote it be.'

MASTER. 'May we profess what is good, and always act agreeably to our profession!'

Answer. 'So mote it be.'

MASTER. 'May the Lord bless us, and prosper us; and may all our good intentions be crowned with success!'

Answer. 'So mote it be.'

The Secretaries then advance, and throw their rolls into the grave with the usual forms, while the Master repeats with an audible voice:

'Glory be to God on high! on earth peace!
'good will towards men!'

Answer. 'So mote it be, now, from henceforth, and for evermore.'

The Master then concludes the ceremony at the grave in the following words:

From time immemorial it has been a custom among the fraternity of free and accepted Masons, at the request of a brother on his death-bed, to accompany his corpse to the place of interment;

and there to deposit his remains with the usual formalities.

In conformity to this usage, and at the special request of our deceased brother, whose memory we revere, and whose loss we now deplore, we are here assembled in the character of Masons, to resign his body to the earth whence it came, and to offer up to his memory, before the world, the last tribute of our fraternal affection; thereby demonstrating the sincerity of our past esteem, and our inviolable attachment to the principles of the Order.

With proper respect to the established customs of the country in which we live, with due deserce to our superiors in church and state, and with unlimited good-will to all mankind, we here appear clothed as Masons, and publicly express our submission to order and good government, and our wish to promote the general interests of manskind. Invested with the badge of innocence, we humbly bow to the universal Parent, implore his blessing on all our zealous endeavours to extend peace and good-will, and earnestly pray for his grace to enable us to persevere in the principles of piety and virtue.

The great Creator having been pleased, out of his mercy, to remove our worthy brother from the cares and troubles of this transitory life to a state of eternal duration, and thereby to weaken the chain by which we are united, man to man; may we, who survive him anticipating our approaching sate, be more strongly cemented in the ties of union and friendship; and, during the short space which is allotted to our present existence, wisely and usefully employ our time in the re-gitized by Google -

ciprocal intercourse of kind and friendly acts, and mutually promote the welfare and happiness of each other.

'Unto the grave we have refigned the body of our deceased friend, there to remain until the general resurrection; in favourable expectation that his immortal soul will then partake of the joys which have been prepared for the righteous from the beginning of the world: And may Almighty God, of his infinite goodness, at the grand tribunal of unbiassed justice, extend his mercy toward him, and all of us, and crown our hope with everlasting bliss, in the expanded realms of a boundless eternity! This we beg, for the homour of his Name, to whom be glory, now and for ever. Amen.

Thus the service ends, and the usual honours being given, the procession returns in form to the place whence it set out, where the necessary duties are complied with, and the business of Masonry is renewed. The regalia, and other ornaments of the deceased, if he has been an officer of the lodge, are returned to the Master, with the usual ceremonies; after which the charges for regulating the conduct of the brethren are rehearsed, and the lodge is closed in the Third Degree with a blessing.

BOOK III.

THE PRINCIPLES OF MASONRY EXPLAINED.

SECT. I.

A Letter from the learned Mr. John Locke, to the Right Hon. Thomas Earl of Pembroke, with an old Manuscript on the subject of Free Masonry.

My Lord, 6th May, 1696.

Thave at length, by the help of Mr. Collins, procured a copy of that MS. in the Bodleian library, which you were fo curious to fee: and, in obedience to your lordship's commands, I herewith fend it to you. Most of the notes annexed to it, are what I made yesterday for the reading of my Lady Masham, who is become so fond of Masonry, as to say, that she now more than ever wishes herfelf a man, that she might be capable of admission into the fraternity.

The MS. of which this is a copy, appears to be about 160 years old; yet (as your lordship will obferve by the title) it is itself a copy of one yet more ancient by about 100 years: for the original is said to be the hand-writing of K. Henry VI. Where that prince had it, is at present an uncertainty; but it seems to me to be an examination (taken perhaps before the king) of some one of the brotherhood of Masons; among whom he entered himself, as it is said, when he came out of his minority, and thenceforth put a stop to a persecution that had been raised against them: But I must not detain your lordship longer by my preface from the thing itself.

I know not what effect the fight of this old paper may have upon your lordship; but for my own part I cannot deny, that it has so much raised my curiosity, as to induce me to enter myself into the fraternity, which I am determined to do (if I may be admitted) the next time I go to London, and that will be shortly. I am,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obedient, and most humble servant,

JOHN LOCKE.

Certayne Questyons, with Answeres to the same, concerning the Mystery of Maconrye; writtene by the hande of kynge Henrye, the sixthe of the name, and faithfullye copyed by me (1) Johan Leylande, Antiquarius, by the commande of his (2) Highnesse.

They be as followethe,

QUEST. What mote ytt be? (3)

Ans. Ytt beeth the skylle of nature, the understondynge of the myghte that ys hereynne, and

- (1) JOHN LEVLANDE was appointed by Henry VIII. at the diffolution of monasteries, to search for, and save such books and seconds as were valuable among them. He was a man of great labour and industry.
- (2) HIS HIGHNESSE, meaning the faid King Henry VIII. Our kings had not then the title of majesty.
- (3) What mote yet be?] That is, what may this mystery of Masonry be? The answer imports, That it consists in natural, mathematical, and mechanical knowledge. Some part of which its fondrye werkynges; fonderlyche, the skylle of reckenyngs, of waightes and metynges, and the true manere of saçonnynge al thyngs for mannes use; headlye, dwellinges, and buyldynges of alle kindes, and all other thynges that make gudde to manne.

QUEST. Where dyd it begynne?

Answ.Ytt dydd begynne with the (4) fyrste menne yn the este, whych were before the (5) sfyrste menne of the weste, and comyinge westlye, ytt hathe broughte herwyth alle comfortes to the wylde and comfortlesse.

QUEST. Who dyd brynge ytt westlye?

Answ. The (6) Venetians, whoo beynge grate merchaundes, comed ffyrste ffromme the este ynn. Venetia, for the commodyte of marchaundysynge beithe este and weste bey the redde and myddlonde sees.

(as appears by what follows) the Masons pretend to have taught the the rest of mankind, and some part they still conceal.

- (4) (5) Fyrste menne yn the este, &c.] It should seem by this, that Masons believe there were men in the east before Adam, who is called the 'ffyrste manne of the weste;' and that arts and sciences began in the east. Some authors of great note for learning have been of the same opinion; and it is certain that Europe and Africa (which, in respect to Asia, may be called western countries) were wild and savage, long after arts and politeness of manners were in great persection in China and the Indies.
- (6) The Venetians, &c.] In the times of monkish ignorance it is no wonder that the Phenicians should be mistaken for the Venetians. Or, perhaps, if the people were not taken one for the other, similitude of sound might deceive the clerk who first took down the examination. The Phenicians were the greatest voyagers among the ancients, and were in Europe thought to be the inventors of letters, which perhaps they brought from the east with other arts.

Quest. How comede ytt yn Engelonde?

Answ. Peter Gower (7) a Grecian, journeyedde ffor kunnynge yn Egypte, and in Syria, and yn everyche londe whereas the Venetians hadde plaunted maçonrye, and wynnynge entraunce yn al lodges of maçonnes, he lerned muche, and retournedde, and woned yn Grecia Magna (8), wackfynge, and becommynge a myghtye (9) wyfeacre, and gratelyche renowned, and her he framed

- (7) Peter Gower. This must be another mistake of the writer. I was puzzled at first to guess who Peter Gower should be, the name being perfectly English; or how a Greek should come by such a name: But as foon as I thought of Pythagoras, I could fcarce forbear finiling, to find that philosopher had undergone a metempsychoss he never dreamt of. We need only consider the French pronunciation of his name, Pythagore, that is, Petagore, to conseive how easily fuch a mistake may be made by an unlearned clerk. That Pythagoras travelled for knowledge into Egypt, &c. is known to all the learned; and that he was initiated into feveral different orders of priefts, who in those days kept all their learning fecret from the vulgar, is as well known. Pythagoras also made every geometrical theorem a fecret, and admitted only fuch to the knowledge of them, as had first undergone a five years silence. He is supposed to be the inventor of the 47th proposition of the first book of Euclid, for which, in the joy of his heart, it is said he facrificed a hecatomb. He also knew the true system of the world, lately revived by Copernicus: and was certainly a most wonderful See his life by Dion. HAL.
- (8) GRECIA MAGNA, a part of Italy formerly fo called, in swhich the Greeks had fettled a large-colony.
- (9) Wyfeaere.] This word at prefent fignifies simpleton, but formerly had a quite contrary meaning. Wifeaere in the old Saxon is philosopher, wifeman, or wizard, and having been frequently used ironically, at length came to have a direct meaning in the ironical sense. Thus Duns Scotus, a man famed for the subtilty and acuteness of his understanding, has, by the same method of irony, given a general name to modern dunces.

a grate lodge at Groton (10), and maked manye maçonnes, fome whereoffe dyde journeye yn Fraunce, and maked manye maçonnes, wherefromme, yn processe of tyme, the arte passed in Engelonde.

QUEST. Dothe maçonnes descouer here artes unto odhers?

Answ. Peter Gower, whenne he journeyede to lerne, was ffyrste (11) made, and anonne techedde; evenne soe shulde all odhers beyn recht. Natheless (12) maçonnes hauethe alweys, yn everyche tyme, from tyme to tyme, communycatedde to mannkynde soche of her secrettes as generallyche myghte be usefulle; they haueth keped back soche allein as shulde be harmfulle yff they comed yn euylle haundes, oder soche as ne myghte be holpynge wythouten the techynges to be joynedde herwythe in the lodge, oder soche as do bynde the freres more stronglyche togeder, bey the prostytte and commodytye comynge to the confrerie hersromme.

QUEST. Whatte artes haueth the maçonnes techedde mankynde?

- (10) Groton.] Groton is the name of a place in England. The p'ace here meant is Crotona, a city of Grecia Magna, which in the time of Pythagoras was very populous.
- (11) Ffyrste made. ] The word MADE I suppose has a particular meaning among the Masons; perhaps it signifies, initiated.
- (12) Maçonnes haueth communycatedde, &c.] This paragraph hath something remarkable in it. It contains a justification of the secrecy so much boasted of by Masons, and so much blamed by others; afferting that they have in all ages discovered such things as might be useful, and that they conceal such only as would be hurtful either to the world or themselves. What these secrets are, we see afterwards.

Answ. The artes (13) agricultura, architectura, astronomia, geometria, numeres, musica, poesie, kymistrye, governmente, and relygyonne.

QUEST. Howe commethe maçonnes more teachers than odher menne?

Answ. The hemfelfe haueth allein in (14) arte of ffyndynge neue artes, whyche arte the ffyrste maconnes receaued from Godde; by the whyche they fyndethe what artes hem plesethe, and the treu way of techynge the same. Whatt odher menne doethe ffynde out, ys onelyche bey chaunce, and herfore but lytel I tro.

QUEST. What dothe the maçonnes concele and hyde?

Answ. Thay concelethe the arte of ffyndinge neue artes, and thatt ys for here own proffytte, and (15) preise: they concelethe the arte of

- (13) The artes, agricultura, &c.] It feems a bold pretence this of the Mafons, that they have taught mankind all thefe arts. They have their own authority for it; and I know not how we shall disprove them. But what appears most odd is, that they reckon religion among the arts.
- (14) Arte of ffyndinge neue artes.] The art of inventing arts, must certainly be a most useful art. My lord Bacon's Novum Organum is an attempt towards somewhat of the same kind. But I much doubt, that if ever the Masons had it, they have now lost it; since so sew new arts have been lately invented, and so many are wanted. The idea I have of such an art is, that it must be something proper to be employed in all the sciences generally, as algebra is in numbers, by the help of which, new rules of arithmetic are, and may be found.
- (15) Preise.] It seems the Masons have great regard to the reputation as well as the profis of their order; since they make it one reason for not divulging an art in common, that it may do honour to the possessor of it. I think in this particular they show too kepynge (16) fecrettes, that foe the worlde mayeth nothinge concele from them. Thay concelethe the arte of wunderwerckynge, and of forefayinge thynges to comme, that so thay fame artes may not be usedde of the wyckedde to an euyell ende. Thay also concelethe the (17) arte of chaunges, the wey of wynnynge the facultye (18) of Abrac, the skylle of becommynge gude and parfyghte wythouten the holpynges of fere and hope; and the universelle (19) longage of maçonnes.

much regard for their own fociety, and too little for the reft of mankind.

- (16) Arte of kepynge secretes.] What kind of an art this is, I can by no means imagine. But certainly such an art the Masons must have: For though, as some people suppose, they should have no secret at all, even that must be a secret, which being discovered, would expose them to the highest ridicule; and therefore it requires the utmost caution to conceal it.
- (17) Arte of chaunges.] I know not what this means, unless it be the transmutation of metals.
  - (18) Facultye of Abrac.] Here I am utterly in the dark.
- (19) Univerfelle longage of maconnes. ] An univerfal language has been much defired by the learned of many ages. It is a thing rather to be wished than hoped for. But it seems the Masons pretend to have such a thing among them. If it be true, I guess it must be fomething like the language of the Pantomimes among the ancient Romans, who are faid to be able, by figns only, to express and deliver any oration intelligibly to men of all nations and Janguages. A man who has all these arts and advantages, is certainly in a condition to be envied: But we are told that this is not the tafe with all Masons; for though these arts are among them, and all have a right and an opportunity to know them, yet some want capacity, and others industry, to acquire them. However, of all their arts and fecrets, that which I most desire to know is, 'The * Tkylle of becommynge gude and parfyghte; and I wish it were communicated to all mankind, fince there is nothing more true than the beautiful fentence contained in the last answer, 'That the better men are, the more they love one another.' Virtue having in itself something so amiable as to charm the Learts of all that behold it.

Quest. Wylle he teche me thay fame artes?

Answ. Ye shalle be techedde yff ye be werthye, and able to lerne.

QUEST. Dothe all maçonnes kunne more then odher menne?

Answ. Not fo. They onlyche haueth recht and occasionne more then odher menne to kunne, butt manye doeth fale yn capacity, and manye more doth want industrye, that ys pernecessarye for the gaynynge all kunnynge.

QUEST. Are maconnes gudder men then odhers?
Answ. Some maconnes are not so virtuous as some odher menne; but, yn the most parte, thay be more gude then thay woulde be yf thay war not maconnes.

Quest. Doth maconnes love eigher odher myghtylye as beeth fayde?

Answ. Yea verylyche, and yt may not odherwise be: for gude menne and treu, kennynge eidher odher to be soche, doeth always love the more as thay be more gude.

[Here endethe the questyonnes, and awnsweres.]

A GLOSSARY of antiquated Words in the foregoing Manuscript.

Albein, only Alweys, always Beithe, both
Commodytye, conveniency
Confrerie, fraternity
Façonnynge, forming
Foresayinge, prophefying

Freres, brethren
Headlye, chiefly
Hem plefethe, they please
Hemfelse, themselves
Her, there, their
Hereynne, therein
Herwyth, with it

Holpynge, beneficial
Kunne, know
Kunnynge, knowledge
Make gudde, are beneficial
Metynges, meafures
Mote, may Middlelonde, Mediterranean
Myghte, power
Occasyonne, opportunity
Odher, other
Onelyche, only Pernecessary, absolutely necessary
Preise, honour

Recht, right
Reckenyngs, numbers
Sonderlyche, particularly Skylle, knowledge
Wackfynge, growing
Werck, operation
Wey, way
Whereas, where Woned, dwelt Wunderwerckynge, working miracles
Wylde, favage
Wynnynge, gaining Ynn, into.

SECT. II.

Remarks on the preceding Manuscript, and on the Annotations of Mr. Locke.

This dialogue possesses a double claim to our regard: first, for its antiquity; and next, for the notes added to it by Mr. LOCKE, who, though not at that time enrolled in the order of Masons, offers very just conjectures on their history and traditions.

Every reader must feel a secret satisfaction in the perusal of this ancient manuscript, especially the true Mason, whom it more nearly concerns. The recommendation of a philosopher of as great merit and penetration as this nation ever produced, added to the real value of the piece itself, must give it a sanction, and render it deserving a serious examination.

The conjecture of the learned annotator concerning its being an examination taken before King Henry of one of the fraternity of Masons, is accurate. The severe edict passed at that time against the society, and the discouragement given to the Masons by the bishop of Winchester and his party, induced that prince, in his riper years, to make a strict scrutiny into the nature of the masonic institution; which was attended with the happy circumstance of gaining his savour, and his patronage. Had not the civil commotions in the kingdom during his reign attracted the notice of government, this act would probably have been repealed, through the intercession of the duke of Gloucester, whose attachment to the fraternity was conspicuous.

Page III. What mote ytt be?] Mr. LOCKE observes, in his annotation on this question, that the answer imports, Masonry consists of natural, mathematical, and mechanical knowlege; some part of which, he says, the Masons pretend to have taught mankind, and some part they still coneeal.—The arts which they have communicated to the world, are particularly specified in an answer to one of the following questions; as are also those which they have restricted to themselves for wise purposes.—Morality, however, might have been included in this answer, as it constitutes a principal part of the masonic system.

Page 112. Where dyd ytt begynne? In the annotation to the answer on this question, Mr. Locke seems to suggest, that Masons believed there were men in the east before Adam, which is indeed a mere conjecture. This opinion may be countenanced by some learned authors, but Masons comprehend the true meaning of Masonry taking rise in the east and spreading to the west, without having recourse to the præadamites. East and west are terms peculiar to their society, and when masonically adopted, are very intelligible *, as they refer to certain forms and established customs among themselves. From the east, it is well known, learning extended to the western world, and gradually advanced into Europe.

Page 112. Who dyd brynge ytt westlye?] The judicious correction of an illiterate clerk, in the answer to this question as well as the next, reslects credit on the ingenious annotator. The explanation is just, and the elucidation accurate.

Page 113. Howe comede ytt yn Engesonde?] The records of the fraternity inform us, that Pythagoras was regularly initiated into Masonry; and being properly instructed in the mysteries of the Art, propagated the principles of the Order in other countries into which he travelled.

Pythagoras lived at Samos, in the reign of Tarquin, the last king of the Romans, in the year of Rome 220; or, according to Livy, in the reign of Servius Tullius, in the year of the world 3472. He was the son of a sculptor, and was educated under one of the greatest men of his time, Therecydes of Syrus, who first taught the immortality of the soul. On the death of his patron, he determined to trace science to its source, and to supply himself with fresh stores in every part of the world where these could be obtained. Animated by a desire of knowledge, he travelled into Egypt, and fubmitted to that tedious and discouraging course of preparatory discipline, which was requisite to obtain the benefit of Egyptian initiation. When he had made himself a thorough master of all the sciences that were cultivated in the sacerdotal colleges of Thebes and Memphis, he pursued his travels through the east, conversing with the Magi and Indian Brachmans, and mixing their doctrines with those he had learnt in Egypt. He afterwards studied the laws of Minos at Crete, and those of Lycurgus at Sparta. Having spent the earlier pate of his life in this useful manner, he returned to Samos well acquainted with every thing curious either in nature or art in foreign countries, improved with all the advantages proceeding from a regular and laborious course of learned education, and adorned with that knowledge of mankind which was necessary to gain the ascendant over them. Accustomed to freedom, he disliked the arbitrary government of Polycrates, then tyrant of Samos, and retired to Crotona in Italy, where he opened a school of philosophy; and, by the gravity and fanctity of his manners, the importance of his tenets, and the peculiarity of his institutions, soon spread his fame and influence over Italy and Greece. Among other projects which he used to create respect and gain credit to his affertion, he concealed himself in a cave, and caused it to be reported that he was dead. After fome time he came abroad, and pretended that the intelligence which his friends gave him in his retreat, of the transactions of Crotona, was collected during his stay in the other world among the shades of the departed.

 $\mathsf{Digitized}\,\mathsf{by}\,Google$

* And behold the glory of the God of Ifrael came from the way of the East. Ezek. xliii. 2.

He formed his disciples, who came from all parts to put themselves under his direction, into a kind of republic, where none were admitted till a severe probation had fufficiently exercised their patience and docility. He afterwards divided them into the -esoteric and exoteric classes: to the former he intrusted the more sublime and secret doctrines, to the latter the more simple and popular. This great man found himself able to unite the character of the legislator to that of the philosopher, and to rival Lycurgus and Orpheus in the one, Pherecydes and Thales in the other; following, in this particular. the patterns fet him by the Egyptian priests, his in-Arrictors, who were not less celebrated for settling the civil than the religious economy of their nation. In imitation of them, Pythagoras gave laws to the republic of Crotona, and brought the inhabisants from a state of luxury and dissoluteness, to be eminent for order and fobriety. While he lived. he was frequently confulted by the neighbouring republics, as the compofer of their differences, and the reformer of their manners; and, fince his death, (which happened about the fourth year of the 70th olympiad, in a tumult raifed against him by one Cylon,) the administration of their affairs has been generally intrusted to some of his disciples, among whom to produce the authority of their master for any affertion was sufficient to establish the truth of it without further inquiry.

The most celebrated of the philosophical notions of Pythagoras are those concerning the nature of the Deity, the transmigration of souls into different bodies (which he borrowed from the Brachmans), and the fystem of the world. He was the first who took the name of philosopher; that is, a lover of wisdom. His system of morality was admirable. He made unity the principle of all things, and imagined that between God and man there were various orders of spiritual beings, who administered to the divine will. He believed in the doctrine of the metempsychosis, or transmigration of souls; and held that God was diffused through all parts of the universe, like a kind of universal soul, pervading every particle of matter, and animating every living creature, from the most contemptible reptile to mankind themselves, who shared a larger portion of the divine spirit. The metempsychosis was founded on this maxim, that as the foul was of celestial origin, it could not be annihilated; and therefore, upon abandoning one body, it necessarily removed into another, and frequently did penance for its former vicious inclinations in the shape of a beast or an insect, before it appeared again in that of a human creature. He afferted, that he had a particular faculty given him by the gods, of remembering the various bodies his own foul had paffed through, and confounded cavillers by referring them to his own experience. In his fystem of the world, the third doctrine which diftinguishes his fect, was a supposition that the sun was at reft in the centre, and that the earth, the moon, and the other planets moved round it in different orbits? He pretended to have great skill in the mysterious properties of numbers, and held that fome particular ones contained a peculiar force and fignificance. He was a great geometrician, and admitted only those to the knowledge of his system, who had first undergone a probation of five years silence. To his discovery is attributed the 47th proposition of the first book of Euclid*, which, in geometrical solutions and demonstrations of quantities, is of excellent use; and for which, as Mr. Locke observes, in the joy of his heart, he is said to have sacrificed a hecatomb. His extraordinary desire of knowledge, and the pains he took to propagate his system, have justly transmitted his same to posterity.

The pupils who were initiated by him in the sciences and study of nature at the Crotonian school, brought all their goods into a common stock, contemned the pleasures of sense, abstained from swearing, and eat nothing that had life. Steady to the tenets and principles which they had imbibed, they dispersed abroad, and taught the doctrines of their preceptor in all the countries through which they travelled.

Page 114. Dothe maçonnes descouer here artes unto odhers?] Masons, in all ages, have studied the general good of mankind. Every art which is necessary for the support of authority and good government, or which could extend science, they have cheerfully communicated to the world. Points of no public utility, as their peculiar tenets, mystic forms, and solemn rites, they have carefully concealed. Thus Masons have been distinguished in various countries for disseminating learning and general knowledge, while they have always kept the privileges of their own Order facred and inviolable among themselves.

THEOREM.] In any right-angled triangle, the square which is described upon the side subtending the right angle, is equal to the squares described upon the sides which contain the right angle. Buclid, lib. i. prop. 47.

Page 115. Whatte artes haueth the maçonnes techedde mankynde?] The arts which the Masons have publicly taught, are here specified. It appears to have surprised the learned annotator, that religion should have been ranked among the arts taught by the fraternity; but it may be observed that religion is the only tie which can bind men; and that where there is no religion, there can be no Masonry. Among Masons, however, it is an art, which is calculated to unite for a time opposite systems, without perverting or destroying those systems. By the influence of this art, the purposes of the institution are effectually answered, and religious animosities happily terminated.

Masons have ever paid due obedience to the moral law, and inculcated its precepts with powerful energy on their disciples. Hence the doctrine of a God, the creator and preserver of the universe, has been their firm belief in every age; and under the influence of that doctrine, their conduct has been regulated through a succession of years. The progress of knowledge and philosophy, aided by divine revelation, having enlightened the minds of men with the knowledge of the true God, and the sacred tenets of the Christian faith, Masons have readily acquiesced in a religion so wisely calculated to make men happy; but in those countries where the gospel has not reached, or Christianity displayed her beauties, they have inculcated the universal religion, or the religion of nature; that is, to be good men and true, by whatever denomination or perfuasion they are distinguished; and by this universal system, their conduct has always been regulated. A cheerful compliance with the established religion of the country in which they live, is earnestly recommended in the assemblies of Masons; and this universal conformity, notwithstanding private sentiment and opinion, is the art practised by them which effects the laudable purpose of conciliating true friendship among men of every persuasion, while it proves the cement of general union.

By Masonry we are taught not to deviate from the line of instruction in which we have been educated, or difregard the principles of religion that we have originally imbibed. Though it is our rule to fuit ourselves to circumstances and fituation in the character of Masons, we are never to forget the wife maxims of our parents, or defert the faith in which we have been nurtured, unless from conviction we may be justified in making the change; and in effecting that change, Masonry can have no share. The tenets of the institution therefore interfere with no particular faith, but are alike reconcilable to all. Religious and political disputes never engage the attention of Masons in their private seminaries: those points are left to the discussion and determination of other affociations for whom the theme is better calculated, it being a certain truth that the wifest fyftems have been more frequently injured than benefited by religious cavil.

Notwithstanding the happiest events have arisen in many periods of the history of the world, from the efforts of a wife, pious, learned, and moderate clergy, seconded by the influence and authority of religious princes, whose counsels and example have always had a commanding power, by enabling them to do good with a facility peculiar to themselves; it must be observed with a generous concern, that! those efforts have not been sufficient to extinguish the unhappy spirit of fanaticism, of whose deplotable effects almost every age has exhibited a striking picture. Enthusiastical sects have been perpetually inventing new forms of religion in various countries, by working on the passions of the ignorant and unwary, and deriving their rules of faith and manpers from the fallacious suggestions of a warm imagination, rather than from the clear and infallible dictates of the word of God. One fet of men has covered religion with a tawdry habit of type and allegory, while another has converted it into an instrument of diffention and discord. The discerning mind, however, may easily trace the unhappy consequences of departing from the divine simplicity of the gospel, and loading its pure and heavenly doctrines with the inventions and commandments of men. The tendency of true religion is to strengthen the springs of government, by purifying the motives and animating the zeal of those who govern, to promote the virtues which exalt a nation, by rendering its inhabitants good fubicats and true patriots, and confirming all the effential bonds and obligations of civil fociety. The enemies of religion are the enemies of mankind; and it is the natural tendency of infidelity and licentiousness to diffolve the most facred obligations, to remove the most powerful motives to virtue, and, by corrupting the principles of individuals, to poison the sources of public order and tranquillity.

Such are the mischiefs arising from zeal and enthusiasm carried to excess; but when the principles of Masonry are better understood and practised, the fraternity will be found to be the best correctors of misguided zeal and unrestrained licentiousness, and the ablest supporters of every well-regulated government.

Page 115. Howe commethe maconnes more teachers than other menne?] The answer implies, that Masons, from the nature and government of their association, have greater opportunities than other men to improve their talents, and therefore are allowed to be better qualified to instruct others.

Mr. Locke's observation on Masons having the art of finding new arts, is judicious, and his explanation just. The fraternity have always made the study of the arts, a principal part of their private amusement: in their assemblies, nice and difficult theories have been canvassed and explained, new discoveries produced, and those already known illustrated. The different classes established, the gradual progression of knowledge communicated, and the regularity observed throughout the whole system of their government, are evident proofs, that those who are initiated into the mysteries of the masonic Art, may discover new arts; and this knowledge is acquired by instruction from, and familiar intercourse with, men of genius and ability, who have, in their masonic disquisitions, an opportunity of displaying their talents to advantage on almost every important branch of science.

Page 115. What dothe the maconnes concele and hyde? The answer imports, the art of finding new arts, for their profit and praise; and then particularises the different arts they carefully conceal. Mr. Locke's remark, 'That this shews too much regard for their own fociety, and too little for the rest of mankind, is rather severe, when he has before admitted the propriety of concealing from the world what is of no real public utility, left, by being converted to bad uses, the consequences might be prejudicial to fociety. By the word praise is here meant, that honour and respect to which Masons are entitled, as the friends of science and learning, and which is absolutely necessary to give a fanction to the wife doctrines they propagate, while their fidelity gives them a claim to esteem, and the rectitude of their manners demands veneration.

Of all the arts which the Masons practise, the art of secrecy particularly distinguishes them. Taciturnity is a proof of wisdom, and is allowed to be of the utmost importance in the different transactions of life. The best writers have declared it to be an art of inestimable value; and that it is agreeable to the Deity himself, may be easily conceived, from the glorious example which he gives, in conceasing from mankind the secrets of his providence. The wisest of men cannot pry into the arcana of heaven; nor can they divine to-day, what to-morrow may bring forth.

Many instances might be adduced from history, to shew the high veneration which was paid to the art of fecrecy by the ancients. Pliny informs us, that Anaxarchus, being imprisoned with a view to extort from him fome fecrets with which he had been entrusted, and dreading that exquisite forture might induce him to betray his trust, bit his tongue in the middle, and threw it in the face of Nicocreon, the tyrant of Cyprus.-No torments could make the fervants of Plancus betray the feerets of their master; they encountered every pain with fortitude, and strenuously supported their sidelity amidst the most severe tortures, till death put a period to their fufferings.—The Athenians bowed s a statue of brass, which was represented without a tongue, to denote fecrecy.—The Egyptians worshipped Harpocrates, the god of silence, who was always represented holding his finger at his mouth,-The Romans had their goddess of filence, named Angerona, to whom they offered worship.-Lycurguis, the celebrated law-giver, as well as Pythagoras, the great scholar, particularly recommended this virtue; especially the last, who, as we have before observed, kept his disciples silent during five years, that they might learn the valuable fecrets he had to communicate unto them. This evinces that he deemed secrecy the rarest, as well as the noblest 22t *.

The following story is related by a Roman historian (Aulus Cellius); which, as it may be equally pleasing and instructive, we may insert as sull length.

The fenators of Rome had ordained, that, during their confultations in the fenate-house, each fenator should be permitted to bring his son with him, who was to depart, if occasion required;

Mr. Locke has made several judicious observations on the answer which is given to the question but this favour was not general, being restricted only to the cons of noblemen; who, in those days, were tutored from their infancy in the virtue of fecrecy, and thereby qualified, in their riper years. to discharge the most important offices of government with fidelity and wildom. About this time it happened, that the fenators met, on a very important case, and the affair requiring mature deliberation, they were detained longer than usual in the senate-house, and the conclusion of their determination was adjourned to the following. day; each member engaging, in the mean time, to keep fecret the, proceedings of the meeting. Among other noblemen's (ons who; attended on the occasion, was the son of the grave Papyrus; a, family of great renown and splendor. This youth was no lefs, remarkable for the extent of his genius, than for the prudence of his, deportment. On his return home, his mother, anxious to know, what important case had been debated in the senate that day, which had detained the fenators fo long beyond the usual hour, intreated him to relate the particulars. The noble and virtuous youth told, her, it was a bufiness not in his power to reveal, he being folemaly enjoined to filence. On hearing this, her importunities were more earnest, and her inquiries more minute. By fair speeches and intreaties, with liberal promifes, the endeavoured to break open this little casket of secrecy; but these proving inessedual, she adopted; rigorous measures, and had recourse to stripes and violent threats in being determined that force should extert, what lenity could not, effect. The youth, finding his mother's threats to be very harfhar but her ftripes more fevere, with a nobie and heroic spirit, thus ent deavoured to relieve her anx ety, without violating his fidelity:

Madam, you may well blame the senate for their long sitting at least for prefuming to call in question a case so truly impersionent; except the wives of the senators are allowed to consult our it, there can be no hope of a conclusion. I speak this only strong, my own opinion; I know their gravity will easily consound my, juvenile apprehensions; yet, whether nature or duty instructs mg to do so, I cannot till. It seems necessary to them, for the ingerease of prople, and the public good, that every senator should be allowed two wives; or otherwise, their wives two husbands. I shall hardly inckine to call, under one roof, two men by the name of father; I had rather with cheerfulness salute two women by the name of mother. This is the question, Madam, and to morrow, it is to be determined.

here proposed. His being in the dark concerning the meaning of the faculty of Abrac, I am not

His mother hearing this, and he feeming unwilling to reveal it, she took it for an infallible truth. Her blood was quickly fired, and rage enfued. Without inquiring any farther into the merits of the case, the immediately dispatched messengers to all the other ladies and matrons of Rome, to acquaint them of the weighty affair under deliberation in the fenate, which so nearly concerned the peace and welfare of their whole lives. The melancholy news foon foread a general alarm, and many conjectures were formed. The ladies, sefolved to give their affiftance in the decision of this weighty point, immediately affembled. Headed by young Papyrus's mother, next morning they proceeded to the senate-house; and though it is remarked, that a parliament of women is feldom governed by one speaker, yet the affair being urgent, the haste pertinent, and the case (on their behalf) of the utmost consequence, the revealing woman must speak for all the rest. It was agreed, that she should insist on the necessity of the concurrence of the senators' wives to the determination of a law in which they were so particularly interested. When they came to the door of the senate-house, such a noise was shade for admission to fit with their husbands in this grand confultation, that all Rome seemed to be in an uproar. Their business, however, must be known, before they could gain an audience. This being complied with, and their admission granted, such an elaborate oration was made by the female speaker on the occasion in behalf of her fex, as aftonished the whole senators. She requested, that the matter might not be hastily determined, but be seriously canvassed according to justice and equity; and expressed the determined refolutions of herfelf and her fifters, to oppole a measure so unitonstitue sonal as that of permitting one husband to have two wives, who could scarcely please one. She proposed, in the name of her sisters. at the most effectual way of peopling the state, that if any alteration were to be made in the established custom of Rome, women might be permitted to have two husbands. The fenators being informed of Papyrus's scheme to preserve his reputation, and the giddle being publicly folved, the ladies were greatly confounded, and departed with blashing cheeks; while the noble youth, who had proved himself worthy of his trust, was highly commended for his adelity. To avoid a like tumult in future, it was resolved, that the custom of introducing the sons of senators should be abolished. Papyrus, however, on account of the attachment to his word, and furprised at, nor can I conceive how he could otherwise be. Abrac is an abbreviation of the word ABRACADABRA. In the days of ignorance and superstition, that word had a magical signification; but the explanation of it is now lost.

his discreet policy, was excepted from this restriction, and ever afterwards freely admitted into the senate house, where many honours were conferred upon him.

The virtue and fidelity of young Papyrus are indeed worthy of imitation: but the Masons have still a more glorious example in their own body, of a brother, a complished in every art, who, rather than sorfeit his honour, or betray his trust, fell a facrifice to the cruel hand of a barbarous assassing.

* Mr. Hutchinson, in his ingenious treatife, intitled The Spirit of Masonry, gives the following explanation of the word ARRAC, which, as it is curious, I shall here insert in that gentleman's own words:

"ABRAC, or ABRACAR, was a name which Bafilides, a religious of the fecond century, gave to God; who, he faid, was the au"thor of three hundred and fixty-five.

46 The author of this superstition is said to have lived in the 46 time of Adrian, and that it had its name after ABBASAN or 45 ABBASAS, the denomination which Basilides gave to the Deity.
46 He called him the Supreme God, and ascribed to him seven sub46 ordinate powers or angels, who presided over the heavens: and 46 also, according to the number of the days in the year, held, that 46 three hundred and fixty-five virtues, powers, or intelligences, 46 existed as the emanations of God; the value, or numeric. I 46 distinction of the letters in the word, according to the ancient 46 Greek numerals, made 365.

A B P A X A Z. 3 2 100 1 60 1 200

44 Among antiquaries, ABRANAS is an antique gem, or flone, 46 with the word ABBANAS engraved on it. There are a great many 46 kinds of them, of various figures and fizes, mostly as old as the 46 third century. Perfons professing the religious principles of Ba-46 filides were this gem with great veneration as an amulet, from 46 whose virtues, and the protection of the Deity, to whom it was 46 consecrated, and with whose name it was inscribed, the wearer 46 derived health, prosperity, and safety. Our celebrated annotator has taken no notice of the Masons having the art of working miracles, and foresaying things to come. But this was certainly not the least important of their doctrines; hence astrology was admitted as one of the arts which they taught, and the study of it was warmly recommended in former times.

The ancient philosophers applied with unwearied diligence to discover the aspects, magnitude, distances, motions, and revolutions of the heavenly bodies; and, according to the discoveries they made, pretended to foretell future events, and to determine concerning the secrets of Providence. This study afterwards became a regular science.

Astrology, however vain and delusive in itself, has certainly proved extremely useful to mankind, by promoting the excellent science of astronomy. The vain hope of reading the sates of men, and the success of their designs, has been one of the strongest motives to induce them, in all countries, &quot;There is deposited in the Eritish Museum such a gem, which is a besil stone of the form of an egg. The head is in camio, the reverse in taglic.

&quot;In church history, Arban is noted as a mystical term, ex"pressing the Supreme God; under whom the Bassidians supposed three hundred and fixty-five dependent deities: it was the principle of the gnostic hierarchy, whence sprang their multitudes of theons. From Abranas proceeded their primogenial mind, the Logos, or word; from the,
Logos, the Phronesis, or prudence; from the Phronesis, Sophia and Dynamis, or wiscom and strength; from these two.
forceeded Principalities, Powers, and Angels; and from these, other angels, to the number of three hundred and fixty-five, who were supposed to have the government of so many.
celetial orbs committed to their care."

to an attentive observation of the celestral bodies; whence they have been taught to measure time, mark the duration of seasons, and regulate the operations of agriculture.

ice di

rada.

is cer-

rinës ;

e ats

arm'y

nweaitude,

her veria)

vens.

Provi-

egulat

idelf.

nomit.

d the

the

itiks

wiid

o, i*

n, es. opcíci

الماؤال

Mi

z ie

(25°) (100

208

1.1

The fcience of aftrology, which is nothing more than the study of nature, and the knowledge of the fecret virtues of the heavens, is founded on scripture, and confirmed by reason and experience. Moses tells us, that the fun, moon, and ftars, were placed in the firmament, to be for figns as well as for feafons. We find the Deity thus addressing Job, "Canst thou bind the fiveet influences of the Pleiades, or loose the bonds of "Orion?" We are instructed in the Book of Judges, that "they fought from heaven; the flars " in their courses fought against Sisera." The ancient philosophers were unanimous in the same opinion; and among the moderns, we may cite Lord Bacon, and feveral others, as giving it a fanc-Milton thus expresses himself on the subiect:

Of planetary motions and afpects
In fextile, fquare, and trine, and opposite,
Of noxious efficacy, and when to join
In fynod unbenign, and taught the fixed
Their influence malignant when to fbower, &c.

It is well known that inferior animals, and even birds and reptiles, have a foreknowledge of futurity; and furely Nature never intended to withhold from man those favours, which she has so liberally bestowed on the raven, the cat, and the fow? No, the aches in our limbs, and the shootings of our corns, before a tempest or a shower, evince the contrary. Man, who is a microcosm, or world in miniature, unites in himself all the powers and qualities which are scattered throughout nature, and discerns from certain signs the future contingencies of his being; finding his way through the palpable obscure to the visible diurnal and nocturnal sphere, he marks the presages and predictions of his happiness or misery. mysterious and recondite doctrine of sympathies in Nature, is admirably illustrated from the fympathy between the moon and the sea, by which the waters of the ocean are, in a certain though inconceivable manner, drawn after that luminary. In these celestial and terrestrial sympathies, there is no doubt that the vegetative foul of the world transfers a specific virtue from the heavens to the elements, to animals, and to man. If the moon alone rules the world of waters, what effects must the combination of folar, stellar, and lunar influences have upon the land? In short, it is univerfally confessed, that astrology is the mother of aftronomy; and though the daughter may have rebelled against the mother, it has long been predicted and expected that the venerable authority of the parent would prevail in the end.

Page 117. Wylle he teche me thay same artes?] By the answer to this question, we learn the necessary qualifications which are required in a candidate for masonry—a good character, and an able capacity.

Page 117. Dothe all maconnes kunne more then other menne?] The answer only implies, that Masons have a better opportunity than the rest of mankind, to improve in useful knowledge; though a want of capacity in some, and of application in others, obstructs the progress of many.

Page 117. Are maconnes gudder menne then odhers?] Masons are not understood to be collectively more virtuous in their lives and actions, than other men; but it is an undoubted sact, that a strict conformity to the rules of the profession may make them better men than they otherwise would be.

Page 117. Dothe maconnes love eider odher myghtylye as beeth fayde? The answer to this question is truly great, and is judiciously remarked upon by the learned annotator.

By the answers to the three last questions, the objections of cavillers against Masonry are amply refuted; the excellency of the institution is displayed; and every censure against it, on account of the transgressions of its professors, entirely removed. A bad man, if his character be known, can never be inrolled in our records; and should we be unwarily led to receive an improper object, then our endeavours are exerted to reform him: so that, by being a Mason, it is probable he may become a better subject to his sovereign, and a more valuable member of society, than he would have done had he not been in the way of those advantages.

To conclude, Mr. Locke's observations on the whole of this curious manuscript deserve a serious and careful examination; and though he was not at the time one of the brotherhood, he feems pretty clearly to have comprehended the value and importance of the fystem which he endeavoured to illustrate. We may therefore fairly conjecture, that the favourable opinion which he conceived of the Society of Masons before his admission, was sufficiently confirmed after his initiation.

BOOK IV.

THE HISTORY OF MASONRY IN ENGLAND, &c.

SECT. I.

Masonry early introduced into England.—Account of the Druids.—Progress of Masonry in England under the Romans.—Masons highly favoured by St. Alban.

The history of Britain, previous to the invasion of the Romans, is so mixed with fable, as not to afford any satisfactory account, either of the original inhabitants of the island, or of the arts practised by them. It appears, however, from the writings of the best historians, that they were not destitute of genius or taste; and there are yet in being the remains of some stupendous works executed by them much earlier than the time of the Romans; which, though desaced by time, display no small share of ingenuity, and are convincing proofs that the science of Masonry was not unknown even in those rude ages.

The Druids retained among them many usages similar to those of Masons; but of what they consisted, at this remote period we cannot with certainty discover. In conformity to the ancient practices of the fraternity, we learn that they held their assemblies in woods and groves, and observed the most impenetrable secrecy in their principles.

and opinions; a circumstance which we have reason to regret, as these, being known only to themselves, must have perished with them.

The Druids were the priests of the Britons, Gauls, and other Celtic nations, and were divided into three classes: the bards, who were poets and musicians, formed the first class; the vates, who were priests and physiologists, composed the second class; and the third class consisted of the Druids, who added moral philosophy to the study of physiology.

As study and speculation were the favourite pursuits of those philosophers, it has been suggested that they chiefly derived their system of government from Pythagoras. Many of his tenets and doctrines seem to have been adopted by them. In their private retreats, they entered into a disquisition of the origin, laws, and properties of matter, the form and magnitude of the universe, and even ventured to explore the most sublime and hidden secrets of Nature. On these subjects they formed a variety of hypotheses, which they delivered to their disciples in verse, in order that they might be more easily retained in memory; and administered an oath not to commit them to writing.

In this manner the Druids communicated their particular tenets, and concealed under the veil of mystery every branch of useful knowledge; which tended to secure to their order universal admiration and respect, while the religious instructions propagated by them were every where received with reverence and submission. They were entrusted with the education of youth; and from their feminaries iffued many curious and valuable productions. As judges of law, they determined all causes, ecclesiastical and civil; as tutors, they taught philosophy, astrology, politics, rites, and ceremonies; and as bards, in their songs they recommended the heroic deeds of great men to the imitation of posterity.

To enlarge on the usages that prevailed among those ancient philosophers, on which we can offer at best but probable conjectures, would be a needless waste of time; we shall therefore leave the experienced Mason to make his own restections on the affinity of their practices to the rites established among the fraternity, and proceed to a disquisition of other particulars and occurrences, which are better authenticated, and of more importance.

On the arrival of the Romans in Britain, arts and sciences began to sourish. According to the progress of civilization, Masonry rose into esteem; hence we find that Cæsar, and several of the Roman generals who succeeded him in the government of this island, ranked themselves as patrons and protectors of the Crast. At this period the fraternity were employed in erecting walls, forts, bridges, cities, temples, palaces, courts of justice, and other stately works; but history is silent respecting their mode of government, and assorbed no information in regard to the usages and customs prevalent among them. Their lodges or conventions were regularly held, but being open only to the initiated sellows, the legal restraints they were under, prevented the public communication of their private transactions.

The wars which afterwards broke out between the conquerors and conquered; confiderably obstructed the progress of Masonry in Britain, so that it continued in a very low state till the time of the emperor Caraufius, by whom it was revived under his own immediate auspices. Having shaken off the Roman voke, he contrived the most effectual means to render his person and government acceptable to the people; and, by affuming the character of a Mason, he acquired the love and esteem of the most enlightened part of his subjects. He possessed real merit, encouraged learning and learned men, and improved the country in the civil In order to establish an empire in Britain, he brought into his dominions the best workmen and artificers from all parts, all of whom, under auspices, enjoyed peace and tranquillity. Among the first class of his favourites he enrolled the Masons; for their tenets he professed the highest veneration, and appointed Albanus, his steward, the principal superintendant of their affemblies. Under his patronage, lodges and conventions of the fraternity were formed, and the rites of Mafonry regularly practifed. To enable the Masons to hold a general council to establish their own government, and correct errors among themselves, he granted to them a charter, and commanded Albanus to preside over them in person as Grand Master. This worthy knight proved a zealous friend to the Craft, and affilted at the initiation of many persons into the mysteries of the Order. To this council the name of Assembly was afterwards given*.

Albanus was born at Verulam, (now St. Alban's in Hertfordshire,) of a noble family. In his youth he travelled to Rome, where he served seven years under the emperor Diocletian. On his return home, by the example and persuasion of Amphibalus of Caer-leon, (now Chester,) who had accompanied him in his travels, he was converted to the Christian faith, and, in the tenth and last persecution of the Christians, was beheaded, A. D. 303.

- St. Alban was the first who suffered martyrdom for the Christian religion in Britain, of which the venerable Bede gives the following account: The Roman governor having been informed that St. Alban harboured a Christian in his house, sent a party of soldiers to apprehend Amphibalus. St.
- * An old MS, which was destroyed with meny others in 1720, said to have been in the pessession of Nicholas Stone, a curious sculptor under Inigo Jones, contained the following particulars:
- *St. Alban loved M. fons well, and cherished them much, and made their pay right good; for he gave them is so per weeke, and iiii d to their cheer; whereas, before that time, in all the land, a Mason had but a penny a day, and his meat, until St. Alban mended itt. And he gott them a charter from the King and his counsell for to hold a general counsell, and gave itt to name Assemblie. Thereat he was himselse, and did helpe to make Masons, and gave them good charges.
- . † A MS. written in the reign of James II. before cited in this volume, contains an account of this circum (tance, and increases the weekly pay to 3s. 6d. and 3d. a day for the bearers of burdens.

Alban immediately put on the habit of his guest, and presented himself to the officers. Being carried before a magistrate, he behaved with such manly freedom, and so powerfully supported the eause of his friend, that he not only incurred the displeasure of the judge, but brought upon himself the punishment above specified.

The old constitutions assirm, that St. Alban was employed by Carausius to environ the city of Verulam with a wall, and to build for him a splendid palace; and that, to reward his diligence in executing these works, the Emperor appointed him steward of his household, and chief ruler of the realm. However this may be, from the corroborating testimonies of ancient historians, we are assured that this knight was a celebrated architect, and a real encourager of able workmen; it cannot therefore be supposed, that Free-Masonry would be neglected under so eminent a patron.

The garment which Alban wore upon this occasion was called a Caracalla; it was a kind of cloke with a cowl, refembling the vertment of the Jewish priests. Walsingham relates, that it was preserved in a large chest in the church of Ely, which was opened in the reign of Edward II. A. D. 1314; and Thomas Rudburn, another writer of equal authority, confirms this relation; and adds, That there was found with his garment an old writing in these words: This is the Caracalla of St. Amphibalus, the monk and preceptor of St. Alban; in which that proto-martyr of England suffered death, under the sruel persecution of Diocletian against the Christians.

SECT. II.

History of Masonry in England under St. Austin, King Alfred, Edward, Athelstane, Edgar, Edward the Consessor, William the Conqueror, Henry I. Stephen, and Henry II.; and also under the Knights Templars.

AFTER the departure of the Romans from Britain, Masonry made but a slow progress, and was almost totally neglected, on account of the irruptions of the Picts and Scots, which obliged the fouthern inhabitants of the illand to folicit the affiftance of the Saxons, in order to repel these invaders. As the Saxons increased, the native Britons funk into obscurity, and ere long yielded the superiority to their protectors, acknowledging their fovereignty and jurisdiction. These rough and ignorant heathens, despising every thing but war, soon put a finishing stroke to all the remains of ancient learning which had escaped the fury of the Picts and Scots. They continued their depredations with unrestrained rigour, till the arrival of some pious teachers from Wales and Scotland, when many of these savages being reconciled to Christianity, Mafoury got into repute, and lodges were again formed *; but these being under the direction of foreigners, were feldom convened, and never attained to any degree of confideration or importance.

Masonry continued in a declining state till the year 557, when Austin, with forty more monks, among whom the sciences had been preserved, came into England. Austin was commissioned by pope

* See the Book of Constitutions.

Gregory, to baptize Ethelbert king of Kent, who appointed him the first archbishop of Canterbury. This monk, and his affociates, propagated the principles of Christianity among the inhabitants of Britain, and by their influence, in little more than fixty years, all the kings of the heptarchy were converted. Masonry flourished under the patronage of Austin. and many foreigners came into England, who introduced the Gothic style of building. Austin seems to have been a zealous encourager of architecture, and appeared at the head of the fraternity in founding the old cathedral of Canterbury in 600, and the cathedral of Rochester in 602; St. Paul's, London, in 604; St. Peter's, Westminster, in 605; and many others *. Several palaces and castles were built under his auspices, as well as other fortifications on the borders of the kingdom, which very confiderably increased the number of Masons in England.

Some expert brethren who had arrived from France in 680, formed themselves into a lodge under the direction of Bennet, abbot of Wirral, who was soon after appointed by Kenred, king of Mercia, inspector of the lodges, and general superintendant of the Masons.

During the heptarchy, Masonry continued in a low state; but in the year 856, it revived under the patronage of St. Swithin, who was employed by Ethelwolph, the Saxon king, to repair some pious houses; and from that time it gradually improved, till the reign of Alfred, A. D. 872, when, in the person of that prince, it sound a zealous protector.

See the Monasticon Anglicanum.

Masonry has generally kept pace with the progress of learning; the patrons and encouragers of the latter having been most remarkable for cultivating and promoting the former. No prince studied more to polish and improve the understandings of his subjects than Alfred, and no one ever proved a better friend to Masonry. By his indefatigable assiduity in the pursuit of knowledge, his example had powerful influence in reforming the dissolute and barbarous manners of his people. Hume, in his History of England, relates the following particulars of this celebrated prince:

" Alfred usually divided his time into three equal portions: one was employed in fleep, and the refection of his body by diet and exercise; another, in the dispatch of business; and a third, in study and devotion. That he might more exactly meafure the hours, he made use of burning tapers of equal lengths, which he fixed in lanterns; an expedient suited to that rude age, when the art of describing fun-dials, and the mechanism of clocks and watches, were totally unknown. By this regular distribution of time, though he often laboured under great bodily infirmities, this martial hero, who fought in person fifty-six battles by sea and land, was able, during a life of no extraordinary length, to acquire more knowledge, and even to compose more books, than most studious men, bleffed with greater leifure and application, have done in more fortunate ages.'

As this prince was not negligent in giving encouragement to the mechanical arts, Masonry claimed a great part of his attention. He invited from all quarters industrious foreigners to repeople his country, which had been desolated by the ravages of the Danes, and introduced and encouraged manufactures of all kinds among them. No inventor or improver of any ingenious art did he suffer to go unrewarded; and he appropriated a seventh part of his revenue to maintain a number of workmen, whom he constantly employed in rebuilding his ruined cities, castles, palaces, and monasteries. The university of Oxford was founded by him.

On the death of Alfred in 900, Edward fucceeded to the throne, during whose reign the Mafons continued to hold their lodges under the sanction of Ethred, his sister's husband, and Ethelward, his brother, to whom the care of the fraternity had been intrusted. Ethelward was a prince of great learning, and an able architect; he founded the university of Cambridge.

Edward died in 924, and was succeeded by Athelstane his son, who appointed his brother Edwin, patron of the Masons. This prince procured a charter from Athelstane, empowering them to meet annually in communication at York, where the first Grand Lodge of England was formed in 926, at which Edwin presided as Grand Master. Here many old writings were produced in Greek, Latin, and other languages, from which the constitutions of the English lodges are derived *.

* A record of the fociety written in the reign of Edward IV. faid to have been in the possession of the famous Elias Ashmole, sounder of the Musum at Oxford, and which was unfortunately destroyed, with other papers on the subject of Masonry, at the Revolution, gives the soliowing account of the state of Masonry at this period;

Athelstane kept his court for some time at York, where he received several embassies from foreign

4 That though the ancient records of the brotherhood in England were many of them destroyed, or lost, in the wars of the Saxons and Danes, yet king. Athelstane, (the grandson of king Alfrede the Great, a mighty architect,) the first annointed king of England, and who translated the Holy Bible into the Saxon tongue, (A. D. 930,) when he had brought the land into rest and peace, built many great works, and encouraged many Masons from France, who were appointed overseers thereof, and brought with them the charges and regulations of the lodges, preserved fince the Roman times; who also prevailed with the king to improve the constitution of the English lodges according to the foreign model, and to increase the wages of working Masons.

That the faid king's brother, prince Edwin, being taught Made fonry, and taking upon him the charges of a Mafter-Mafon, for the love he had to the faid craft, and the honourable principles whereon it is grounded, purchased a free charter of king Athelaftane, for the Mafons having a correction among themselves, (as it was anciently expr. sed.) or a freedom and power to regulate themselves, to amend what might happen amis, and to hold a yearly communication and general assembly.

4 That accordingly prince Edwin fummoned all the Masons in 4 the realm to meet him in a congregation at York, who came and 4 composed a general lodge, of which he was Grand Master; and 4 having brought with them all the writings and records extant; 4 some in Greek, some in Latin, some in French, and other line guages, from the contents thereof that assembly did frame the 4 constitution and charges of an English lodge, made a law to preserve and observe the same in all time coming, and ordained good 4 pay for working masons, &c.?

From this ara we date the re-establishment of Free masonry in England. There is at present a Grand Lodge of Masons in the city of York, who trace their existence from this period. By virtue of Edwin's charter, it is said, all the Masons in the realm were convened at a general assembly in that city, where they established a general or grand Lodge for their suture government. Under the patronage and jurisdiction of this Grand Lodge, it is alleged, the fraternity considerably increased, and kings, princes, and other emisprinces, with rich presents of various kinds. He was loved, honoured, and admired by all the nent persons, who had been initiated into Masonry, paid due allegiance to that Orand Assembly. But as the events of the times were various and suctuating, that Assembly was more or less respectable; and in proportion as Masonry obtained encouragement, its induence was more or less extensive. The appellation of Ancient York Masons, is well known in Ireland and Scotland; and the universal tradition is, that the brethren of that appellation originated at Auldby near York. This carries with it some marks of confirmation, for Auldby was the stat of Edwin.

There is every reason to believe that York was deemed the original feat of masonic government in this country; no other place has pretended to claim it, and the whole fraternity have, at various times, universally acknowledged allegiance to the authority established there: but whether the present association in that city be entitled to the allegiance, is a subject of inquiry which it is not my province to investigate. To that affembly recourse must be had for information. Thus much, however, is certain, that if a General Affembly or Grand Lodge was held there, (of which there is little doubt if we can rely on our records and constitutions, as it is faid to have existed there in Queen Elizabeth's time,) there is no evidence of its regular removal to any other place in the kingdom; and upon that ground, the brethren at York may probably claim the privilege of affociating in that character. A number of respectable meetings of the fraternity appear to have been convened at fundry times in different parts of England; but we cannot find an instance on record, till a very late period, of a general meeting (so called) being held in any other place befide York.

To understand this matter more clearly, it may be necessary to advert to the original institution of that assembly called a General or Grand Lodge. It was not then restricted, as it is now understood to be, to the Masters and Wardens of private lodges, with the Grand Master and his Wardens at their head; it consisted of as many of the straternity at large as, being within a convenient distance, could attend, once or twice in a year, under the auspices of one general head, who was elected and installed at one of these meetings, and who, for the time being, received homage as the sole governor of the whole body. The idea of consisting the privileges of Masonry, by a warrant of constitution, to certain individuals convened on certain days at certain places, had then no existence. There was but one family among princes of Europe, who courted his friendship and alliance. He was a mild fovereign, a kind brother, and a true friend. The only blemish which historians sind in his whole reign, is the supposed murder of his brother Edwin. This youth, who was distinguished for his virtues, having died two years before his brother, a false report was spread, of his being wrongfully put to death by him. But Masons, and every Mason was a branch of that family. It is true, the privileges of the different degrees of the Order always centered in certain numbers of the fraternity, who, according to their advancement in the Art, were authorised by the ancient charges to affemble in, hold, and tule lodges, at their will and discretion, in such places as best suited their convenience, and when so affembled, to receive pupils and deliver instructions in the Art; but all the tribute from these individuals, separately and collectively, rested ultimately in the General Affembly, to which all the fraternity might repair, and to whose award all were bound to pay submission.

As the conflitutions of the English Lodges are derived from this General Assembly at York; as all Masons are bound to observe and preserve those in all time coming; and as there is no satisfactory proof that such assembly was ever regularly removed by the resolution of its members, but that, on the contrary, the fraternity still continue to meet in that city under this appellation, it may remain a doubt, whether, while these constitutions exist as the standard of massonic conduct, that assembly may not justly claim the allegiance to which their original authority entitled them; and whether any other convention of Masons, however great their consequence may be, can, consistent with those constitutions, withdraw their allegiance from that assembly, or set asset an authority, to which not only antiquity, but the concurrent approbation of Masons for ages under the most solemn engagements, have repeatedly given a sanction.

It is to be regretted, that the idea of superiority, and a wish to acquire absolute dominion, should occasion a contest among Masons. Were the principles of the Order better understood, and more generally practised, the intention of the institution would be more fully answered. Every Mason would consider his brother as his fellow, and he who, by generous and virtuous actions, could best promote the happiness of society, would always be most likely to receive homage and respect.

this is so improbable in itself, so inconsistent with the character of Athelstane, and indeed so slenderly attested, as to be undeserving a place in history *.

- The excellent writer of the Life of King AthelRane has given to clear and to perfect a view of this event, that the reader cannot receive greater fatisfaction than in that author's own words:
- "The business of Edwin's death is a point the most obscure in the story of this king, and, to say the truth, not one even of our best historians hath written clearly, or with due attention, concerning it. The fact as commonly received is this; The king suspecting his younger brother Edwin, of designing to deprive him of his crown, cauled him, notwithstanding his protestations of innocency, to be put on board a leaky ship, with his armour bearer and page. The young prince, unable to bear the severity of the weather and want of food, desperately drowned himself. Some time after, the king's cup-bearer, who had been the chief cause of this act of cruelty, happened, as he was serving the king at table, to trip with one foot, but recovering himself with the other, 'See,' said he, pleafantly, ' how brothers afford each other help;' which striking the king with the remembrance of what himself had done, in taking off Edwin, who might have helped him in his wars, he caused that business to be more thoroughly examined, and finding his brother had been falfely accused, caused his cup-bearer to be put to a cruel death, endured himself seven years sharp penance, and built the two monasteries of Middleton and Michelness, to atone for this base and bloody fact +."

Dr. Howel, speaking of this story, treats it as if very indifferently founded, and, on that account, unworthy of credit 2. Simeon of Durham and the Saxon Chronicle say no more than that Edwin was drowned by his brother's command in the year 933 §. Brompton places it in the first, or, at farthest, in the second year of his reign; and he tells us the story of the rotten ship, and of his punishing the cup-bearer ||. William of Malmsbury, who is very circumstantial, says, he only tells us what he heard ¶; but Matthew the

```
Biog. Brit. vol. i. p. 63. aft edit.
```

+ Speed's Chronicle, book vii. chap. 38.

<sup>1</sup> Gen. Hift. P. iv. c. 2. f. 10.

§ Simeon Dunelm. p, 154, Chron. Saxon, p. 112.

The activity and princely conduct of Edwin qualified him, in every respect, to preside over the Masons, who were employed under him in repairing and building many churches and superb edifices, which had been destroyed by the ravages of the Danes and other invaders, not only in the city of York, but at Beverley, and other places.

On the death of Edwin, Athelstane undertook in person the direction of the lodges, and under his sanction the art of Masonry was propagated in peace and security.

When Athelstane died, the Masons dispersed, and the lodges continued in a very unsettled state till the reign of Edgar in 960, when the fraternity were again collected by St. Dunstan, under whose · Nower-gatherer * framps the whole down as an indubitable truth. Yet these discordant dates are not to be accounted for. If he was drowned in the fecond, he could not be alive in the tenth year of the king; the first is the more probable date, because about that time there certainly was a conspiracy against king Athelstane, in order to dethrone him, and put out his eyes, yet he did not put the author of it to death; is it likely then, that he should order his brother to be thrown into the sea upon bare suspicion? But the reader must remember, that we gite the fame historians who have told us this ftory, to prove, that Athelitane was unanimously acknowledged king, his brethren being too young to govern; one would think. shen, that they could not be old enough to conspire. If we take the fecond date, the vehole story is destroyed; the king could not dofeven years penance, for he did not live so long; and as for the tale of the cup bearer, and his flumbling at the king's table, the fame Bory is told of Earl Godwin, who murdered the brother of Edward the Confessor. Lastly, nothing is clearer from history, than that Athelstane was remarkably kind to his brothers and fifters, for whose sakes he lived fingle, and therefore his brother had less temptation to conspire against him.

Matth. Florileg.

auspices they were employed on some pious structures, but it does not appear that they met with any permanent encouragement.

After Edgar's death, Masonry remained in a low condition upwards of fifty years. In 1041, it revived under the patronage of Edward the Confessor, who superintended the execution of several great works. He rebuilt Westminster Abbey, affisted by Leofrick earl of Coventry, whom he appointed to superintend the Masons. The Abbey of Coventry, and many other structures, were finished by this accomplished architect.

William the Conqueror having acquired the crown of England in 1066, he appointed Gundulph bishop of Rochester, and Roger de Montgomery earl of Shrewsbury, joint patrons of the Masons, who at this time excelled both in civil and military architecture. Under their auspices the fraternity were employed in building the Tower of London, which was completed in the reign of William Rufus, who rebuilt London-Bridge with wood, and first constructed the palace and hall of West-minster in 1087.

On the accession of Henry I. the lodges continued to assemble. From this prince, the first Magna Charta, or charter of liberties, was obtained by the Normans. Stephen succeeded Henry in 1135, and employed the fraternity in building a chapel at Westminster, now the House of Commons, and several other works. These were sinished under the direction of Gilbert de Clare marquis of Pembroke, who at this time presided ever the lodges.

During the reign of Henry II. the Grand Master of the Knights Templars superintended the Masons, and employed them in building their Temple in Fleet-street, A. D. 1155. Masonry continued under the patronage of this Order till the year 1199, when John succeeded his brother Richard in the crown of England. Peter de Colechurch was then appointed Grand Master. He began to rebuild London-bridge with stone, which was afterwards finished by William Alcmain in 1209. Peter de Rupibus fucceeded Peter de Colechurch in the office of Grand Master, and Geoffrey Fitz-Peter, chief furveyor of the king's works, acted as his deputy. Under the auspices of these two artists, Masonry flourished in England during the remainder of this and the following reign.

SECT. III.

History of Masonry in England, during the Reigns of Henry III. Edward I. Edward II. Edward III. Richard II. Henry IV. Henry V. and Henry VI.

On the acceffion of Edward I. A. D. 1272, the care of the Masons was entrusted to Walter Giffard, archbishop of York; Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester; and Ralph, lord of Mount Hermer, the progenitor of the family of the Montagues. These architects superintended the sinishing of Westminster Abbey, which had been begun in 1220, during the minority of Henry III.

The collegiate chapel of Westminster, in honour of St. Stephen, was begun to be rebuilt by king Edward; at which the Masons were employed more than two years. In the Exchequer rolls is preserved a curious account of the expences incurred on that occasion. It appears that the daily pay of the carpenters was 5d.; that of the other workmen, 3 d., 2d., and 2 d. Although the weekly expences were but trifling, the amount of the whole was confiderable. That the building of this chapel was completed we are not informed, but we learn from Stowe that a great fire broke out in the leffer hall of the royal palace at Westminster, which communicated to the adjoining monastery, and confumed the whole. It does not appear that the building was restored during this reign, as the wars in Scotland in which the king was engaged, neither allowed him leifure to renew his labours, nor had he fufficient wealth to carry on fuch a work.

In the reign of Edward II. the fraternity were employed in building Exeter and Oriel colleges, Oxford; Clare-hill, Cambridge; and many other Aructures; under the auspices of Walter Stapleton, bishop of Exeter, who had been appointed Grand Master in 1307.

Masonry slourished in England during the reign of Edward III. who became the patron of seience, and the encourager of learning. He applied with indefatigable assiduity to the constitutions of the Order; revised and meliorated the ancient charges, and added several useful regulations to the original code of laws. He patronized the lodges, and appointed five deputies under him to infpect the proceedings of the fraternity; viz. 1. John de Spoulee, who rebuilt St. George's chapel at Windfor, where the order of the garter was first instituted, A. D. 1350; 2. William a Wykeham, afterwards bishop of Winchester, who rebuilt the 9 with confent of the lords of the realm, (for most great men were s then Mafons,) ordained,

• An old record of the Society runs thus:

<sup>4</sup> In the glorious reign of King Edward III. when lodges were-6 more frequent, the Right Worthipful the Matter and Fellows.

That for the future, at the making or admiffion of a brother, the conflictution and the ancient charges should be read by the Masser ter or Warden.

That fuch as were to be admitted Master-Masons, or masters of work, should be examined whether they be able of cunning to ferve their respective lords, as well the lowest as the highest, to the honour and worship of the aforesaid Art, and to the profit of their lords; for they be their lords that employ and pay them for their fervice and travel.

The following particulars are also contained in a very old MS. of which a copy is faid to have been in the possession of the late George Payne, Esq. Grand Master in 1718.

That when the Master and Wardens meet in a lodge, if need be, the sheriff of the county, or the mayor of the city, or alderman of the town, in which the congregation is held, should be made sellow and sociate to the Master, in help of him against rebels, and for upbearing the rights of the realm.

That entered prentices, at their making, were charged not to be thieves or thieves maintainers; that they should travel homestly for their pay, and love their fellows as themselves, and be true to the king of England, and to the realm, and to the lodge.

"That, at such congregations, it shall be inquired, whether any master or sellow has broke any of the articles agreed to; and if the offender, being duly cited to appear, prove rebel, and will not attend, then the lodge shall determine against him, that he shall so forswear (or reneunce) his Masonry, and shall no more use this craft; the which if he presume for to do, the sherist of the county shall prison him, and take all his goods into the king's hands, till his grace be granted him and issued. For this cause principally have these congregations been ordained, that as well the lowest as the highest should be well and truly served in this Art aforesaid.

throughout all the kingdom of England. Amen, fo mote it be!"

castle of Windsor at the head of 400 Free-masons A. D. 1357; 3. Robert a Barnham, who finished St. George's hall at the head of 250 Free-masons, with other works in the castle, A. D. 1375; 4. Henry Yeuele, (called in the old records the King's Free-mason,) who built the Charter-house in London; King's hall, Cambridge; Queensborough castle; and rebuilt St. Stephen's chapel*, Westminster: and 5. Simon Langham, abbot of

On the 27th of May 1330, in the 4th year of Edward III. the works of this chapel were re-commenced. From a charter preferved in the Tower of London, it is evident that this chapel was not finished for several years. In this charter the motives which induced king Edward to rebuild and endow it, are expressed with peculiar elegance and neatness. On the 1st of January 1353, he granted to the Dean and Canons of this collegiate chapel, a spot of ground extending to the Thames, whereon to build cloisters; he also made a grant of some houses in the neighbourhood, and vested several manurs for the endowment of the college in John Duke of Lancaster as trustee. The college of St. Stephen was valued at its suppression at 10851. 108. 5d.; and was surrendered in the first year of Edward VI. The chapel was afterwards fitted up for the meeting of the House of Commons, to whose use it has ever since been appropriated.

The following account of the plan and ornaments of this chapel, which, in consequence of some projected alterations in the House of Commons, have lately, after a lapse of ages, been unveiled, may be considered as curious and interesting, as there is no contemplation that imparts a higher degree of satisfaction, than that which presents to the mind images of ancient and departed splendour.

The eastern part of this chapel serves for the House of Commons, and the western is occupied by the lobby, and adjoining rooms and offices. In the latter, there are no traces of any enrichments; but in the former, are the remains of the altar, stone-seats, and other rich works. The elevation of the western front, or entrance to the chapel, presents these observations. From the ground line in the centre rises two arches, supporting the open screen. On the right of the screen is the entrance into the porch adjoining, which is the wall of the Court of Requests. On the left is a space corresponding once, Westminster, who rebuilt the body of that cathedral as it now stands. At this period, lodges it may be prefumed, with the perfect fide of the forcen, extending to the fouth wall of the hall. Above the forcen, fome remains of the centre building is still visible. On the fouth front, the centre window is complete; five others are filled up with the brick-work between the windows which at prefent light the house of Commons. The buttreffes are entire, as well as the tracing in the spandrels of the arches. On the east front, from the ground line, were three windows of the chancel, the east window of which is now filled up. The buttreffes are entire, as well as the oftangular towers. On the right is part of an ancient wall, which now belongs to the speaker's house. On the east end were three windows from the ground of the chancel; over the groins are part of the remains of the altar, and on each fide stone-seats, and clusters of columns, the capitals of which rise to the present ceiling of the House of Commons. The whole is of the richest workmanship. On the fouth side, from the ground line in the centre, is a perfect window, painted with the arms of Westminfter. On the left of the chancel are clusters of columns; on the right fide of the left clusters is the eastern window, and without is the profile of the buttreffes. At the east end of the column is an open part: to the right is the chancel, and the bases are two feet below the pavement, which shews that there must have been a great ascent to the chancel. The whole of the undercroft is perfect, excepting the bases of the outer columns, and forms a fine superstructure of gigantic fupport to the light and delicate parts above. In the infide you behold the east window, the alter, and the stone-seats, which are broken through. The clusters of columns, the imposts of the windows, the arches, their spandrels, the entablature, the beautiful proportion of the windows, and the enrichments of the whole, crowd on the fight, and fill the mind with wonder and admiration. At the apper end of the chapel near the altar, on the fouth fide, there are evidently the remains of a black marble monument, but to whose memory it was erected, we are left to conjecture. Over the monument are three angels, ffanding upright, with their wings half-expanded, and covered with golden eyes, such as are on the peacock's tail. These paintings, which must have been done in the reign of Edward III. are, for that period, when the art of painting was in its infancy, wonderfully well executed; the colouring has preferved a confiderable portion of its original freshness. The expression and attitude of the angels are fingularly interefting. You may suppose were numerous, and the communications of the fraternity were held under the protection of the civil magistrate.

the body of the deceased stretched before th. m; the three angels are holding palls or mantles before them, which they are preparing to throw over the body, and at the same time the one in the middle feems to fay, " Behold all that remains on earth of him who was once fo mighty!" while the countenances of the two others are expressive of regret and commiseration. The stretched-out pall in the hands of the central angel is powdered over with the irradiated gold circles, in the middle of which are spread eagles, with two heads. This affords room for a supposition whose the tomb was: the armorial bearings of Peter of Savoy, uncle to queen Eleanor, the wife of Henry III. who beautified the chap I, confifted of an eagle with two heads; but his shield displayed "Or, an eagle with two heads, fable." Now as the eyes of the peacock's tail are painted in gold, so different from the natural colouring, it is not improbable that for the fake of adding elegance to the pall, the painter preferred reprefenting the eagle's head in gold rather than in fable; it may therefore be the tomb of St. Peter of Savoy we are describing.

On the left fide of the altar is a painting of the adoration of the shepherds; though the groupe is not disposed in the most accurate ftyle of defign, yet there is fomething in it that highly interests the imagination; the Virgin on one fide is described holding the newborn infant, while Joseph is extending the swaddling clothes. cattle behind are not ill expressed; and the devotion of the shepherds. with their flocks, is very appropriately delineated; the shepherd's boy blowing the double flutes to his dancing dog, and the fighting rams, feem but ill to accord with the subject; but as the painter has placed them without the stable, perhaps the incensistency may be everlooked. There are feveral paintings on the right fide of the altar: they appear to be figures of different kings and queens, tolerably well drawn and in good proportion, and firongly mark the durability of the colouring of that day. On the north fide of the chapel there are paintings of men in armour; beneath two of them, are the names of Mercure and Euflace. In fhort, the whole of the architecture and enrichments, colours and gilding, are extremely freflaand well preferved. It is remarkable, that the colours are decorated with a fort of paters, and feveral of the mouldings are filled up with ernaments to minute, that those of the spandrels and ground entablature could hardly have been perceived from the charel.

Digitized by Google

Richard II. succeeded his grandfather Edward III. in 1377, and William a Wykeham was continued Grand Master. He rebuilt Westminsterhall as it now stands; and employed the fraternity in building New College, Oxford, and Winchester college, both of which he founded at his own expence.

Henry, duke of Lancaster, taking advantage of Richard's absence in Ireland, got the parliament to depose him, and next year caused him to be murdered. Having supplanted his cousin, he mounted the throne by the name of Henry IV. and appointed Thomas Fitz-Allen, earl of Surrey, Grand Master. After the samous victory of Shrewsbury, he sounded Battle-abbey and Fotheringay; and in this reign the Guildhall of London was built. The king died in 1413, and Henry V.

The blockings and frieze of the entablature over the windows of the chapel contain fome of them leaves and flowers, others perfect marks, and others fhields, with the arms of Edward the Confessor, Geneville, Mandeville, and Bruyers—the arms of Castile and Leon, and ancient France—the arms of the kingdom of the West Saxons—vine leaves and grapes, supported by a figure issuing out of a cloud—and shields with the arms of Strabolgi, sarls of Athol in Scotland, and barons of Chilham in Kent, together with the shields of several other kings and barons.

The artist was doubtless defirous that the whole work should have the same attention, and that one uniform blaze of magnificence and splendour should shine around, making this chapel the ne plus ultus of the arts, worthy the saint whose name it bears, and of its sounder Edward III. the great patron of ancient architecture.

Several curious fragments of the paintings lately discovered on the walls of this chapel have been presented to the Society of Antiquarians, of which body a committee was appointed to superintend the execution of drawings of all curious remains that have been brought to light by the late alterations in this celebrated old building.

fucceeded to the crown; when Henry Chicheley, archbishop of Canterbury, obtained the direction of the fraternity, under whose auspices lodges and communications were frequent.

Henry VI. a minor, succeeding to the throne in 1422, the parliament endeavoured to disturb the Masons, by passing the following act to prohibit their chapters and conventions:

3 Hen. VI. cap. 1. A. D. 1425.

MASONS shall not confederate in Chapters or Congregations.

WHEREAS, by the yearly congregations and confederacies made by the Masons in their general affemblies, the good course and effect of the ftatutes of labourers be openly violated and broken, in subversion of the law, and to the great damage of all the commons; our fovereign Lord the King, willing in this case to provide a remedy, by the advice and confent aforefaid, and at the special request of the commons, hath ordained and established that such chapters and congregations shall not be hereafter holden; and if any fuch be made, they that cause such chapters and congregations to be affembled and holden, if they thereof be convict, shall be judged for felons: and that the other Masons, that come to fuch chapters or congregations, be punished by imprisonment of their bodies, and make fine 4 and ranfome at the king's will *.'

• Judge Coke give the following opinion on this statute:

• All the flatutes concerning labourers before this act, and whereunto this act doth refer, are repealed by the flatute of

This act was never put in force, nor the fraternity deterred from affembling, as usual, under archbishop Chicheley, who still continued to preside over them *. Notwithstanding this rigorous edict, the effect of prejudice and malevolence in an arbitrary set of men, lodges were formed in different parts of the kingdom, and tranquillity and felicity reigned among the fraternity.

<sup>6</sup> y Eliz. cap. 4. about A. D. 1562, whereby the cause and end of making this act is taken away, and consequently the act is hecome of no force; for cessante rations legis, cessat ipsa lex: and the indictment of selony upon this statute must contain, That those chapters and congregations are to the violating and breaking of the good course and effect of the statutes of labourers; which now cannot be so alleged, because these statutes be repealed. Therefore this would be put out of the charge of justices of the peace. Institutes, Part III. fol. 10.

It is plain, from the above opinion, that this act, though never expressly repealed, can have no force at present. The Masons may reft very quiet, continue to hold their affemblies, and propagate their tenets, as long as a conformity to their professed principles entitles them to the sanction of government. Masonry is too well known in this country, to raise any suspicion in the legislature. The greatest personages have presided over the society, and under their auspicious government, at different times, an acquisition of patrons, both great and noble, has been made. It would therefore be absurd to imagine, that any legal attempt will ever be made to disturb the peace and harmony of a society so truly respectable, and so highly honoured.

The Latin Register of William Molart, prior of Canterbury, in manuscript, pap. 88. intled, Liberatio generalis Domini Gudlielmi Prioris Ecclesiæ Christi Cantuariensis, erga Fastum Natalis Domini 1429, informs us, that, in the year 1429, during the minority of this prince, a respectable lodge was held at Canterbury, under the patronage of Henry Chicheley, the archbishop; at which were present Thomas Stapylton, the Master; John Morris, custom de la lodge lathomorum, or warden of the lodge of Masons; with sistem sellow-crasts, and three entered apprentices, all of whom are particularly named.

As the attempt of parliament to suppress the lodges and communications of Masons renders the transactions of this period worthy attention, it may not be improper to state the circumstances which are supposed to have given rise to this harsh edict.

The duke of Bedford, at that time regent of the kingdom, being in France, the regal power was vested in his brother Humphrey, duke of Gloucester *, who was styled protector and guardian of the kingdom. The care of the young king's person and education was entrusted to Henry Beaufort, bishop of Winchester, the duke's uncle. The bishop was a prelate of great capacity and experience, but of an intriguing and dangerous character. As he aspired to the sole government of affairs, he had continual disputes with his nephew the protector, and gained frequent advantages over the vehement and impolitic temper of that prince. Invested with power, he soon began to shew his pride and haughtiness, and wanted not followers and agents to augment his influence +.

* This prince is faid to have received a more learned education than was usual in his age, to have founded one of the first public libraries in England, and to have been a great patron of learned men. If the records of the society may be relied on; we have reason to believe, that he was particularly attached to the Masons, having been admitted into their Order, and assisted at the initiation of king Henry in 1442.

† In a parliament held at Westminster on the 17th of November 1423, to answer a particular end, it was ordained, 'That if any person committed for grand or petty treason, should wisfully break out of prison, and escape from the same, it should be deemed petty treason, and his goods be forseited \(\frac{1}{2}\).' About this same one Wil-

‡ Wolfe's Chronicle, published by Stowe.

The animosity between the uncle and nephew daily increased, and the authority of parliament was obliged to interpose. On the last day of April 1425, the parliament met at Westminster. The servants and followers of the peers coming thither, armed with clubs and staves, occasioned its being named THE BATT PARLIAMENT. Several laws were made, and, among the rest, the act for abolishing the society of Masons*; at least, for preliam King, of Womolton, in Yorkshire, servant of Sir Robert Scott, lieutenant of the Tower, pretended that he had been offered by Sir John Mortimer, (cousin to the lately deceased Edward Mortimer, earl of March, the nearest in blood to the English crown, and then a prisoner in the Tower,) ten pounds to buy him clothes, with forty pounds a year, and to be made an earl, if he would affift Mortimer in making his escape; that Mortimer faid, he would raise 40,000 men on his enlargement, and would strike off the heads of the rich Bishop of Winchester, the duke of Gloucester and others. fellow undertook to prove upon oath the truth of his affertion. short time after, a scheme was formed to cut off Mortimer, and an opportunity foon offered to carry it into execution. Mortimer being permitted one day to walk to the Tower wharf, was suddenly purfued, feized, brought back, accused of breaking out of prison and of attempting his escape. He was tried, and the evidence of King being admitted, was convicted, agreeably to the late statute, and afterwards beheaded.

The death of Mortimer occasioned great murmuring and discontent among the people, and threatened a speedy subversion of those in power. Many hints were thrown out, both in public and private assemblies, of the satal consequences which were expected to succeed this commotion. The amazing progress it made justly alarmed the suspicious of the ambitious prelate, who spared no pains to exert his power on the occasion.

- * Dr. Anderson, in the first edition of the Book of Constitutions, in a note, makes the following observation on this act:
- This act was made in ignorant times, when true learning was a crime, and geometry condemned for conjuration; but it cannot derogate from the honour of the ancient frateinity, who, to be fure, would never encourage any such confederacy of their working wenting their affemblies and congregations. Their meetings being fecret, attracted the attention of the aspiring prelate, who determined to suppress them*.

* brethren. By tradition, it is believed, that the parliament were then too much influenced by the illiterate clergy, who were not accepted Maions, nor understood architecture, (as the clergy of fome former ages,) and were generally thought unworthy of this brotherhood. Thinking they had an indefeasible right to know all ferrets, by virtue of auricular confession, and the Maions never confession any thing thereof, the faid clergy were highly offended, and at first suspecting them of wickedness, represented them as dangerous to the state during that minority, and soon influenced the parliament to lay hold of such supposed arguments of the working Maions, for making an act that might seem to reflect dishonour upon even the whole fraternity, in whose favour several acts had been before and after that period made.

* The bishop was diverted from his persecution of the Masons, by an affair in which he was more nearly concerned. On the morning of St. Simon and Jude's day, after the lord mayor of London had returned to the city from Westminster, where he had been taking the usual charges of his high office, he received a special meffage, while feated at dinner, from the duke of Gloucester, requiring his immediate attendance. He immediately repaired to the palace, and being introduced into the prefence, the duke commanded his lordship to see that the city was properly watched the following night, as he expected his uncl would endeavour to make himfelf master of it by force, uniess some effectual means were adopted to ftop his progress. This command was firstly obeyed; and, at nine o'clock the next morning, the bishop of Winchester, with his fervants and followers, attempting to enter the city by the bridge, were prevented by the vigilance of the citizens, who repelled them by force. This unexpected repulse enraged the haughty prelate, who immediately collected a numerous body of archers and other men at arms, and commanded them to affault the gate with shot. The citizens directly that up their floops, and crowded to the bridge in great numbers, when a general maffacre would certainly have enfued, had it not been for the timely interpolition and prudent administration of the mayor and aldermen, who happily stopt all violent measures, and prevented a great effusion of blood.

The sovereign authority being vested in the duke of Gloucester, as protector of the realm, the exe-

The archbishop of Canterbury, and Peter, duke of Coimbra, eldest son of the king of Portugal, with several others, endeavoured to appease the sury of the two contending parties, and, if possible, to bring about a reconciliation between them; but to no purpose, as neither party would yield. They rode eight or ten times backward and forward, using every scheme they could devise to prevent further extremities; at last they succeeded in their mediation, and brought the parties to a conformity; when it was agreed, that all hostile proceedings should drop on both sides, and the matter be referred to the award of the duke of Bedford; on which peace was restored, and the city remained in quiet.

The bishop lost no time in transmitting his case to the duke of Bedford; and in order to gloss it over with the best colours, he wrote the following letter:

*RIGHT high and mighty prince, and my right noble, and after one leiuest [earthly] lord; I recommend me unto your grace with all my heart. And as you desire the welfare of the king our fove- reign lord, and of his realms of England and France, your own weal [health] with all yours, haste you hither: For by my troth, if you tarry long, we shall put this land in jeopardy [adventure] with a field, such a brother you have here; God make him a good man. For your wisdom well knoweth that the profit of France standeth in the welfare of England, &c. The blessed Trinity keep you. Written in great haste at London, on All-halloweneven, the 31st of October, 1425,

6 By your fervant, to my lives end,

"HENRY, WINCHESTER."

This letter had the defired effect, and hastened the return of the duke of Bedford to London, where he arrived on the 10th of January 1425-6. On the 21st of February he held a great council at St. Albans, adjourned it to the 15th of March at Northampton, and to the 25th of June at Leicester. Batts and staves being now prohibited, the followers of the members of parliament attended with stones in a sling, and plummets of lead. The duke of Bedford emply yed the authority of parliament to reconcile the differences which had broke out between his brother and the bishop of Winchester; and obliged these rivals to promise before that assume that they would bury all quarrels in oblivion. Thus the long wishedfor peace between these two great personages was, to all appearances, accomplished.

oution of the laws, and all that related to the civil magistrate, centered in him: a fortunate circumstance for the Masons at this critical juncture. The duke, knowing them to be innocent of the accusations which the bishop of Winchester had laid against them, took them under his protection, and transferred the charge of rebellion, sedition, and treason, from them, to the bishop and his followers; who, he asserted, were the first violators of

During the discussion of this matter before parliament, the duke of Gloucester exhibited the following charge, among five others, against the bishop of Winchester: 'That he had, in his letter to the duke of Bedford at France, plainly declared his malicious purpose of assembling the people, and stirring up a rebellion in the nation, contrary to the king's peace.'

The bishop's answer to this accusation was, 'That he never had any intention to diffurb the peace of the nation, or raife a rebel-Iion; but that he fent to the duke of Bedford, to solicit his speedy return to England, to fettle all these differences which were so prejudicial to the peace of the kingdom: That though he had indeed written in the letter, That if he tarried, we should put the I and in adventure by a field, such a brother you have here; he did not mean it of any defign of his own, but concerning the feditious affemblies of masons, carpenters, tylers, and plaisterers; who, being distasted by the late act of parliastent against the excessive wages of those trades, had given out many feditious speeches and meaces against certain great men, which tended much to rebellion :: 4 That the duke of Gloucester did not use his endeavour, as he ought to have done in his place, to suppress such unlawful affemblies a fo that he feared the king, and his good subjects, must have made a field to withstand them; to prevent which, he chiefly defired the duke of Bedford to come over.'

As the Masons are unjustly suspected of having given rise to the above civil commotions, I thought it necessary to insert the foregoing particulars, in order to clear them from this salse charge. Most of the circumstances here mentioned, are extracted from Wolfe's Chronicle published by Stowe.

The above particulars are extracted from one of Ellas Assimole's MSS. on the subject of Free-masonry.

Digitized by Google

the public peace, and the most rigorous promoters of civil discord.

The bishop, sensible that his conduct could not be justified by the laws of the land, prevailed on the king, through the intercession of the parliament, whose favour his riches had obtained, to grant letters of pardon for all offences committed by him, contrary to the statute of provisors, and other acts of præmunire; and five years afterwards procured another pardon, under the great seal, for all crimes whatever from the creation of the world to the 26th of July 1437.

Notwithstanding these precautions of the cardinal, the duke of Gloucester drew up, in 1442, fresh articles of impeachment against him, and presented them in person to the king; earnestly intreating that judgment might be passed upon him, according to his crimes. The king referred the matter to his council, which was at that time composed principally of ecclesiastics, who extended their favour to the cardinal, and made such slow progress in the business, that the duke, wearied out with their tedious delays and fraudulent evasions, dropped the prosecution, and the cardinal escaped.

Nothing could now remove the inveteracy of the cardinal against the duke; he resolved to destroy a man whose popularity might become dangerous, and whose resentment he had reason to dread. The duke having always proved a strenuous friend to the public, and, by the authority of his birth and station, having hitherto prevented absolute power from being vested in the king's person, Winchester was enabled to gain many partifant, who were easily brought to concur in the ruin of the prince *.

To accomplish this purpose, the bishop and his party concerted a plan to murder the duke. A partiament was summoned to meet at St. Edmondsbury in 1447, where they expected he would be entirely at their mercy. Having appeared on the second day of the sessions, he was accused of treason, and thrown into prison; where he was found, the next day, cruelly murdered. It was pretended that his death was natural; but though his body, which was exposed to public view, bore no marks of outward injury, there was little doubt of his having fallen a facrifice to the vengeance of his enemies. After this dreadful catastrophe, five of his servants were tried for aiding him in his treasons, and condemned to be hanged, drawn, and quartered. They were hanged accordingly, cut down alive, stripped naked, and marked with a knife to be quartered; when the marquis of Suffolk, through a mean and pitiful affectation of popularity, produced their pardon, and saved their lives; the most barbarous kind of mercy that can possibly be imagined!

*The bishop planned the following scheme at this time to irritate the duke of Gloucester: His duches, the daughter of Reginald lord Cobham, had been accused of the crime of witchcrast, and it was pretended that a waxen sigure of the king was sound in her possession; which she, and her affociates, Sir Roger Bolingbroke, a priest, and one Margery Jordan of Eye, melted in a magical manner before a slow sire, with an intention of making Henry's force and vigour waste away by like insensible degrees. The accusation was well calculated to affect the weak and credulous mind of the king, and gain belief in an ignorant age. The duches was brought to trial, with her consederates, and the prisoners were pronounced guilty: the duches was condemned to do public penance in London for three days, and to suffer perpetual imprisonment; the others were executed.

The protector, provoked at such repeated insults offered to his duches, made a noble and stout resistance to these most abominable and shameful proceedings, but it unfortunately ended in his own destruction.

The duke of Gloucester's death was universally lamented throughout the kingdom. He had long obtained, and deserved, the sitname of Good. He was a lover of his country, the friend of merit, the protector of Masons, the patron of the learned, and the encourager of every useful art. His inveterate persecutor, the hypocritical bishop, stung with remorfe, scarcely survived him two months; when, after a long life spent in salsehood and politics, he sunk into oblivion, and ended his days in mi-sery.

----- He dies, and makes no fign.

Hen. VI. Act 31

* The wickedness of the cardinal's life, and his mean, base, and unmanly death, will ever be a bar against any vindication of his memory, for the good which he did while alive, or which the money he had amassed could do after his death. When in his last moments, he was heard to utter these mean expressions: "Why should I die, who am possessed of the much wealth? If the whole kingdom could save my life, I am able by my policy to preserve it, or by my money to purchase it. Will not death be bribed, and money do every thing?" The inimitable Shakespear, after giving a most horrible picture of despair, and a tortured conscience, in the person of the cardinal, introduces king Henry to him with these sharp and piercing words:

Lord Cardinal, if thou think'ft on heaven's blife,

Lift up thy hand, make fignal of that hope.

The memory of the wicked shall rot, but the unjustly persecuted

After the death of the cardinal, the Masons continued to hold their lodges without danger of interruption. Henry established various seats of learning, which he enriched with ample endowments, and distinguished by peculiar immunities; thus inviting his subjects to rise above ignorance and barbarism, and reform their turbulent and licentious manners. In 1442, he was initiated into Masonry, and, from that time, spared no pains to obtain a complete knowledge of the Art. He perused the ancient charges, revised the constitutions, and, with the consent of his council, honoured them with his sanction *.

Encouraged by the example of the fovereign, and allured by an ambition to excel, many lords and gentlemen of the court were initiated into Masonry, and pursued the Art with diligence and assiduity †. The king in person presided over the

A record in the reign of Edward IV. runs thus: 'The company of Masons, being otherwise termed Free-Masons, of auntient fraunding and good reckoninge, by means of affable and kind meetyngs dyverse tymes, and as a lovinge brotherhode use to doe, did frequent this mutual affembly in the tyme of Henry VI. in the twelfth yeare of his most gracious reign, A. D. 1434.' The same record says farther, 'That the charges and laws of the Free-Masons have been seen and perused by our late soveraign king Henry VI. and by the lords of his most honourable council, who have allowed them, and declared, That they be right good, as d'reasonable to be holden, as they have been drawn out and collected from the records of auntient tymes,' &c. &c.

From this record it appears, that before the troubles which happened in the reign of this unfortunate prince, Free-Masons were held in high estimation.

† While these transactions were carrying on in England, the Masons were countenanced and protected in Scotland by king James I. After his return from captivity, he became the patron of the learned, and a zealous encourager of Masonry. The Scottish records relate, lodges, and nominated William Wanesseet, bishop of Winchester, Grand Master; who built at his own expence Magdalene college, Oxford, and several pious houses. Eton college, near Windsor, and King's college, Cambridge, were founded in this reign, and finished under the direction of Wanesseet. Henry also founded Christ's college, Cambridge; and his queen, Margaret of Anjou, Queen's college, in the same university. In short, during the life of this prince, the arts slourished, and many sagacious statesmen, consummate orators, and admired writers, were supported by royal muniscence.

SECT. IV.

History of Masonry in the South of England from 1471 to 1567.

MASONRY continued to flourish in England till the peace of the kingdom was interrupted by the civil wars between the two royal houses of York and Lancaster; during which it fell into an aimost total neglect, that continued till 1471, when it again revived under the auspices of Richard Beau-that he honoured the lodges with his royal presence; that he settled a yearly revenue of four pounds Scots, (an English noble,) to be paid by every Master-Mason in Scotland, to a Grand Master, chesen by the Grand Lodge, and approved by the crown, one nobly born, or an eminent clergyman, who had his deputies in cities and counties, and every new brother at entiance paid him also a fee. His office empowered him to regulate in the frasernity what should not come under the cognizance of law-courts. To him appealed both Mason and lord, or the builder and sounder; when at variance, in order to prevent law-pleas; and in his absence, they appealed to his Deputy or Grand Warden, that resided next to the premises.

champ, bishop of Sarum; who had been appointed Grand Master by Edward IV. and honoured with the title of chancellor of the garter, for repairing the castle and chapel of Windsor.

During the short reigns of Edward V. and Richard III. Masonry was on the decline; but on the accession of Henry VII. A. D. 1485, it rose again into esteem, under the patronage of the Master and sellows of the order of St. John at Rhodes, (now Malta,) who assembled their grand lodge in 1500, and chose Henry their protector. Under the auspices of this prince, the fraternity once more revived their assemblies, and Masonry resumed its pristine splendor.

On the 24th of June 1502, a lodge of Master Masons was formed in the palace, at which the king prefided in person as Grand Master; who, having appointed John Islip, abbot of Westminster, and Sir Reginald Bray, knight of the garter, hiswardens for the occasion, proceeded in ample form to the east end of Westminster Abbey, where he laid the foundation-stone of that rich master-piece of Gothic architecture, known by the name of Henry the Seventh's Chapel. This chapel is supported by fourteen Gothic buttreffes, all beautifully ornamented, and projecting from the buildings in different angles; it is enlightened by a double range of windows, which throw the light into fuch a happy disposition, as at once to please the eye, and afford a kind of folemn gloom. Thefe buttreffes extend to the roof, and are made to strengthen it, by being crowned with Gothic arches. The entrance is from the east end of the abbey, by a flight of black marble steps, under a noble arch, leading to the body of the chapel. The gates are of brass. The stalls on each side are of oak, as are also the seats, and the pavement is black and white marble. The capestone of this building was celebrated in 1507.

Under the direction, of Sir Reginald Bray, the palace of Richmond was also built, and many other stately works. Brazen-note college, Oxford, and Jesus and St. John's colleges, Cambridge, were likewise finished in this reign.

Henry VIII. fucceeded his father in 1509, and appointed cardinal Wolfey Grand Master. prelate built Hampton-court, Whitchall, Christ church college Oxford, and feveral other noble edifices; all of which, upon his difgrace, were forfeited to the crown, A. D. 1530. Cromwell, earl of Essex, succeeded the cardinal in the office of Grand Master; and employed the fraternity in building St. James's palace, Christ's hospital, and Greenwich castle. In 1534, the king and parliament threw off allegiance to the pope of Rome, and the king being declared supreme head of the church, no less than 926 pious houses were suppressed; many of which were afterwards converted into stately mansions for the nobility and gentry. Under the direction of John Touchet lord Audley, who, on Cromwell's being beheaded in 1540, had succeeded to the office of Grand Master, the fraternity were employed in building Magdalene college, Cambridge, and feveral other structures.

Edward VI. a minor, succeeded to the throne in 1547, and his guardian and regent, Edward Seymour, duke of Somerset, undertook the management of the Masons, and built Somerset-house in the Strand; which, on his being beheaded, was forseited to the crown in 1552. John Poynet, bishop of Winchester, then became the patron of the fraternity, and presided over the lodges till the death of the king in 1553.

The Masons remained without any nominal patron till the reign of Elizabeth, when sir Thomas Sackville accepted the office of Grand Master. Lodges were held during this period in different parts of England; but the General or Grand Lodge affembled in York, where the fraternity were numerous and respectable.

The following circumstance is recorded of Elizabeth: Hearing that the Masons were in possession of secrets which they would not reveal, and being jealous of all secret assemblies, she sent an armed force to York, with intent to break up their annual grand ledge*. This design, however, was happily srustrated by the interposition of sir Thomas Sackville; who took care to initiate some of the chief officers which she had sent on this duty. They joined in communication with the Masons, and made so favourable a report to the queen on their return, that she countermanded her orders, and never afterwards attempted to disturb the meetings of the fraternity.

* This confirms the observations in a former Note on the exist. spice of the Grand Lodge at York, p. 149 & seq.

Sir Thomas Sackville held the office of Grand Master till 1567, when he resigned in favour of Francis Russell, earl of Bedford, and Sir Thomas Gresham*, an eminent merchant, distinguished by his abilities, and great success in trade. To the former, the care of the brethren in the northern * Sir Thomas Gresham proposed to erect a building, at his own. expence, in the city of London, for the service of commerce, if the citizens would purchase a proper spot for that purpose. His proposal being accepted, and some houses between Cornhill and Threadneedle. freet, which had been purchased on that account, having been pulled down, on the 7th of June 1566, the foundation-stone of the intended building was laid. The work was carried on with fuch expedition, that the whole was finished in November 1567. The plan of this edifice was formed upon that of the Exchange at Antwerp, being, like it, an oblong square, with a portico, supported by pillars of marble, ten on the north and fouth fides, and feven on the east and west; und r which stood the shops, each seven feet and a half long. and five feet broad; in all 120; twenty five on each fide east and west, thirty-four and a half north, and thirty-five and a half fouth. each of which paid Sir Thomas 4l. 10s. a year on an average. There were likewise other shops fitted up at first in the vaults below. but the dampness and darkness rendered them so inconvenient, that the vaults were foon let out to other uses. Upon the roof stood, at each corner, upon a pedeftal, a grafs-hopper, which was the creft of Sir I bomas's Arms. This edifice, on its being first erected, was called fimply, the Bourse; but on the 23d of January 1570, the queen, attended by a great number of her nobles, came from her palace of Somerfet-house in the Strand, and passing through Threadneedle-street, dined with Sir Thomas at his house in Bishopsgatestreet; and after dinner her Majesty returned through Cornhill. entered the Bourse on the south side, and having viewed every part of the building, particularly the gallery which extended round the whole structure, and which was furnished with shops filled with all forts of the finest wares in the city, she caused the edifice to be proclaimed, in her presence, by a herald and trumpet, " The Royal Exchange;" and on this occasion, it is said, Sir Thomas appeared publicly in the character of Grand Master. The original building stood till the fire of London in 1666, when it perished amidst the general havoc, but was afterwards reftored to its prefent magnificence.

part of the kingdom was assigned, while the latter was appointed to superintend the meetings in the south, where the society had considerably increased, in consequence of the honourable report which had been made to the queen. Notwithstanding this new appointment of a Grand Master for the south, the General Assembly continued to meet in the city of York as heretofore, where all the records were kept; and to this assembly appeals were made on every important occasion.

SECT. V.

Progress of Masonry in the South of England from the Reign of Elizabeth to the Fire of Loudon in 1666.

THE queen being affured that the fraternity were composed of skilful architects and lovers of the arts, and that state-affairs were points in which they never interfered, was perfectly reconciled to their affemblies, and Masonry made a great progress during her reign. Several lodges were held in different parts of the kingdom, particularly in London, and its environs, where the brethren increased considerably, and many great works were carried on under the auspices of sir Thomas Gresham, from whom the fraternity received every encouragement.

Charles Howard, earl of Effingham, succeeded for Thomas in the office of Grand Master, and continued to preside over the lodges in the south till the year 1588, when George Hastings, earl of Huntingdon, was chosen, who remained in that office till the death of the queen in 1603.

On the demise of Elizabeth, the crowns of England and Scotland were united in her successor James VI. of Scotland, who was proclaimed king of England, Scotland, and Ireland, on the 25th of March 1603. At this period, Masonry flourished in both kingdoms, and lodges were convened under the royal patronage. Several gentlemen of fine taste, who had returned from their travels, full of laudable emulation to revive the old Roman and Grecian Masonry, brought home fragments of old columns, curious drawings, and books of architecture. Among the number was the celebrated Inigo Jones, fon of Inigo Jones, a citizen of London; who was put apprentice to a joiner, and had a natural taste for the art of designing. first renowned for his skill in landscape painting, he was patronized by the learned William Herbert, afterward earl of Pembroke. Having made the tour of Italy at his lordship's expence, and improved under some of the best disciples of the samous Andrea Palladio, on his return to England he laid aside the pencil, and confining his study to architecture, became the Vitruvius of Britain, and the of Palladios

This celebrated artist was appointed general surveyor to king James I. under whose auspices the science of Masonry flourished. He was nominated Grand Master of England*, and was depunded.

* The Grand Master of the North bears the title of Grand Master of all England, which may provably have been occasioned by the:

During his administration, several learned men were initiated into the Order, and the society confiderably increased in consequence and reputation. Ingenious artists daily resorted to England, where they met with great encouragement; lodges were instituted as seminaries of instruction in the sciences and polite arts, after the model of the Italian schools; the communications of the fraternity were established; and the annual sessions regularly observed.

Many curious and magnificent structures were finished under the direction of this accomplished architect; and, among the rest, he was employed, by command of the fovereign, to plan a new palace at Whitehall, worthy the residence of the kings of England, which he accordingly executed; but for want of a parliamentary fund, no more of the plan than the prefent Banqueting-house was finished. In 1607, the foundation-stone of this elegant piece of true Masonry was laid by king James, in presence of Grand Matter Jones, and his wardens, William Herbert earl of Pembroke. and Nicholas Stone efq. Master-Mason of England, who were attended by many brothers, clothed in form, and other eminent persons, who had been invited on the occasion. The ceremony was conducted with great pomp and fplendor, and a purse of broad pieces of gold laid upon the stone, to enable the Masons to regale. This building is title of Grand Master of England having been at this time conserred on Inigo Jones, and which title the Grand Masters in the South bear to this day. faid to contain the finest single room of its extent fince the days of Augustus, and was intended for the reception of ambassadors, and other audiences of state. The whole is a regular and stately building, of three stories; the lowest has a rustic wall, with fmall fquare windows, and by its strength happily serves as a basis for the orders. Upon this is raifed the Ionic, with columns and pilasters; and between the columns, are wellproportioned windows, with arched and pointed pediments: over these, is placed the proper entablature: on which is raised a second series of the Corinthian order, confifting of columns and pilasters, like the other, column being placed over column, and pilaster over pilaster. From the capitals, are carried festoons, which meet with masks, and other ornaments, in the middle. This feries is also crowned with its proper entablature, on which is raised the balustrade, with attic pedestals between, which crown the work. whole is finely proportioned, and happily executed. The projection of the columns from the wall, has a fine effect in the entablatures; which being brought forward in the fame proportion, yields that happy diversity of light and shade so essential to true architecture. The internal decorations are also striking. The ceiling of the grand room, in particular, which is now used as a chapel, is richly painted by the celebrated fir Peter Paul Rubens, who was ambaffador in England in the time of Charles I. The subject is, the entrance, inauguration, and coronation of king James, represented by pagan emblems; and it is justly esteemed one of the most capital performances of this eminent master. It has been pronounced one of the finest cielings in the world.

Inigo Jones continued in the office of Grand Master till 1618, when he was succeeded by the earl of Pembroke; under whose auspices many eminent, wealthy, and learned men were initiated, and the mysteries of the Order held in high estimation.

On the death of king James in 1625, Charles ascended the throne. The earl of Pembroke pre-fided over the fraternity till 1630, when he refigned in favour of Henry Danvers, earl of Danby; who was succeeded in 1633 by Thomas Howard, earl of Arundel, the progenitor of the Norfolk family. In 1635, Francis Russel, earl of Bedford, accepted the government of the society; but Inigo Jones having with indefatigable assiduity continued to patronize the lodges during his lordship's administration, he was re-elected the following year, and continued in office till his death in 1646*.

That lodges continued regularly to affemble at this time, appears from the Diary of the learned antiquary Elias Affimole, where he fays: 'I was made a Free-Mason at Warrington, Lancashire, with. 'Colonel Henry Mainwaring, of Kerthingham, in Cheshire, by Mr. Richard Penket the Warden, and the selow crafts, (all of whom, are specified,) on 16th October 1646.' In another place of his Diary he says: 'On March the 10th, 1682, about 5 hor. 'post merid. I received a summons to appear at a lodge, to be held the next day at Masons' Hall in London.—March 11, Accordingly I went, and about noon were admitted into the selbarship of Free-masons, Sir William Wisson, knt. Capt. Richard Borthwick, Mr. William Woodman, Mr. William Gray, Mr. Samuel' Taylour, and Mr. William Wise. I was the senior sellow among them, it being thirty-five years since I was admitted. There were present, bessee myself, the sellows alternamed; Mr. Thomas.

The taste of this celebrated architect was, difplayed in many curious and elegant structures,

Wife, mafter of the Masons' company this present year, Mr. Thomas 'horthose, and 7 more old Free Masons. We all dined at the Half-moon tavern, Cheapside, at a noble dinner prepared at the charge of the new accept d Masons.'

An old record of the Society describes a coat of arms much the same with that of the London company of freemen Masons; whence it is generally believed that this company is a branch of that ancient fraternity; and in former times, no man, it also appears, was made free of that company, until he was initiated in some lodge of free and accepted Masons, as a necessary qualification. This practice full prevails in Scotland among the operative Masons.

The writer of Mr. Ashmole's life, who was not a Mason, before his H.story of Ecrkshire, p. 6. gives the following account of Masonry:

"He (Mr. Ashmole) was elected a brother of the company of Free-Masons; a favour esteemed so singular by the Members, that kings themselves have not distained to enter themselves of this Society. From these are derived the adopted Masons, accrepted masons, or Free-Masons; who are known to one another all over the world, by certain signals and reacted-woods known to them alone. They have several lodges in different countries for their reception; and when any of them fall into decay, the brother themselves to relieve them. The manner of their adoption or admission is very formal and solemn, and with the administration of an oath of secrecy, which has had better fate than all other oaths, and has ever been most religiously observed: nor has the world been yet able, by the inadvertency, surprise, or folly of any of its members, to dive into this mystery, or make the least discovery."

In some of Mr. Ashmole's manuscripts, there are many valuable collections relating to the history of the Free Masons, as may be gathered from the letters of Dr. Knipe, of Christ church, Oxford, to the publisher of Ashmole's Life; the solowing extracts from which will authenticate and illustrate many sacts in this history:

"As to the ancient Society of Free Masons, concerning whom you are desirous of knowing what may be known with certainty, is shall only teil you, that if our worthy brother E. Ashmole, esq. "had executed his intended design, our fraternity had been as much dobliged to him as the brethren of the most noble Order of the both in London and the country; particularly in defigning the magnificent row of Great Queen-ftreet, and the west side of Lincoln's Inn Fields, with Lindsey-house in the centre; the late Chirurgeons'-hall and theatre, now Barbers'-hall, in Monkwell-street; Shaftesbury-house, late the Lon-

"Garter. I would not have you surprised at this expression, or think it at all too assuming. The Sovereigns of that Order have not distanced our sellowship, and there have been times when Emperors were also Free Masons. What from Mr. Ashmole's collection I could gather was, that the report of our Society taking rife from a bull granted by the pope in the reign of Herry VI, to so some Italian architects, to travel over all Europe to erect chajels, was ill-sounded. Such a bull there was, and those architects were Masons; but this bull, in the opinion of the learned Mr. Ashmole, was confirmative only, and did not by any means create our fraternity, or even establish them in this kingdom. Eut as to the time and manner of that establishment, something I shall relate from the same collections.

"St. Alban, the proto-martyr, established Masonry here, and from his time it flourished, more or less, according as the world "went, down to the days of king Athelstane, who, for the sake " of his brother Edwin, granted the Masons a charter. Under our "Norman princes they frequently received extraordinary marks of "royal favour. There is no doubt to be made, that the skill of " Masons, which was always transcendently great, even in the most "barbarous times; their wonderful kindness and attachment to " each other, how different foever in condition; and their inviolable 44 fidelity in keeping religiously their secrets; must have exposed "them, in ignorant, troublesome, and superstitious times, to a vast " variety of adventures, according to the different state of parties, "and other alterations in government. By the way, it may be " noted, that the Masons were always loyal, which exposed them " to great severities when power wore the appearance of justice, and those who committed treason punished true men as traitors. Thus, 46 in the 3d year of Henry VI. an act passed to abolish the society " of Masons, and to hinder, under grievous penalties, the holding 46 chapters, lodges, or other regular affemblies; yet this act was " afterwards [virtually] repealed; and even before that, king Henry " and feveral lords of his court became fellows of the craft."

don lying-in hospital for married women, in Aldersgate-street; Bedford-house in Bloomsburysquare, which is now taken down to make room for the new buildings in the improvement of the Duke of Bedford's town estate; Berkley-house, Piccadilly, lately burnt, and rebuilt, now in the possession of the duke of Devonshire; and Yorkstairs, at Thames, &c. Beside these, he designed Gunnersbury-house near Brentsord; Wilton-house in Wiltshire; Castle-abbey in Northamptonshire; Stoke-park; part of the quadrangle at St. John's, Oxford; Charlton-house, and Cobham-hall, in Kent; Coles-hill in Berkshire; and the Grange in Hampshire.

The breaking out of the civil wars obstructed the progress of Masonry in England for some time; but after the Restoration, it began to revive under the patronage of Charles II. who had been received into the Order during his exile*.

On the 27th December 1663, a general affembly was held, at which Henry Jermyn, earl of St. Alban's, was elected Grand Master; who appointed Sir John Denham knt. his deputy, and Mr. (afterwards Sir) Christopher Wren +, and John

Some lodges in the reign of Charles II, were constituted by leave of the feveral noble Grand Masters, and many gentlemen and famous scholars requested at this time to be admitted among the fraternity.

† He was the only fon of Dr. Christopher Wren, dean of Windfor, and was born in 1632. His genius for arts and Liences appeared early. At the age of thirteen, he invented a new astronomical instrument, by the name of Pan-organum, and wrote a treatise on the origin of rivers. He invented a new pneumatic engine, and a peculiar instrument of use in gnomonics, to solve this problem, viz. On a Webb, his wardens. Several useful regulations* were made at this affembly, for the better govern-known plane, in a known elevation, to deferibe such lines with the expedite turning of rundles to certain divitions, as by the shadow the ftyle may show the equal hours of the day.' In 1645, at the age of 14, he was admitted a gentleman commoner in Wadham college, Oxon, where he greatly improved under the inftructions and friendship of Dr. John Wilkins and Dr. Seth Ward, who were gentlemen of great learning, and afterward promoted by king Charles II. to the mitre. His other hum rous juvenile p oductions in mathematics, prove him to be a tchelar of the highest eminence. affifted Dr. Scarborough in anatomical preparations, and experiments upon the mufcles of the human body; whence are dated the first introduction of geometrical and mechanical speculations in anatomy. He wrote discourses on the longitude; on the variations of the magnetical needle; de re nautica veterum; how to find the velocity of a thip in failing; of the improvements of gallies; and how to recover wrecks. Beside these, he treated on the convenient way of using artillery on shipboard; how to build on deep water; how to build a mole into the fea, without Puzzolan dust, or cisterns; and of the improvement of river navigation, by the joining of rivers. In short, the works of this excellent genius appear-to'be rather the united efforts of a whole century, than the production of one man-

* Among other regulations made at this affembly were the following:

I. That no person, of what degree soever, be made or accepted a Free-Mason unless in a regular lodge, whereof one to be a Master for a Warden in that limit or division where such lodge is kept, and another to be a crastinan in the trade of Free-Masonry.

4. That no person hereaster shall be accepted a Free-Mason, but such as are of able body, honest parentage, good reputation, and an observer of the laws of the land.

43. That no perfen hereafter who shall be accepted a Free-Mason, shall be admitted into any lodge or affembly, until he has brought a certificate of the time and place of his acceptation from the slodge that accepted him, unto the Master of that limit or division where such lodge is kept. And the said Master shall enroll the same in a roll of parchment to be kept for that purpose, and shall give an account of a liuch acceptations at every general affembly.

4. That every perion who is now a Free Mason, shall bring to 4 the Master a note of the time of his acceptation, to the end the ment of the lodges, and the greatest harmony prevailed among the brethren at their various meetings.

Thomas Savage, earl of Rivers, having fucceeded the earl of St. Alban's in the office of Grand Master in June 1666, Sir Christopher Wren was appointed deputy under his lordship, in which office he distinguished himself more than any of his predecessors, in promoting the prosperity of the few lodges that occasionally met at this time; particularly the old lodge at St. Paul's*, now the lodge of Antiquity, which he patronized upwards of 18 years. The honours which this celebrated character afterwards received in the society, are evident proofs of the attachment of the fraternity toward him.

- fame may be enrolled in such priority of place as the brother deferves; and that the whole company and fellows may the better know each other.
- 6 5. That for the future the faid fraternity of Free-Masons shall be regulated and governed by one Grand Master, and as many Wardens as the said Society shall think fit to appoint at every annual general affembly.
- 6. That no person shall be accepted, unless he be twenty-one years old, or more.

Several records of the fociety of this and the preceding reign were loft at the Revolution; and not a few were too haftily burnt in our own times by fome forupulous brothers, from a fear of making discoveries prejudicial to the interests of the Order.

It appears from the records of the Lodge of Antiquity, that Mr. Wren at this time attended the meetings regularly, and that, during his prefidency, he prefented to that lodge, three mahogany candlefticks, which are fill preferved, and highly prized, as a memora of the efteem of the honourable donor.

SECT. VI.

The History of Masonry in England from the Fire of London*, to the Accession of George I.

THE year 1666 afforded a fingular and awful occasion for the utmost exertion of Masonic abilities. The city of London which had been visited in the preceding year by the plague, to whose ravages, it is computed, above 100,000 of its inhabitants fell a facrifice+, had fcarcely recovered from the alarm of that dreadful contagion, when a general conflagration reduced the greatest part of the city within the walls to ashes. This dreadful fire broke out on the 2d of September, at the house of a baker in Pudding-lane, a wooden building, pitched on the outfide, as were also all the rest of the houses in that narrow lane. The house being filled with faggots and brush-wood, soon added to the rapidity of the flames, which raged with fuch fury as to fpread four ways at once.

* For many of the particulars contained in this Section, I am indebted to Mr. Noorthouck's edition of the Book of Confitutions, published in 1784; which, much to the honour of that gentleman, is executed in a masterly manner, and interspersed with several judicious remarks.

† The streets were at this time narrow, crooked, and incommodious; the houses built chiefly of wood, close, dark, and ill-contrived; with several stories projecting beyond each other as they rose, over the contracted streets. Thus the free circulation of air was obstructed, the people breathed a stagnant and unwholesome element, replete with soul effluvia, sufficient of itself to generate putrid disorders. From this circumstance, the inhabitants were continually exposed to contagious disorders, and the buildings to the ravages of fire.

Jonas Moore and Ralph Gatrix, who were appointed surveyors on this occasion to examine the ruins, reported, that the fire over-ran 373 acres within the walls, and burnt 13,000 houses, 89 parish churches, besides chapels, leaving only 11 parishes standing. The Royal Exchange, Customhouse, Guildhall, Blackwell-hall, St. Paul's cathedral, Bridewell, the two compters, fifty-two city companies halls, and three city gates, were all demolished. The damage was computed at 10,000,000l. sterling *.

After so sudden and extensive a calamity, it became necessary to adopt some regulations to guard against any fuch catastrophe in future. It was therefore determined, that in all the new buildings to be erected, stone and brick should be substituted in the room of timber. The King and the Grand Master immediately ordered deputy Wren to draw up the plan of a new city, with broad and regular Dr. Christopher Wren was appointed furveyor-general and principal architect for rebuilding the city, the cathedral of St. Paul, and all the parochial churches enacted by parliament, in lieu of those that were destroyed, with other public structures. This gentleman, conceiving the charge too important for a fir le person, selected Mr. Robert Hook, professor of geometry in Gresham college, to assist him; who was immediately employed in measuring, adjusting, and setting out the ground of the private streets to the several proprietors. Dr. Wren's model and plan were laid before the king and the house of commons, and the practicability of the whole scheme, without the infringement of property, clearly demonstrated: it unfortunately happened, however, that the greater part of the citizens were absolutely averse to alter their old possessions, and to recede from building their houses again on the old foundations. Many were unwilling to give up their properties into the hands of public trustees, till they fhould receive an equivalent of more advantage; while others expressed distrust. Every means were tried to convince the citizens, that by removing all the church-yards, gardens, &c. to the outskirts of the city, fufficient room would be given to augment the streets, and properly to dispose of the churches, halls, and other public buildings, to the perfect fatisfaction of every proprietor; but the representation of all these improvements had no weight. The citizens chose to have their old city again, under all its difadvantages, rather than a new one, the principles of which they were unwilling to understand, and considered as innovations. Thus an opportunity was loft, of making the new city the most magnificent, as well as the most commodious for health and trade, of any in Europe. The architect, cramped in the execution of his plan, was obliged to abridge his scheme, and exert his utmost labour, skill, and ingenuity, to model the city in the manner in which it has fince appeared.

* Anderson's History of Commerce, vol. ii. p. 130.

On the 23d of October 1667, the king in perfon levelled in form the foundation-stone of thenew Royal Exchange, now allowed to be the finest in Europe; and on the 28th September 1669, it was opened by the lord mayor and aldermen. Round the inside of the square, above the arcades, and between the windows, are the statues of the sovereigns of England. In the centre of the square, is erected the king's statue to the life, in a Cæsarean habit of white marble, executed in a masterly manner by Mr. Gibbons, then grand warden of the Society.

In 1668, the Custom-house for the port of London, situated on the south side of Thames-street, was built, adorned with an upper and lower order of architecture. In the latter, are stone columns, and entablement of the Tuscan order: and in the former, are pilasters, entablature, and sive pediments of the Ionic order. The wings are elevated on columns, forming piazzas; and the length of the building is 189 feet; its breadth in the middle, 27; and at the west end, 60 feet.

This year also, deputy Wren and his warden Webb finished the Theatrum Sheldonium at Oxford, designed and executed at the private expence of Gilbert Sheldon, archbishop of Canterbury, an excellent architect, and able designer. On the 9th of July 1669, the capestone of this elegant building was celebrated with joy and festivity by the craftsmen, and an elegant oration delivered on the occasion by Dr. South.

Deputy Wren, at the fame time, built, at the expence of the University, that other master-piece of architecture, the pretty museum near this theatre.

In 1671, Mr. Wren began to build that great fluted column called the Monument, in memory of the burning and rebuilding of the city of London. This stupendous pillar was finished in 1677. It is 24 feet higher than Trajan's pillar at Rome, and built of Portland stone, of the Doric order. Its altitude, from the ground, is 202 feet; the greatest diameter of the shaft or body of the column, 15 feet; the ground plinth, or bottom of the pedestal, 28 feet square; and the pedestal, 40 feet high. Over the capital, is an iron balcony, encompassing a cone 32 feet high, supporting blazing urn of gilt brass. Within is a large staircase of black marble, containing 345 steps, each step ten inches and an half broad, and six inches thick. The west side of the pedestal is adorned with curious emblems, by the masterly hand of Mr. Cibber, father to the late poet-laureat Colley Cibber; in which eleven principal figures are done in alto, and the rest in basso relievo. That to which the eye is particularly directed, is a female, reprefenting the City of London, fitting in a languishing posture, on a heap of ruins. Behind her, is Time, gradually raising her up; and at her side, a woman, representing Providence, gently touching her with one hand, while, with a winged sceptre in the other, she directs her to regard two goddesses in the clouds; one with a cornucopia, denoting Plenty; the other, with a palm branch, the emblem of Peace. At her feet is a bee-hive, to fhew that, by industry and application, the greatest misfortunes may be overcome. Behind Time, are the Citizens, exulting at his endeavours to restore her; and beneath, in the midst of the ruins, is a dragon, the supporter of the city arms, who endeavours to preserve them with his paw. At the north end, is a view of the City in flames, the inhabitants in consternation, with their arms extended upward, crying for affiftance. Opposite the City, on an elevated pavement, stands the King, in a Roman habit, with a laurel on his head, and a truncheon in his hand; who, on approaching her, commands three of his attendants to descend to her relief. The first represents the Sciences, with a winged head, and circle of naked boys dancing thereon, and holding Nature in her hand, with her numerous breasts, ready to give assistance to The second is Architecture, with a plan in one hand, and a square and pair of compasses in the other. The third is Liberty, waving a hat in the air, and shewing her joy at the pleasing profpect of the City's speedy recovery. Behind the King, stands his brother, the duke of York, with a garland in one hand, to crown the rifing city, and a fword in the other for her defence. The two figures behind them, are Justice and Fortitude: the former with a coronet, and the latter with a reined lion; while, under the pavement, in a vault. appears Envy gnawing a heart. In the upper part of the back ground, the re-construction of the city is represented by scaffolds and unfinished houses, with builders at work on them. The north and fouth fides of the pedestal have each a Latin inscription, one describing the desolation of the city, the other its restoration. The east side of the pedestal has an inscription, expressing the time in which the pillar was begun, continued, and brought to perfection. In one line continued round the base, are these words: "This pillar was set up in perpetual remembrance of the most dread-the ful burning of this Protestant city, begun and arried on by the treachery and malice of the Popish saction, in the beginning of September in the year of our Lord 1666, in order to the carrying on their horrid plot for extirpating the Protestant religion, and old English liberty, and introducing popery and slavery." This inscription, upon the duke of York's accession to the erown, was erased; but, soon after the Revolution, restored again.

The rebuilding of the city of London was vigoroully profecuted, and the restoration of St. Paul's cathedral claimed particular attention. Dr. Wren drew feveral defigns, to discover what would be most acceptable to the general taste; and finding persons of all degrees declare for magnificence and grandeur, he formed a defign according to the very best stile of Greek and Roman architecture, and caused a large model of it to be made in wood; but the bishops deciding that it was not sufficiently in the cathedral stile, the surveyor was ordered to amend it, and he then produced the scheme of the present structure, which was honoured with the king's approbation. The original model, however, which was only of the Corinthian order, like St. Peter's at Rome, is still kept in an apartment of the cathedral, as a real curiofity.

In 1673, the foundation-stone * of this magnificent cathedral, defigned by deputy Wren, was

The mallet with which the king levelled this foundation-stone, was delivered by Sir Christopher Wren to the old lodge of St. Paul, laid in folemn form by the King, attended by Grand Master Rivers, his architects and craftsmen, in the presence of the nobility and gentry, the lord mayor and aldermen, the bishops and clergy, &c. During the whole time this structure was building, Mr. Wren acted as master of the work and surveyor, and was ably assisted by his wardens, Mr. Edward Strong and his son.

St. Paul's cathedral is planned in the form of a long cross; the walls are wrought in rustic, and strengthened, as well as adorned, by two rows of coupled pilasters, one over the other; the lower Corinthian, and the upper Composite. The spaces between the arches of the windows, and the architecture of the lower order, as well as those above, are filled with a variety of enrichments.

The west front is graced with a most magnificent portico, a noble pediment, and two stately turrets. There is a grand slight of steps of black marble that extend the whole length of the portico, which consists of twelve lofty Corinthian columns below, and eight of the Composite order above; these are all coupled and fluted. The upper series support a noble pediment, crowned with its acroteria; and in this pediment is an elegant representation in bas relief of the conversion of St. Paul, executed by Mr. Bird, an artist whose name, on account of this piece alone, is worthy of being transmitted to posterity. The figures are well executed: the magnificent sigure of St. Paul, on the apex of the pediment, with St. Peter on his right, and St. James now the Lodge of Antiquity, where it is fill preferved as a great curiofity.

___

on his left, produce a fine effect. The four Evangelists, with their proper emblems, on the front of the towers, are judiciously disposed, and skilfully finished; St. Matthew is distinguished by an angel; St. Mark, by a lion; St. Luke, by an ox; and St. John, by an eagle.

To the north portico, there is an ascent by twelve circular steps of black marble, and its dome is supported by fix grand Corinthian columns. Upon the dome is a well-proportioned urn, finely ornamented with sestions; over the urn is a pediment, supported by pilasters in the wall, in the sace of which are carved the royal arms, with the regalia supported by angels. Statues of sive of the apostles are placed on the top, at proper distances.

The fouth portice answers to the north, and, like that, is supported by fix noble Corinthian columns; but as the ground is confiderably lower on this fide of the church than the other, the afcent is by a flight of twenty-five steps. This portico has also a pediment above, in which is a phœnix rising out of the flames, with the motto, RESUR-GAM, underneath it; as an emblem of rebuilding the church. A curious accident is faid to have given rife to this device, which was particularly observed by the architect as a favourable omen. When Dr. Wren was marking out the dimensions of the building, and had fixed on the centre of the great dome, a common labourer was ordered to bring him a flat stone from among the rubbish, to leave as a direction to the masons. The stone which the man brought happened to be a piece of a grave-stone, with nothing remaining of the inscription but this single word, in large capitals, RESURGAM; and this circumstance left an impression on Dr. Wren's mind, that could never afterwards be erased. On this side of the building are likewise sive statues, which correspond with those on the apex of the north pediment.

At the east end of the church is a sweep, or circular projection, for the altar, finely ornamented with the orders, and with sculpture; particularly a noble piece in honour of king William III.

The dome, which rifes in the centre of the whole, is fuperlatively grand. Twenty feet above the roof of the church is a circular range of thirty-two columns, with niches placed exactly against others within. These are terminated by their entablature, which supports a handsome gallery, adorned with a balustrade. Above these columns is a range of pilasters, with windows between; and from the entablature of these, the diameter decreases very confiderably; and two feet above that, it is again contracted. From this part the external sweep of the dome begins, and the arches meet at 52 feet above. On the fummit of the dome, is an elegant balcony, and from its centre rifes the lantern, adorned with Corinthian columns. The whole is terminated by a ball, on which stands a cross, both of which are elegantly gilt.

This noble fabric is furrounded, at a proper distance, by a dwarf stone-wall, on which is placed the most magnificent balustrade of cast iron perhaps in the universe, four feet six inches in height, exclusive of the wall. In this inclosure are seven beautiful iron gates, which together with the ba-lustres, in number about 2500, weigh 200 tons and 85 pounds.

In the centre of the area of the grand west front, on a pedestal of excellent workmanship, stands a statue of queen Anne, formed of white marble, with proper decorations. The sigures on the base represent Britannia, with her spear; Gallia, with the crown in her lap; Hibernia, with her harp; and America, with her bow. These, and the colossal statues with which the church is adorned, were executed by the ingenious Mr. Hill.

A first regard to the fituation of this cathedral, due east and west, has given it an oblique appearance with respect to Ludgate-street in front; so that the great front gate in the surrounding iron rails, being made to regard the street in front, rather than the church to which it belongs, the statue of queen Anne, that is exactly in the middle of the west front, is thrown on one side the straight approach from the gate to the church, and gives an idea of the whole edifice being awry.

Under the grand portico, at the west end, are three doors, ornamented at the top with bas relief. The middle door, which is by far the largest, is cased with white marble, and over it is a fine piece of basso relievo, in which St. Paul is represented preaching to the Bereans. On entering the door, the mind is struck by the extent of the vista. An arcade, supported by losty and massy pillars on each hand, divides the church into the body and two aisles; and the view is terminated by the altar at the extremity of the choir; subject, nevertheless, to the intervention of the organ standing across, which forms a heavy obstruction. The pillars are adorned with columns and pilasters of the Corinethian and Composite orders; and the arches of the roof are enriched with shields, festoons, chaplets, and other ornaments. In the aisle, on one hand, is the consistory; and opposite, on the other, the morning prayer chapel. These have very beautiful screens of carved wainscot, which are much admired.

Over the centre, where the great aifles cross each other, is the grand cupola, or dome, the vast concave of which inspires a pleasing awe. Under its centre is fixed in the floor, a brass plate, round which the pavement is beautifully variegated; but the figures into which it is formed, can no where be so well seen as from the whispering-gallery above. Here the spectator has at once a full view of the organ, richly ornamented with carved work, and the entrance to the choir directly under it. The two aisles on the sides of the choir, as well as the choir itself, are inclosed with very fine iron rails and gates.

The altar-piece is adorned with four noble fluted pilasters, painted and veined with gold, in imitation of lapis lazuli, and their capitals are double gilt. In the intercolumniations below, are nine marble pannels, and above are fix windows, in the two series. The floor of the whole church is paved with marble; and within the rails of the altar, with porphyry, polished, and laid in several geometrical figures.

In the great cupola, which is 108 feet in diameter, the architect feems to have imitated the Pantheon at Rome, excepting that the upper order is there only umbratile, and diftinguished by different coloured marbles; while, in St. Paul's, it is extant out of the wall. The Pantheon is no higher within than its diameter; St. Peter's is two diameters; the former shews its concave too low. the latter too high: St. Paul's is proportioned between both, and therefore shews its concave every way, and is very lightfome by the windows of the upper order. These strike down the light through the great colonnade that encircles the dome without. and serve for the abutment, which is brick of the thickness of two bricks; but as it rises every way five feet high, it has a course of excellent brick of 18 inches long, banding through the whole thickness; and, to make it still more secure, it is surrounded with a vast chain of iron, strongly linked together at every ten feet. This chain is let into à channel, cut into the bandage of Portland stone, and defended from the weather by filling the groove with lead. The concave was turned upon a centre. which was judged necessary to keep the work true: but the centre was laid without any standards below for support. Every story of the scaffolding being circular, and the ends of all the ledgers meeting as fo many rings, and truly wrought, it supported itself.

As the old church of St. Paul had a lofty spire, Dr. Wren was obliged to give his building an altitude that might secure it from suffering by the comparison. To do this, he made the dome without, much higher than within, by raising a strong brick cone over the internal cupola, so constructed as to support an elegant stone lantern on the apex. This brick cone is supported by a cupola formed of timber, and covered with lead: between which and the cone are easy stairs, up to the lantern. Here the spectator may view contrivances that are truly aftonishing. The outward cupola is only ribbed, which the architect thought less Gothic than to stick it full of fuch little lights as are in the cupola of St. Peter's, that could not without difficulty be mended, and, if neglected, might foon damage the timbers. As the architect was fenfible that paintings are liable to decay, he intended to have beautified the infide of the cupola with mosaic work; which, without the least fading of colours, would be as durable as the building itself: but in this he was over-ruled, though he had undertaken to procure four of the most eminent artists in that profession from Italy, for the purpose. part, therefore, is now decorated by the pencil of Sir James Thornhill, who has represented the principal passages of St. Paul's life, in eight compartments. These paintings are all seen to advantage by means of a circular opening, through which the light is transmitted with admirable effect from the lantern above; but they are now cracked, and fadly decayed.

Divine service was performed in the choir of this cathedral for the first time on the thanksgiving day for the peace of Ryswick, Dec. 2, 1697*; and the last stone on the top of the lantern laid by Mr. Christopher Wren, the son of the architect, in 1710. This noble fabric, losty enough to be discerned at sea eastward, and at Windsor to the west, was begun and completed in the space of 35 years, by one architect, the great Sir Christopher Wren; one principal mason, Mr. Strong; and under one bishop of London, Dr. Henry Compton: whereas St. Peter's at Rome was 155 years in building, under twelve successive architects, assisted by the police and interest of the Roman see, and attended by the best artists in sculpture, statuary, painting, and mosaic work.

. Howell's Medulla, Hift Ang.

The various parts of this fuperb edifice I have been thus particular in describing, as it reslects honour on the ingenious architect who built it, and as there is not an instance on record of any work of equal magnitude having ever been completed by one man.

While the cathedral of St. Paul's was carrying on, as a national undertaking, the citizens did not neglect their own immediate concerns, but restored such of their halls and gates as had been destroyed. In April 1675, was laid the foundation-stone of the present Bethlehem-hospital for lunatics, in Moorsields. This is a magnificent building, 540 feet long, and 40 broad, beside the two wings, which were not added until several years afterward. The middle and ends of the edifice project a little, and are adorned with pitasters, entablatures, foliages, &c. which, rising above the rest of the building, have each a stat roof, with a hand-some balustrade of stone. In the centre is an elegant turret, adorned with a clock, gilt ball, and vane. The whole building is brick and stone, inclosed by a handsome wall, 680 feet long, of the same materials. In the centre of the wall is a large pair of iron gates; and on the piers on which these are hung, are two images, in a reclining posture, one representing raving, the other melancholy, madness. The expression of these figures is admirable; and they are the workmanship of Mr. Cibber, the father of the laureat, before mentioned.

Digitized by Google

The college of Physicians also, about this time, discovered some taste in erecting their college in Warwick-lane, which, though little known, is esteemed by good judges a delicate building.

'The fraternity were now fully employed; and by them the following parish churches, which had been consumed by the great fire, were gradually rebuilt, or repaired:

Althallows, Bread-street, finished 1694; and the fleeple com-

Allhallows the Great, Thames-Street, 1683.

Allialiows, Lombard ftrect, 1694.

St. Alban, Wood-ftreet, 1685

Sr. Anne and Agnes, St. Anne's lane, Aldersgate-street, 1680.

St. Andrew's Wardrobe, Puddledock-hill, 1602.

St. Andrew's, Holborn, 1687.

St. Anthony's, Watling-ftreet, 1682.

St. Augustin's, Watling,ftreet, 1683; and the fteople finished 1695.

St. Bartholemew's, Royal Exchange, 1679,

St. Benedich, Grace-church-street, 1685. St. Benedich's, Threadneedle-street, 1673.

St. Bennet's, Paul's Wharf, Thames-ftreet, 1683.

St. Bride's, Fleet-Areet, 1680; and farther adorned in 1699,

Christ-church, Newgate-ftreet, 1687.

St. Christopher's, Threadneedle-street, (fince taken down to make soom for the Bank,) repaired in 1696.

Digitized by GOOGLE

St. Clement Danes, in the Strand, taken down 1680, and rebuilt by Sir Christopher Wren, 1682.

St. Clement's, East Cheap, St. Clement's lane, 1686.

St. Dennis Back, Lime-ftreet, 1674.

St. Dunstan's in the East, Tower-street, repaired in 1698.

St. Edmond's the King, Lombard-fireet, rebuilt in 1674.

St. George, Botolph-lane, 1674.

St. James, Garlick-hill, 1683.

St. James, Westminster, 1675.

St. Lawrence Jewry, Cateaton-street, 1677.

St. Magnus, London bridge, 1676; and the steeple int 705.

St. Margaret, Lothbury, 1690.

St. Margaret Pattens, Little Tower freet, 1687

St Martin's Ludgate, 1684.

St. Mary Abchurch, Abchurch-lane, 1686.

St. Mary's-at-hill, St. Mary's hill, 1672.

St. Mary's Aldermary, Bow-lane, 1672.

St. Mary Magdalen, Old Fish Arect, 1685. St. Mary Somerset, Queenhithe, Thames-Arect, 1682.

St. Mary le Bow, Cheapside, 1683. This church was built on the wall of a very ancient one in the early time of the Roman colony; the roof is arched, and supported with ten Corinthian columns; but the principal ornament is the steeple, which is deemed an admirable piece of architecture, not to be paralleled by that of any other parochial church. It rifes from the ground a fquare tower, plain at bottom, and is carried up to a confiderable height in this shape, but with more ornament as it advances. The principal decoration of the lower part is the door-case; a lofty, noble arch, faced with a bold and well-wrought ruftic, raifed on a plain foild course from the foundation. Within the arch, is a portal of the Doric order, with well-proportioned columns; the frieze is ornamented with triglyphs, and with sculpture in the metopes. There are for e other flight ornaments in this part, which is terminated by an elegant cornice, over which rifes a plain course, from which the dial pr j. cls. Above this, in each face, there is an arched window, with lonic pilafters at the fides. The entablature of the order is well-wrought; it has the fwelling frieze, and supports on the cornice an elegant balustrade, with Attic pillars over Ionic columns. These sustain elegant scrol s, on which are placed ugns with flames, and from this part the steeple rises circular. There is a plain course to the height of half the scrolls, and upon this is raifed an elegant circular feries of Corinthian columns. Thefe fupport a fecond balustrade with scrolls; and above there is placed another series of columns of the Composite order; while, from the entablature, rises a set of scrolls supporting the spire, which is placed on balls, and terminated by a globe, on which is fixed a vane.

St. Mary Woolnoth's, Lombard street, repaired in 1677.

St. Mary, Aldermanbury, rebuilt 1677.

St. Matthew, Friday-ftreet, 1685.

St. Michael, Bafinghall-ftreet, 1679.

St. Michael Royal, College hill, 1694.

St. Michael, Queenhithe, Trinity-lane, 1677.

St Michael, Wood ftreet, 1675.

St. Michael, Crooked-lane, 1688.

St. Michael, Cornhill, 1672.

St. Mildred, Bread ftreet, 1683.

St. Mildred, Poultry, 1676;

St. Nicholas, Cole abbey, Old Fish-street, 1677.

St. Olave's Old Jewry, 1673.

St. Peter's, Cornhill, 1681.

St. Sepulchre's, Snow-hill, 1670. St. Stephen's, Coleman-freet, 1676.

St. Stephen's, Walbrook, behind the Mansion-house, 1676. Many encomiums have been bestowed on this church for its interior beauties. The dome is finely proportioned to the church, and divided into small compartments, decorated with great elegance, and crowned with a lantern; the roof is also divided into compartments, and supported by noble Corinthian columns raised on their pedestals. This church has three aisses and a cross aisse, is 75 feet long, 36 broad, 34 high, and 58 to the fartern. It is samous all over Europe, and justly reputed the master-piece of Sir Christopher Wren. There is not a beauty of which the plan would admit, that is not to be found here in its greatest perfection.

St. Swithin's, Canon-Arcet, 1673.

St. Vedaft, Foiter-lane, 1697.

While these churches, and other public buildings, were going forward under the direction of Sir Christopher Wren, king Charles did not confine his improvements to England alone, but commanded Sir William Bruce, Bart. Grand Master of Scotland, to rebuild the palace of Holyrood-house at Edinburgh; which was accordingly executed by that architect in the best Augustan stile.

During the profecution of the great works above described, the private business of the Society was not neglected; lodges were held at different places, and many new ones constituted, to which the best architects resorted.

In 1674, the earl of Rivers refigned the office of Grand Master, and was succeeded by George Villiers, duke of Buckingham. He left the care of the brethren to his wardens, and Sir Christopher Wren, who still continued to act as deputy. In 1679, the duke refigned in favour of Henry Bennet, earl of Arlington. Though this nobleman was too deeply engaged in state-affairs to attend to the duties of Masonry, the lodges continued to meet regularly under his sanction, and many respectable gentlemen joined the fraternity.

On the death of the king in 1685, James II. fucceeded to the throne; during whose reign the fraternity were much neglected. The earl of Arlington dying this year, the lodges met in communication, and elected Sir Christopher Wren Grand Master, who appointed Gabriel Cibber and Mr. Edward Strong * his wardens. Masonry continued in a declining state for many years, and a few lodges only occasionally met in different places.

.....Google

• Foth these gentlemen were members of the old lodge of St. Paul with Sir Christopher Wren, and bore a principal share in all the improvements which took place after the fire of London ; the latter in particular displayed his abilities in the cathedral of St. Paul.

At the Revolution, the Society was fo much-reduced in the South of England, that no more than feven regular lodges met in London and its fuburbs, of which two only were worthy of notice; the old lodge of St. Paul's, over which Sir Christopher had presided during the building of that structure; and a lodge at St. Thomas's-hospital, Southwark, over which Sir Robert Clayton, then lord mayor of London, presided, during the rebuilding of that hospital *.

King William having been privately initiated into Masonry in 1695, approved the choice of Sir Christopher Wren as Grand Master, and honoured the lodges with his royal fanction; particularly one at Hampton Court, at which it is said his majesty frequently presided during the building of the new part of that palace. Kensington palace was built during this reign, under the direction of Sir Christopher; as were also Chessea hospital, and the palace of Greenwich; the latter of which had been recently converted into an hospital for seamen, and sinished after the design of Inigo Jones.

At a general affembly and feast of the Masons in 1697, many noble and eminent brethren were present; and among the rest, Charles duke of Richmond and Lenox, who was at that time Master of the lodge at Chichester. His grace was proposed and elected Grand Master for the following year; and having engaged Sir. Christopher Wren to act as his deputy, he appointed Edward Strong senior and Edward Strong junior his wardens. His grace continued in office only one year, and was succeeded by Sir Christopher, who continued at the head of the fraternity till the death of the king in 1702.

See the Book of Constitutions, 1738, p, 106, 197.

During the following reign, Masonry made no confiderable progress. Sir Christopher's age and infirmities drawing off his attention from the duties of his office, the lodges decreafed, and the annual festivals were entirely neglected *. The old lodge at St. Paul's, and a few others, continued to meet regularly, but confifted of few members +. increase their numbers, a proposition was made, and afterwards agreed to, that the privileges of Masonry should no longer be restricted to operative Masons, but extend to men of various professions, provided they were regularly approved and initiated into the Order. In consequence of this resolution, many new regulations took place, and the Society once more rose into notice and esteem.

SECT. VII.

History of the Revival of Masonry in the South of England.

On the acceffion of George I. the Masons in London and its environs, finding themselves deprived of Sir Christopher Wren, and their annual meetings discontinued, resolved to cement under a new Grand Master, and to revive the communications and annual festivals of the Society. With this view, the lodges at the Goose and Gridiron in St. Paul's Church-yard, the Crown in Parker's-

Book of Conftitutions, 1738, p. 108. † Ibid.

lane near Drury-lane, the Apple-tree tavern in Charles-street Covent-Garden, and the Rummer and Grapes tavern in Channel-row Westminster, the only four lodges in being in the fouth of England at that time, with some other old brethren. met at the Apple-tree tavern above-mentioned in February 1717; and having voted the oldest Master-mason then present into the chair, constituted themselves a Grand Lodge pro tempore in due form. At this meeting it was resolved to revive the quarterly communications of the fraternity: and to hold the next annual affembly and feast on the 24th of June, at the Goose and Gridiron in St. Paul's Church-vard, (in compliment to the oldest lodge, which then met there,) for the purpose of electing a Grand Master among themfelves, till they should have the honour of a noble brother at their head. Accordingly, on St. John the Baptist's day 1717, in the third year of the reign of king George I., the affembly and feast were held at the faid house; when the oldest Master-mason, and the Master of a lodge, having taken the chair, a list of proper candidates for the office of Grand Master was produced: and the names being separately proposed, the brethren, by a great majority of hands, elected Mr. Anthony Saver Grand Master of Masons for the ensuing year; who was forthwith invested by the said oldest Master, installed by the Master of the oldest lodge. and duly congratulated by the affembly, who paid him homage. The Grand Master then entered on the duties of his office, appointed his Wardens, and commanded the brethren of the four lodges to meet him and his Wardens quarterly in communication, enjoining them at the same time to recommend to all the fraternity a punctual attendance on the next annual assembly and feast.

Among a variety of regulations which were proposed and agreed to at this meeting, was the following; "That the privilege of affembling as Mafons, which had been hitherto unlimited*, should be vested in certain lodges or assemblies of Masons convened in certain places; and that every lodge to be hereafter convened, except the four old lodges at this time existing, should be legally authorised to act by a warrant from the Grand Master for the time being, granted to certain individuals by petition, with the confent and approbation of the Grand Lodge in communication; and that without such warrant no lodge should be hereafter deemed regular or constitutional." In consequence of this regulation, feveral new lodges were foon after convened in different parts of London and its environs, and the Masters and Wardens of these ledges were commanded to attend the meetings of the Grand Lodge, make a regular report of their proceedings, and transmit to the Grand Master, from time to time, a copy of any bye-laws they might form for their own government; that no laws established among them might be contrary to.

A fufficient number of Masons met together within a certain district, with the consent of the sheriff or chief magistrate of the place, were empowered, at this time, to make Masons, and practise the rites of Masonry, without warrant of constitution. The privilege was inherent in themselves as individuals; and this privilege is still enjoyed by the two old lodges now extant, which act by immemorial constitution.

or subversive of, the general regulations by which the fraternity had been long governed, and which had been fanctioned by the four Lodges when convened as a Grand Lodge in 1717.

In compliment to the brethren of the four old lodges, by whom the Grand Lodge was first formed, it was refolved, "That every privilege which they collectively enjoyed by virtue of their immemorial rights, they should still continue to enjoy; and that no law, rule, or regulation to be hereafter made or passed in Grand Lodge, should ever deprive them of fuch privilege, or encroach on any landmark which was at that time established as the flandard of masonic government." This resolution being confirmed, the old Masons in the metropolis, agreeably to the resolutions of the brethren at large, vested all their inherent privileges as individuals in the four old lodges, in trust that they would never fuffer the old charges and ancient landmarks to be infringed. The four old lodges then agreed to extend their patronage to every lodge which should hereafter be constituted by the Grand Lodge according to the new regulations of the Society; and while fuch lodges acted in conformity to the ancient constitutions of the Order, to admit their Masters and Wardens to share with them all the privileges of the Grand Lodge, excepting precedence of rank.

Matters being thus amicably adjusted, the brethren of the four old lodges considered their attendance on the future communications of the Society as unnecessary; and therefore, like the other lodges, trusted implicitly to their Master and Wardens, resting satisfied that no measure of importance would be adopted without their approbation. The officers of the old lodges, however, foon began to discover, that the new lodges, being equally represented with them at the communications, might, in process of time, so far out-number the old ones, as to have it in their power, by a majority, to encroach on, or even subvert, the privileges of the original Masons of England, which had been centered in the four old lodges: with the concurrence of the brethren at large; therefore, they very wifely formed a code of laws for the future government of the Society, to which was annexed a conditional clause, which the Grand Master for the time being, his successors, and the Master of every lodge to be hereafter constituted; were bound to preserve inviolate in all time coming. To commemorate this circumstance, it has been customary since that time, for the Master of the oldest lodge to attend every Grand Installation; and taking precedence of all present, the Grand Master only excepted, to deliver the book of the original constitutions to the new installed Grand Master, on his engaging to support the ancient charges and general regulations. conditional clause above referred to, runs thus:

"Every annual Grand Lodge has an inherent power and authority to make new regulations, or to alter these, for the real benefit of this ancient fraternity; provided always THAT THE OLD LAND-MARKS BE CAREFULLY PRESERVED: and that such alterations and new regulations be proposed and agreed to at the third quarterly communication preceding the annual grand feaft; and that they be offered also to the persurf usual of all the brethren before dinner, in writing, even of the youngest apprentice; the approbation and consent of the majority of all the brethren present, being absolutely necessary to make the fame binding and obligatory."

This remarkable clause, with thirty-eight regulations preceding it, all of which are printed in the first edition of the Book of Constitutions, were approved, and confirmed by one hundred and fisty brethren, at an annual assembly and feast held at Stationers-hall on St. John the Baptist's day 1721*, and in their presence subscribed by the Master and Wardens of the four old lodges on the one part: and by Philip duke of Wharton, then Grand Master; Theophilus Desaguliers, M. D. and F. R. S. Deputy Grand Master; Joshua Timfon, and William Hawkins, Grand Wardens; and the Masters and Wardens of fixteen lodges which had been constituted between 1717 and 1721, on the other part.

By the above prudent precaution of our ancient brethren, the original constitutions were established as the basis of all future masonic jurisdiction in the south of England; and the ancient land-marks, as they are emphatically styled, or the boundaries set up as checks to innovation, were carefully secured against the attacks of suture invaders. The sour old lodges, in consequence of the above compact, in which they confidered themselves as a distinct party, continued to act by their original authority; and fo far from furrendering any of their rights, had them frequently ratified and confirmed by the whole fraternity in Grand Lodge affembled, who always acknowledged their independent and immemorial power to practife the rites of Masonry. No regulations of the Society which might hereafter take place could therefore operate with refpect to those lodges, if such regulations were contrary to, or subversive of, the original constitutions by which only they were governed; and while their proceedings were conformable to those constitutions, no power known in Masonry could legally deprive them of any right or privilege which they had ever enjoyed.

• See the first edition of the Book of Constitutions, p. 58.

The necessity of fixing the original constitutions as the standard by which all future laws in the Society are to be regulated, was fo clearly understood and defined by the whole fraternity at this time, that it was established as an unerring rule, at every installation, public and private, for many years afterwards, to make the Grand Master, and the Masters and Wardens of every lodge, engage to support the original constitutions; to the obfervance of which also, every Mason was bound at his initiation. Whoever acknowledges the univerfality of Masonry to be its highest glory, must admit the propriety of this conduct; for were no standard fixed for the government of the Society, Masonry might be exposed to perpetual variations, which would effectually destroy all the good effects that have hitherto refulted from its universality and extended progress *.

* When the earlier editions of this book were printed, the author was not sufficiently acquainted with this part of the history of Mafonry in England. The above particulars have been carefully extracted from old records and authentic manufcripts, and are in many points confirmed by the old books of the Lodge of Antiquity, as well as the first and second editions of the Book of Constitutions.

The following account of the four old lodges may prove acceptable to many readers:

- 1. The old lodge of St. Paul, now named the Lodge of Antiquity, No. 1, formerly held at the Goofe and Gridiron in St. Paul's Church yard, is fill extant, (in 1804,) and regularly meets at the Free-Masons Tavern in Great Queen-fiteet, Lincoln's inn Fields, on the fourth Wednesday of January, February, March, April, May, October, and November, every year. The lodge is in a very fourishing state, and possesses some valuable records and curious ancient relies.
- 2. The old lodge, No. 2, formerly held at the Crown in Parker's-lane in Drury-lane, has been extinct above fifty years, by the death of its members.
- 3. The old lodge, No. 3, formerly held at the Apple tree Tavern in Charles street, Covent Garden, has been diffored many years. By the list of Lodges inserted in the Book of Constitutions printed in 1738, it appears that, in February 1722-3, this lodge was removed to the Queen's Head in Knave's Acre, on account of some difference among its members, and that the members who met there, came under a new constitution; though, says the Book of Constitutions, they wanted it not, and ranked as No. 10, in the List. Thus they inconsiderably renounced their some rank under an immemorial constitution.
- 4. The lodge, No. 4. formerly held at the Rummer and Grapes Tavern, in Channe'-row, Westminster, was thence removed to the Horn Tavern in New Palace Yard, where it continued to meet regularly till within these sew years; when, finding themselves in a declining state, the members agreed to incorporate with a new and sourishing lodge under the constitution of the Grand Lodge, intitled the Somerset-bouse Lodge, which immediately assumed their rank.

It is a question that will admit of some discussion, whether any of the above old lodges can, while they exist as lodges, surrender their rights; as those rights seem to have been granted by the old Masons of the metropolis to them in trust; and any individual Member of

During the administration of Mr. Sayer, the Society made little progress. Several brethren joined the old lodges; but there appear to have been only two new lodges constituted under his auspices.

Mr. Sayer was succeeded in 1718, by George Payne esq.; who was very assiduous in recommending a strict observance of the communications. He collected many valuable manuscripts on the subject of Masonry, and being determined to spare no pains to make himself acquainted with the original government of the crast, he earnestly desired that the brethren would bring to the Grand Lodge any old writings or records concerning the fraternity, to shew the usages of ancient times. In consequence of this general intimation, several old copies of the Gothic constitutions were produced, arranged, and digested.

On the 24th of June 1719, another affembly and feast was held at the Goose and Gridiron before-mentioned, when Dr. Desaguliers was unanimously elected Grand Master. At this feast the old, regular, and peculiar toasts or healths of the Free-Masons were introduced; and from this time we may date the rise of Free-Masonry on its present plan in the South of England. The lodges, which had considerably increased by the vigilance of the Grand Master, were visited by many old the four old lodges might object to the furrender, and in that case they never could be given up. The four old lodges always preserved their original power of making, fussing, and raising Matons, being termed Masters Lodges; while the other lodges, for many years afterwards, had no such power, it having been the custom to sais and raise the Masons made by them at the Grand Lodge only.

Masons who had long neglected the craft, several noblemen were initiated, and a number of new lodges constituted.

At an affembly and feast held at the Goose and Gridiron on the 24th June 1720, George Payne esq. was re-elected Grand Master, and under his mild and vigilant administration the lodges continued to flourish.

This year, at some of the private lodges, to the irreparable loss of the fraternity, several valuable manuscripts, concerning the lodges, regulations, charges, secrets, and usages of Masons, (particularly one written by Mr. Nicholas Stone, the warden under Inigo Jones,) were too hastily burnt by some scrupulous brethren, who were alarmed at the intended publication of the masonic constitutions.

At a quarterly communication held this year at the Goose and Gridiron on the festival of St. John the Evangelist, it was agreed, That, in suture, the new Grand Master shall be named and proposed to the Grand Lodge some time before the feast *; and if approved, and present, he shall be saluted as Grand Master elect: and that every Grand Master, when he is installed, shall have the sole power of appointing his deputy and wardens, according to ancient custom.

At a Grand Lodge held in ample form on Ladyday 1721, brother Payne proposed for his successor, John duke of Montague, at that time Master of a lodge. His grace, being present, received the compliments of the Grand Lodge. The brethren expressed great joy at the prospect of being once more patronised by the nobility; and unanimously agreed, that the next assembly and feast should be held at Stationers'-hall; and that a proper number of stewards should be appointed to provide the entertainment. Mr. Josiah Villeneau, an upholder in the Borough, however, generously undertook the whole management of the business, and received the thanks of the Society for his attention.

* By an old record of the lodge of Antiquity, it appears that the new Grand Master was always proposed and presented for approbation in that lodge before his election in the Grand Lodge.

While Masonry was spreading its influence over the Southern part of the kingdom, it was not neglected in the North. The General Affembly, or Grand Lodge, at York continued regularly to meet as heretofore. In 1705, under the direction of Sir George Tempest bart, then Grand Master, feveral lodges met, and many worthy brethren were initiated in York and its neighbourhood. George being succeeded by the Right Hon. Robert Benson, lord mayor of York, a number of meetings of the fraternity was held at different times in that city, and the grand feast during his masterthip is faid to have been very brilliant. Sir William Robinson bart, succeeded Mr. Benson in the office of Grand Master, and the fraternity scem to have confiderably increased in the North under his auspices. He was succeeded by Sir Walter Hawkesworth bart, who governed the Society with great credit. At the expiration of his mastership. Sir George Tempest was elected a second time Grand Master; and from the time of his election in 1714 to 1725, the Grand Lodge continued regularly to affemble in York under the direction of Charles Fairfax efq. Sir Walter Hawkefworth bart. Edward Bell efq. Charles Bathurst efq. Edward Thomson efq. M. P. John Johnson M. D. and John Marsden efq. all of whom, in rotation, during the above period, regularly filled the office of Grand Master in the North of England.

From this account, which is authenticated by the books of the Grand Lodge in York, it appears, · that the revival of Masonry in the South of England did not interfere with the proceedings of the fraternity in the North. For a feries of years the most perfect harmony subsisted between the two Grand Lodges, and private lodges flourished in both parts of the kingdom under their separate The only distinction which jurisdiction. Grand Lodge in the North appears to have retained after the revival of Masonry in the South, is in the title which they claim, viz. The Grand Lodge of all England; while the Grand Lodge in the South passes only under the denomination of The Grand Lodge of England. The latter, on account of its situation, being encouraged by some of the principal nobility, foon acquired confequence and reputation; while the former, restricted to fewer, though not less respectable, members, seemed gradually to decline. Till within these few years, however, the authority of the Grand Lodge in York has never been challenged; on the contrary, every Mason in the kingdom has always held it in the highest veneration, and considered himself bound by the charges which originally forung from that affem-

bly. To be ranked as descendants of the original York Masons, was the glory and boast of the brethren in almost every country where Masonry has been regularly established; and, from the prevalence and universality of the idea, that in the city of York Masonry was first authorised by charter, the Masons of England have received tribute from the first states in Europe. It is much to be regretted, that any separate interests should have destroyed the focial intercourse of Masons; but it is no less remarkable than true, that the brethren in the North and those in the South are now in a manner unknown to each other. Notwithstanding the pitch of eminence and splendour at which the Grand Lodge in London has arrived, neither the lodges of Scotland nor Ireland court its correspondence. This unfortunate circumstance has been attributed to the introduction of a few modern innovations among the lodges in the South. As to the coolness which has subsisted between the Grand Lodge in York and the Grand Lodge in London, another reason is assigned. A few brethren at York having, on some trivial occasion, feceded from their ancient lodge, they applied to London for a warrant of constitution; and without inquiry into the merits of the case, their application was honoured. Instead of being recommended to the Mother Lodge to be restored to favour, these brethren were encouraged in their revolt; and permitted, under the banner of the Grand Lodge in London, to open a new lodge in the city of York itself. This unguarded act justly offended the Grand Lodge, and occasioned a breach, which time, and a proper attention to the rules of the Order, only can repair.

SECT. VIII.

History of Masonry from its Revival in the South of England till the Death of King George I.

The reputation of the Society being now established, many noblemen and gentlemen of the sirst rank desired to be received into the lodges, which increased considerably during the administration of Mr. Payne. The duties of Masonry were found to be a pleasing relaxation from the satigue of business; and in the lodge, uninfluenced by politics or party, a happy union was effected among the most respectable characters in the kingdom.

On the 24th of June 1721, Grand Master Payne and his wardens, with the former grand officers, and the masters and wardens of twelve lodges, met the Grand Master elect at the Queen's Arms Tavern in St. Paul's Church-yard*, where the Grand Lodge was opened in ample form. Having confirmed the proceedings of the last Grand Lodge, several gentlemen were initiated into Masonry at the request of the duke of Montagu; and, among the rest, Philip lord Stanhope, afterwards earl of Chestersield. From the Queen's Arms the Grand Lodge marched in procession in their cloathing to Stationers'-hall in Ludgate-street, where they were joyfully received by one hundred and fifty brethren, properly clothed. The Grand Master having made the first procession round the hall, took an affectionate leave of his brethren; and being returned to his place, the duke of Montague was proclaimed his successor for the ensuing year. The general regulations which had been compiled by Mr. Payne in 1721*, and compared with the ancient records and immemorial usages of the fraternity were read, and met with general approbation; after which Dr. Desaguliers delivered an elegant oration on Masonry.

• The old lodge of St. Paul's, now the lodge of Antiquity, having been removed hither.

Soon after his election the Grand Master gave convincing proofs of his zeal and attention, by commanding Dr. Defaguliers and James Anderfon A. M. men of genius and education, to revife, arrange, and digest the Gothic constitutions, old charges, and general regulations. This task they faithfully executed; and at the ensuing Grand Lodge held at the Queen's Arms St. Paul's Churchyard on the 27th of December 1721, being the festival of St. John the Evangelist, the same was presented for approbation. A committee of fourteen learned brothers was appointed to examine the manuscript, and make their report. On this occasion several very instructive lectures were delivered, and much useful information given by a few old Majons.

At a Grand Lodge held at the Fountain Tanvern in the Strand, in ample form, on the 25th of March 1772, the committee reported, that they had perused the manuscript, containing the history, charges, regulations, &c. of Masonry, and, after some amendments, had approved thereof. The Grand Lodge ordered the whole to be prepared for the press, and printed with all possible expedition. This order was strictly obeyed, and within less than two years the Book of Constitutions appeared in print, under the following title: "The Book of Constitutions of the Free"Masons: containing the History, Charges, Re"gulations, &c. of that Most Ancient and Right "Worshipful Fraternity. For the Use of the Lodges." London, 1723.

* See the Book of Constitutions printed in 1723.

223

In January 1722-3, the duke of Montague refigned the office of Grand Master in favour of the duke of Wharton, who was very ambitious to attain it. His refignation proceeded from the motive of reconciling the brethren to this nobleman, who had incurred their displeasure, by having convened, in opposition to the resolutions of the Grand Lodge on the 25th of March, an irregular affembly of Masons at Stationers'-hall, on the festival of St. John the Baptist, in order to get himself elected Grand Master. The duke of Wharton, sensible of the impropriety of his conduct, publicly acknowledged his error; and promising in suture a strict conformity and obedience to the refolutions of the Society, he was, with the general confent of the brethren, approved as Grand Master elect for the ensuing year. His grace was regularly invested and installed on the 17th of January 1722-3 by the duke of Montagu, and congratulated by upwards of twenty-five lodges, who were present in the Grand Lodge on that occasion. The diligence and attention of the duke of Wharton to the duties of his new office soon recovered and established his reputation in the Society, and under his patronage Masonry made a considerable progress in the South of England. During his presidency, the office of Grand Secretary was first established, and William Cowper esq. appointed, who executed the duties of that department several years.

The duke of Buccleugh succeeded the duke of Wharton in 1723. Being absent on the annual festival, he was installed by proxy at Merchant-taylors'-hall, in presence of 400 Masons. This nobleman was no less attached to Masonry than his predecessor.

In the following year his grace was fucceeded by the duke of Richmond, under whose administration the Committee of Charity was instituted *.

* The duke of Buccleugh first proposed the scheme of raising a general fund for distressed Masons. Losd Paisley, Dr. Desaguliers, Colonel Houghton, and a few other brethren, supported the duke's proposition; and the Grand Lodge appointed a committee to consider of the most effectual means of carrying the scheme into execution. The report of the committee was transmitted to the lodges, and afterwards approved by the Grand Lodge. The disposal of the charity was first vested in seven brethren; but this number being found too small, nine more were added. It was afterwards resolved, that twelve masters of contributing lodges, in rotation, with the Grand Officers, should form the Committee; and by another regulation since made, it has been determined, that all Past and Present Grand Officers, with the Masters of all regular lodges which shall have contributed within twelve months to the charity, shall be members of the Committee.

The Committee meets four times in the year, by virtue of a fummons from the Grand Master or his Deputy. The petitions of the brethren who apply for charity, are considered at these meetings; and if the petitioner be found a deserving object, he is Lord Paisley, afterwards earl of Abercorn, having been active in promoting this new establishment, was elected Grand Master in the end of the year 1725. Being in the country at the time, his lordship was installed by proxy. During his absence, Dr. Defaguliers, who had been appointed his deputy, was very attentive to the duties of his office, by vifiting the lodges, and diligently promoting Masonry. On his lordship's return to town, the earl of Inchiquin was proposed to succeed him, and was elected in February 1726. The Society now flourished in town and country, and under the patronage of this nobleman the Art was propagated with confiderable fuccess. This period was rendered remarkable, by the brethren of Wales first uniting under the banner of the Grand Lodge in London. In Wales are found some venerable remains of ancient Masonry, and many stately ruins of castles. executed in the Gothic style, which evidently demonstrate that in former times the fraternity must immediately relieved with five pounds: if the circumstances of his case are of a peculiar nature, his petition is referred to the next Communication, where he is relieved with any furn the committee may have specified not exceeding twenty guineas at one time. By these means the diffressed have always found ready relief from this general charity, which is folely supported by the voluntary contributions of different lodges out of their private funds, without being burdensome on any member of the fociety.

Thus the Committee of Charity has been established among the Free and Accepted Masons in London; and though the sum anomaly expended to relieve distress distributions, for several years past, amounted to many thousand pounds, there still remains a confiderable sum in reserve, which is continually accumulating by fresh contributions.

All complaints and informations are confidered at the Committee of Charity, from which a report is made to the next Grand Lodge, where it is generally approved.

ر ~

have met with great encouragement in that part of the island. Soon after this union, the office of Provincial Grand Master* was instituted, and the first deputation granted by earl Inchiquin, on the 10th of May 1727, to Hugh Warburton esq. for North Wales; and on the 24th of June following, to Sir Edward Mansell bart. for South Wales. The ledges in the country now began to increase, and deputations were granted to several gentlemen, to hold the office of Provincial Grand Master in different parts of England, as well as in some places abroad where lodges had been constituted by English Masons; and during the earl of Inchiquin's mastership, a warrant was issued for opening a new lodge at Gibraltar.

Among the noble edifices which were finished during the presidency of this nobleman, was that excellent structure the church of St. Martin in the Fields; the foundation-stone of which, it being a royal parish church, was laid, in the king's name, on the 29th of March 1721, by brother Gibb

* A Provincial Grand Master is the immediate representative of the Grand Master in the district over which he is limited to presse; and being invested with the power and honour of a Deputy Grand Master in his province, may constitute lodges therein, if the consent of the Masters and Wardens of three lodges already constituted within his district have been obtained, and the Grand Lodge in London has not disapproved thereof. He wears the clothing of a Grand Officer, and ranks in all public assemblies immediately after Past Deputy Grand Masters. He must in person, or by deputy, attend the quarterly meetings of the Masters and Wardens of the lodges in his district, and transmit to the Grand Lodge, once in every year, the proceedings of those meetings, with a regular state of the lodges upder his jurisdiction. His officers are permitted to wear an apronal lined with blue silk, within the province; but that privilege does not extend beyond it.

the architect, in presence of the Lord Almoner, the surveyor general, and a large company of the brethren.

SECT. IX.

History of Masonry in England during the Reign of King George II.

THE first Grand Lodge after the accession of George II. to the throne, was held at the Devil Tavern, Temple-bar, on the 24th of June 1727; at which were present, the earl of Inchiquin Grand Master, his officers, and the Masters and Wardens of forty lodges. At this meeting it was resolved to extend the privilege of voting in Grand Lodge to Past Grand Wardens*; that privilege having been heretofore restricted to Past Grand Masters, by a resolution of 21st November 1724; and to Past Deputies, by another resolution of 28th February 1726.

The Grand Master having been obliged to take a journey into Ireland before the expiration of his office, his lordship transmitted a letter to William Cowper esq. his Deputy, requesting him to convene a Grand Lodge for the purpose of nominating lord Colerane Grand Master for the ensuing year. A Grand Lodge was accordingly convened on the 19th of December 1727, when his lordship was regularly proposed Grand Master elect, and being unanimously approved, on the 27th of the same month was duly invested with the ensigns of his high office at a grand feast at Mercers'-hall, in the presence of a numerous company of the brethren. His lordship attended two Communications during his mastership, and seemed to pay considerable attention to the duties of his office. He constituted several new lodges, and granted a deputation to hold a lodge in St. Bernard's-street, Madrid. At the last Grand Lodge under his lordship's auspices, Dr. Desaguliers moved, that the ancient office of Stewards might be revived, to assist the Grand Wardens in preparing the feast; when it was agreed that their appointment should be annual, and the number restricted to twelve.

* This privilege was certainly a peculiar favour; for the Grand Lodge, by the old Conflitutions, could conflit only of the Mafters and Wardens of regular lodges, with the Grand Mafter and his Wardens at their head; and it had been cuftomary even for these Officers, at their annual election, and on other particular occasions, to withdraw, and leave the Masters and Wardens of the lodges to consult together, that no undue influence might warn their opinion.

Lord Kingston succeeded lord Colerane, and was invested with the ensigns of his high office on the 27th of December 1728, at a grand feast held at Mercers'-hall. His lordship's zeal and attachment to the fraternity were very conspicuous, not only by his regular attendance on the communications, but by a generous present to the Grand Lodge, of a curious pedestal, a rich cushion with gold knobs and fringes, a velvet bag, and a new jewel set in gold for the use of the Secretary. During his lordship's administration, the Society slourished at home and abroad. Many lodges were constituted, and among the rest, a deputation was granted to George Pomsret esq. authorising him to open a new lodge at Bengal. This gentleman first introduced Masonry into the English settlements in India, where it has since made such rapid progress, that, within these few years, upwards of sifty lodges have been constituted there, eleven of which are now held in Bengal. The annual remittances to the charity and public funds of the Society from this and the other sactories of the East India Company, amount to a considerable sum.

Digitized by Google

At a Grand Lodge held at the Devil Tavern on the 27th of December 1729, Nathaniel Blackerby esq. the Deputy Grand Master, being in the chair, in the absence of lord Kingston, produced a letter from his lordship, authorising him to propose the duke of Norfolk Grand Master for the ensuing year. This nomination meeting with general approbation, the usual compliments were paid to his grace, who, being present, was saluted Grand Master elect; and at an affembly and feast at Merchanttaylors'-hall on the 20th of January following, duly invested and installed, according to ancient form, in the presence of a numerous and brilliant company of Masons. His absence in Italy soon after his election, prevented him from attending more than one communication during his mastership; but the business of the Society was diligently executed by Mr. Blackerby his Deputy, on whom the whole management devolved. Among other fignal proofs of his grace's attachment to the Society. he transmitted from Venice to England the following noble presents for the use of the Grand Lodge: 1. Twenty pounds to the charity. 2. A large folio book, of the finest writing paper, for the records of the Grand Lodge, richly bound in Turkey and gilt, with a curious frontispiece in vellum, containing the arms of Norfolk, amply displayed, and a Latin inscription of the family titles, with the arms of Masonry elegantly emblazoned. 3. A sword of state for the Grand Master, being the old trusty sword of Gustavus Adolphus king of Sweden, which was next worn by his brave successor in war Bernard duke of Saxe-Weimar, with both their names on the blade, and further enriched with the arms of Norfolk in silver on the scabbard. For these presents his grace was voted the public thanks of the Society.

It is not surprising that Masonry should sourish under so respectable a banner. His grace appointed a Provincial Grand Master over the lodges in the Circle of Lower Saxony, and established by deputation a Provincial Grand Lodge at New Jersey in America. A provincial patent was also made out under his auspices for Bengal. From this period we may date the commencement of the consequence and reputation of the Society in Europe, as daily applications were made for constituting new lodges, and the most respectable characters of the age desired their names to be enrolled in our records.

The duke of Norfolk was succeeded by lord Lovel, afterwards earl of Leicester, who was installed at Mercers'-hall on the 29th of March 1731. His lordship being at the time much indstposed with an ague, was obliged to withdraw soon after his installation. Lord Colerane, however, acted as proxy during the feast. On the 14th of May, the first Grand Lodge after lord Lovel's election was held at the Rose Tavern in Mary-le-bone, when it was voted, that in future all Past Grand Masters and their Deputies shall be admitted members of the Quarterly Committees of Charity, and that every committee shall have power to vote five pounds for the relief of any distressed Mason; but no larger sum, without the consent of the Grand Lodge in Communication being first had and obtained. This resolution is still in force *.

the

1113

ril -

nt:Ć

ψč

ens

er i

e (VIII

eriod

. مالان

(OIX)

utiK

5 🍱

(arci

indi

0.3

During the presidency of lord Lovel, the nobility made a point of honouring the Grand Lodge with their presence. The dukes of Norfolk and Richmond, the earl of Inchiquin, and lords Colerane and Montague, with several other persons of distinction, generally attended; and though the subscriptions from the lodges were inconsiderable, the Society was enabled to relieve many worthy objects with small sums. As an encouragement to gentlemen to accept the office of Steward, it was ordered that in suture each Steward should have the privilege of nominating his successor at every annual grand feast.

The most remarkable event of lord Lovel's administration, was the initiation of Francis duke of Lorraine, grand duke of Tuscany, afterwards emperor of Germany. By virtue of a deputation from his lordship, a lodge was held at the Hague, where his highness was received into the Two First Degrees of the Order. At this lodge, Philip Stanhope, earl of Chesterfield, then ambassador there, presided; —— Strickland esq. acted as Deputy, and Mr. Benjamin Hadley with a Dutch brother as Wardens. His highness coming to England the same year, was advanced to the Third Degree at an occasional lodge convened for the purpose at Houghton-hall in Norfolk, the seat of Sir Robert Walpole; as was also Thomas Pelham, duke of Newcastle.

* See the note in p. 224, 225.

The Society being now in a very flourishing state, deputations were granted from England, for establishing lodges in Russia and Spain.

Lord Viscount Montagu was installed Grand Master at an assembly and feast at Merchant Taylors'-hall on the 19th of April 1732. Among the diftinguished personages present on that occasion were, the dukes of Montagu and Richmond; the earl of Strathmore; and lords Colerane, Tevnham. and Carpenter; Sir Francis Drake and Sir William Keith barts, and above four hundred other brethren. At this meeting it was first proposed to have a country feast, and agreed that the brethren should dine together at Hampstead on the 24th of June, for which purpole cards of invitation were fent to feveral of the nobility. On the day appointed, the Grand Master and his Officers, the dukes of Norfolk and Richmond, the earl of Strathmore, lords Carpenter and Teynham, and above a hundred other brethren, met at the Spikes at Hampstead, where an elegant dinner was pro-Soon after dinner, the Grand Master refigned the chair to lord Teynham, and from that time till the expiration of his office never attended another meeting of the Society. His lordship. granted a deputation for constituting a lodge at

Egh

Degre

urode a r Rox

dake G

ng lan

ior elte

Grand

ant Tar

10Ng 1k

occabo

nd; 🗽

evnlita

Willi

ner br

osted 🛭

ntilit

2411 1

011 TI

jar 7

ers, 🏗

earl d

n, 20

Spirit

25 pr. Matie

m iki

Valenciennes in French Flanders, and another for opening a new lodge at the Hotel de Buffy in Paris. Several other lodges were also constituted under his lordship's auspices; but the Society was particularly indebted to Thomas Batson esq. the Deputy Grand Master, who was very attentive to the duties of his office, and carefully superintended the government of the craft.

The earl of Strathmore succeeded lord Montagu in the office of Grand Master, and being in Scotland at the time, was installed by proxy at an assembly at Mercers'-hall on the 7th of June 1733. On the 13th of December a Grand Lodge was held at the Devil tavern, at which his lordship and his officers, the earl of Crawford, Sir Robert Mansel, a number of Past Grand Officers, and the Masters and Wardens of fifty-three lodges, were present. Several regulations were confirmed at this meeting respecting the Committee of Charity; and it was determined, that all complaints in suture to be brought before the Grand Lodge, should be previously examined by the Committee, and thence referred to the next Communication.

The history of the Society at this period affords few remarkable incidents to record. Some confiderable donations were collected, and distributed among distressed Masons, to encourage the settlement of a new colony which had been just established at Georgia in America. Lord Strathmore shewed every attention to the duties of his office, and regularly attended the meetings of the Grand Lodge: under his auspices the Society sourished at home and abroad, and many genteel presents.

were received from the East Indies. Eleven German Masons applied for authority to open a new lodge at Hamburgh under the patronage of the Grand Lodge of England, for which purpose his lordship was pleased to grant a deputation; and soon after, several other lodges were constituted in Holland under the English banner.

The earl of Strathmore was succeeded by the earl of Crawford, who was installed at Mercers'-hall on the 30th of March 1734. Public affairs attracting his lordship's attention, the Communications during his administration were neglected. After eleven months' vacation, however, a Grand Lodge was convened, at which his lordship attended, and apologized for his long absence. To atone for past omission, he commanded two Communications to be held in little more than fix weeks. The dukes of Richmond and Buccleugh, the earl of Balcarras, lord Weymouth, and other eminent persons, homoured the Grand Lodge with their presence during the earl of Crawford's presidency.

at this period related to a new edition of the Book of Constitutions, which brother James Anderson was ordered to prepare for the press; and which made its appearance in January 1738, considerably enlarged and improved.

Among the new regulations which took place under the administration of lord Crawford, was the following: That if any lodge within the bills of mortality shall cease to meet during twelve calendar months, the said lodge shall be erased out of the list; and if re-instated, shall lose its former rank. Some additional privileges were granted to the Stewards, in confequence of an application for that purpose; and to encourage gentlemen to serve the office, it was agreed, that in suture all Grand Officers, the Grand Master excepted, shall be elected out of that body. A few resolutions also passed respecting illegal conventions of Masons, at which it was reported many persons had been initiated into Masonry on small and unworthy considerations.

The earl of Crawford feems to have made another encroachment on the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge in the city of York, by constituting two lodges within their district; and by granting, without their consent, three deputations, one for Langashire, a second for Durham, and a third for Northumberland. This circumstance the Grand Lodge in York highly resented, and ever after seems to have viewed the proceedings of the brethren in the South with a jealous eye; as all friendly intercourse ceased, and the York Masons from that moment considered their interests distinct from the Manfons under the Grand Lodge in London.

In confirmation of the above fact, I shall here insert a paragraph copied from the Book of Constitutions published in 1738. After inserting a list of Provincial Grand Masters appointed for different places abroad, it is thus expressed: "All these foreign soldings are under the patronage of our Grand Master of England; but the old lodge at York city, and the lodges of Scotland, Iresto but the old lodge at York city, and the lodges of Scotland, Iresto but the old lodge at York city, and the lodges of Scotland, Iresto but the old lodge at York city, and the lodges of Scotland, Iresto but the old lodge at York city, and the lodges of Scotland, Iresto but the old lodge at York city, and the storage, are under their the old lodge at York city, and the storage, regulations, &c. for substance, with their brethren of England, and are equally zealous for the Augustan stile, and the storage of the ancient and honourable fraternity." Book of Constitutions 1738, p. 1966.

Lord Weymouth succeeded the earl of Crawford in the office of Grand Master, and was installed at Mercers'-hall on the 17th of April 1735, in prefence of the dukes of Richmond and Athol; the earls of Crawford, Winchelfea, Ba'carras, Wemys, and Loudon; the marquis of Beaumont; lords Cathcart and Vere Bertie; Sir Cecil Wray and Sir Edward Mansel barts. and a splendid company of other brethren. Several lodges were constituted during lord Weymouth's presidency; and, among the rest, the Stewards'-Lodge. His lordship granted a deputation to hold a lodge at the feat of the duke of Richmond at Aubigny in France; and, under his patronage, Masonry extended considerably in soteign countries. He also issued warrants to open a new lodge at Lisbon, and another at Savannah in Georgia; and, by his special appointment, provincial patents were made out for South America, and Gambay in West Africa.

Lord Weymouth never honoured any of the Communications with his presence during his presidency; but this omission was less noticed, on account of the vigilance and attention of his Deputy, John Ward esq. afterward lord viscount Dudley and Ward, who applied with the utmost diligence to promote the interest and prosperity of the Society.

One circumstance occurred while lord Weymouth was Grand Master, of which it may be necessary to take notice. The twelve Stewards, with Sir Robert Lawley, Master of the Stewards' Lodge, at their head, appeared for the first time in their new badges at a Grand Lodge held at the Devil Tavern on the 11th of December 1735. On this occasion they were not permitted to vote as individuals; but it being afterwards proposed that they should enjoy this privilege, and that the Stewards' Lodge should in future be represented in Grand Lodge by twelve members, many lodges objected to the measure as an encroachment on the privilege of every other lodge which had been previously constituted. When the motion was put up for confirmation, such a disturbance enfued, that the Grand Lodge was obliged to be closed before the fentiments of the brethren could be collected on the subject. Of late years the punctilio has been waved, and the twelve Stewards are now permitted to vote in every Communication as individuals *.

* It was not till the year 1770 that this privilege was firicily warranted; when, at a Grand Lodge, on the 7th of February, at the Crown and Anchor tavern in the Strand, the following resolution paffed: " As the right of the Members of the Stewards' Lodge in se general to attend the Committee of Charity appears doubtful, no 46 mention of fuch right being made in the laws of the Society, the 46 Grand Lodge are of opinion, That they have no general right to se attend; but it is hereby resolved, That the Stewards' Lodge be 46 allowed the privilege of fending a number of brethren, equal to " any other four lodges, to every future Committee of Charity; and of that, as the Master of each private lodge only has a right to at-"tend, to make a proper distinction between the Stewards' lodge 46 and the other lodges, that the Master and three other members of st that lodge be permitted to attend at every succeeding Committee " on behalf of the faid Lodge." This refolution, however, was declared not to be intended to deprive any lodge which had been previously constituted, of its regular rank and precedence. Notwithstanding this express provision, a privilege has been lately granted to the Stewards' Lodge, of taking precedence of all the other lodges. the two oldest not excepted; a measure certainly very incompatible with the original constitutions, and which can never be fanctioned The earl of Loudon succeeded lord Weymouth, and was installed Grand Master at Fishmongers's hall on the 15th of April 1736. The duke of Richmond; the earls of Albemarle and Crawford; lords Harcourt, Erskine, and Southwell; Mr. Anstis garter king at arms, Mr. Brady lion king at arms, and a numerous company of other brethren, were present on this occasion. His lordship constituted several lodges, and granted three provincial deputations during his presidency, viz. one for New England, another for South Carolina, and a third for Cape Coast Castle in Africa.

The earl of Darnley was elected Grand Master, and duly installed at Fishmongers'-hall on the 28th of April 1737, in presence of the duke of Richmond, the earls of Crawford and Wemys, lord Gray, and many other respectable brethren. The most remarkable event of his lordship's administration, was the initiation of the late Frederic prince of Wales, his present majesty's father, at an occafional lodge convened for the purpose at the palace of Kew, over which Dr. Defaguliers prefided as Master. Lord Baltimore, col. Lumley, the hon. major Madden, and several other brethren, were present. His royal highness was advanced to the Second Degree at the same lodge; and at another lodge, convened at the same place soon after, was raifed to the degree of a Master Mason.

There cannot be a better proof of the flourishing state of the Society at this time, than by adverting to by the rules of the fociety. Several Lodges have entered protefts against it in their private books; which at some future time may have an effect, and probably induce a re-investigation of the subject.

the respectable appearance of the brethren in Grand Lodge, at which the Grand Master never failed to attend. Upwards of fixty lodges were represented at every Communication during lord Darnley's administration; and more Provincial patents were issued by him, than by any of his predecessors. Deputations were granted for Montserrat, Geneva, the Circle of Upper Saxony, the Coast of Africa, New York, and the Islands of America *.

The marquis of Carnarvon, afterwards duke of Chandos, succeeded lord Darnley in the office of Grand Master, and was duly invested and installed at an affembly and feast held at Fishmongers' hall on the 27th of April 1738. At this affembly, the duke of Richmond, the earls of Inchiquin, Loudon, and Kintore; lords Colerane, and Gray; and a numerous company of other brethren, were present. The marquis shewed every attention to the Society during his presidency, and, in testimony of his esteem, presented to the Grand Lodge a gold jewel for the use of the Secretary; the device, two cross pens in a knot; the knot and points of the pens being curiously enamelled. Two deputations for the office of Provincial Grand Mafter were granted by his lordship, one for the Ca-

At this time the authority granted by patent to a Provincial Grand Master was limited to one year from his first public appearance in that character within his province; and, if at the expiration of that period, a new election by the lodges under his jurification did not take place, subject to the approbation of the Grand Master, the patent was no longer valid. Hence we find, within the course of a tew years, different appointments to the same station; but the office is now permanent, and the sole appointment of the Grand Master.

ribbee Islands, and the other for the West Riding of Yorkshire. This latter appointment was considered as a third encroachment on the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge in York, and so widened the original breach between the brethren in the North and the South of England, that from henceforward all suture correspondence between the Grand Lodges totally ceased.

On the 15th of August 1738, Frederic the Great, afterwards king of Prussia, was initiated into Mafonry in a lodge at Brunfwick under the Scots constitution, being at that time Prince Royal. So highly did he approve of the institution, that, on his accession to the throne, he commanded a Grand Lodge to be formed at Berlin, and for that purpose obtained a patent from Edinburgh. In this lodge many of the German princes were initiated, who afterwards filled the office of Grand Master, with much honour to themselves, and advantage to the Craft. Thus was Masonry regularly established in Prussia, and under that fanction it has flourished ever fince. His majesty's attachment to the Society foon induced him to establish several new regulations for the advantage of the fraternity; and among others, he ordained, 1. That no person should be made a Mason, unless his character was unimpeachable, and his manner of living and profession respectable. 2. That every member should pay 25 rix-dollars (or 4l. 3s.) for the First Degree; 50 rix-dollars (or 81. 6s.) on his being passed into the Second Degree; and 100 rix-dollars on his being raifed a Master-mason. 3. That he should remain at least three months in each Degree; and that every sum received should be divided by the Grand Treasurer into three parts; one to defray the expences of the lodge; another to be applied to the relief of distressed brethren; and the third to be allotted to the poor in general.

No other remarkable occurrence is recorded to have happened during the administration of the marquis of Carnarvon, except a proposition for establishing a plan to appropriate a portion of the charity to place out the sons of Masons apprentices, which, after a long debate in Grand Lodge, was rejected.*.

Some disagreeable altercations arose in the Society about this period. A number of diffatisfied brethren having separated themselves from the regular lodges, held meetings in different places for the purpose of initiating persons into Masonry, contrary to the laws of the Grand Lodge. These seceding brethren taking advantage of the breach which had been made in the friendly intercourse between the Grand Lodges of London and York, on being cenfured for their conduct, immediately assumed at their irregular meetings, without authority, the character of York Masons. Measures were adopted to check them, which stopped their progress for some time; but, taking advantage of the general murmur spread abroad on account of some innovations that had been introduced, and which feemed to authorife an omission of, and a variation in, the ancient ceremonies, they rose again into notice. This imprudent measure of the regular lodges offended many old Masons; but, through the mediation of John Ward esq., afterwards lord viscount Dudley and Ward, matters were accommodated, and the brethren feemingly reconciled. This, however, proved only a temporary suspension of hostilities, for the slame soon broke out anew, and gave rise to commotions, which afterwards materially interrupted the peace of the Society.

• Of late years, however, an inflitution has been fince established under the fanction of some of the Brethren, for educating and clothing the sons of Free-masons in London.

Lord Raymond succeeded the marquis of Carnarvon in May 1739, and under his lordship's auspices the lodges were numerous and respectable. withstanding the flourishing state of the Society, irregularities continued to prevail, and feveral worthy brethren, still adverse to the encroachments on the established system of the institution, seemed to be highly difgusted at the proceedings of the regular lodges. Complaints were preferred at every fucceeding committee, and the communications fully employed in adjusting differences and reconciling animofities. More fecessions taking place, it became necessary to pass votes of censure on the most refractory, and enact laws to discourage irregular affociations of the fraternity. This brought the power of the Grand Lodge in question; and in opposition to the laws which had been established in that affembly, lodges were formed without any legal warrant, and persons initiated into Masonry for fmall and unworthy confiderations. To disappoint the views of these deluded brethren, and to distinguish the persons initiated by them, the Grand Lodge readily acquiesced in the imprudent measures which the regular Masons had adopted, measures which even the urgency of the cafe could not warrant. Though this had the intended effect, it gave rife to a new fubterfuge. The brethren who had feceded from the regular lodges immediately announced independency, and affumed the appellation of ancient Masons. They propagated an opinion that the ancient tenets and practices of Malonry were preserved by them; and that the regular lodges, being composed of modern Masons, had adopted new plans, and were not to be confidered as acting under the old establishment. To counteract the regulations of the Grand Lodge, they instituted a new Grand Lodge in London, professedly on the ancient fystem, and, contrary to their duty as Masons, under that assumed banner constituted several new lodges, in opposition to the regular established authority. These irregular proceedings they pretended to justify under the feigned fanction of the Ancient York Constitution, and many gentlemen of reputation, being deceived by this artifice, were introduced among them, fo that their lodges daily increased. Without authority from the Grand Lodge in York, or from any other established power, in Masonry, these refractory brethren persevered in the measures they had adopted, formed committees, held communications, and even appointed annual feasts. Under the false appellation of the York banner, they gained the countenance of the Scotch and Irish Masons. who, placing implicit confidence in the representations made to them, heartily joined in condemning the measures of the regular lodges in London, as tending, in their opinion, to introduce noveltics into the Society, and to subvert the original plan of the institution. The irregular Masons in London having thus acquired a nominal establishment, noblemen of both kingdoms, unacquainted with the origin of the separation, honoured them with their patronage, and some respectable names and lodges were added to their lift. Of late years, however, the fallacy has been fully detected by the active diligence of a few zealous brethren, and they have not been so successful; several of their best members have deferted them, and many lodges renounced their banner, who have come under the patronage of the Grand Lodge of England. It is much to be wished, that a general union among all the Masons in the kingdom could be effected; and we are now happy to hear that fuch a measure is likely foon to be accomplished, through the mediation of a noble Brother who ranks high in the estimation of the Brethren, and now fills the first office in the Grand Lodge of England under his royal highness the Prince of Wales.

During the prefidency of lord Raymond, no confiderable addition was made to the lift of lodges, nor were the communications often honoured with the company of the nobility. His lordship granted only one deputation for a provincial Grand Master during his prefidency, viz. for Savoy and Piedmont.

The earl of Kintore succeeded lord Raymond in April 1740; and, in imitation of his predecessor, continued to discourage irregularities. His lord-thip appointed several provincials: particularly one for Russia; one for Hamburgh and the Circle of Lower Saxony; one for the West Riding of York, in the room of William Horton efq. deceased; and one for the island of Barbadoes.

The earl of Morton was elected on the 10th of March following, and initalled with great folemnity the same day at Haberdashers'-hall, in presence of a respectable company of the nobility, foreign ambassadors, and others. Several seasonable laws were passed during his lordship's mastership, and some regulations made concerning processions and other ceremonies. His lordship presented a staff of office to the Treasurer, of neat workmanship, blue and tipt with gold; and the Grand Lodge resolved, that this officer should be annually elected, and, with the Secretary and Sword-bearer, be permitted to rank in future as a member of the Grand Lodge. A large cornelian feal, with the arms of Masonry, fet in gold, was presented to the Society, at this time, by brother William Vaughan, the Senior Grand Warden; who was appointed by his lordthip Provincial Grand Master for North Wales.

Lord Ward succeeded the earl of Morton in April 1742. His lordship being well acquainted with the nature and government of the Society, having served every office from the Secretary in a private lodge to that of Grand Master, lost no time in applying effectual remedies to reconcile the animosities which prevailed; he recommended to his officers, vigilance and care in their different departments; and, by his own conduct, set a noble example how the dignity of the Society ought to be supported. Many lodges, which were in a declining state, by his advice, coalesced with others in better circumstances; some, which had been negline gent in their attendance on the Communications, after proper admonitions were reftored to favour; and others, which perfevered in their contumacy, were erased out of the lift. Thus his lordship manifested a sincere regard for the interest of the Society, while his lenity and sorbearance were universally admired.

The unanimity and harmony of the lodges seemed to be perfectly restored under his lordship's administration. The free-masons at Antigua built a large hall in that island for their meetings, and applied to the Grand Lodge for liberty to be styled the Great Lodge of St. John's in Antigua, which savour was granted to them in April 1744.

Lord Ward continued two years at the head of the fraternity, during which time he conflituted many lodges, and appointed feveral Provincial Grand Masters; viz. one for Lancaster, one for North America, and three for the island of Jamaica. He was succeeded by the earl of Strathmore, during whose administration, being absent the whole time, the care and management of the Society devolved on the other Grand Officers, who carefully studied the general good of the fraternity. His lordship appointed a Provincial Grand Master for the island of Bermuda.

Lord Cranstoun was elected Grand Master in April 1745, and presided over the fraternity with great reputation two years. Under his auspices Masonry slourished, several new lodges were constituted, and one Provincial Grand Master was appointed for Cape Breton and Louisbourg. By a resolution of the Grand Lodge at this time it was ordered, that public processions on feast-days should be discontinued; occasioned by some mock processions, which a few disgusted brethren had formed, in order to burlesque those public appearances.

Lord Byron succeeded Lord Cranstoun, and was installed at Drapers'-hall on the 30th of April 1747. The laws of the Committee of Charity were, by his lordship's order, revised, printed, and distributed among the Jodges, and a handsome contribution to the general charity was received from the lodge at Gibraltar. During five years that his lordship prefided over the fraternity, no diligence was spared to preserve the privileges of the Order inviolate, to redress grievances, and to relieve distress. When business required his lordship's attendance in the country, Fotherly Baker efq. his Deputy, and Secretary Revis, were particularly attentive to the business of the Society. The former was distinguished by his knowledge of the laws and regulations; the latter, by his long and faithful fervices. Under the auspices of lord Byron, provincial patents were issued for Denmark and Norway, Pennfylvania, Minorca, and New York.

On the 20th of March 1752, lord Carysfort accepted the office of Grand Matter. The good effects of his lordship's application to the real interests of the fraternity soon became visible, by the great increase of the public fund. No Grand Officer ever took more pains to preserve, or was more attentive to recommend, order and decorum. He was ready, on every occasion, to visit the lodges in person, and to promote harmony among the members. Dr.

Manningham, his Deputy, was no less vigilant in the execution of his duty. He constantly visited the lodges in his lordship's absence, and used every endeavour to cement union among the brethren. The whole proceedings of this active officer were conducted with prudence, and his candour and affability gained him univerfal esteem. The Grand Mafter's attachment to the Society was fo obvious, that the brethren, in testimony of their gratitude for his lordship's great services, re-elected him on the 3d of April 1753; and during his prefidency, provincial patents were issued for Gibraltar, the Bahama islands, New York, Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, and Mann; also for Cornwall, and the counties of Worcester, Gloucester, Salop, Monmouth, and Hereford.

At this time the Society in Scotland appears to have been in a very flourishing state. Under the auspices of George Drummond esq. the Grand Master of the Masons in that kingdom, the lodges had confiderably increased in numbers. This gentleman had thrice ferved the office of Lord Provost of Edinburgh, and being at the head of the fenate in that city, he was anxious to promote every scheme which could add to the confequence and splendor of the metropolis of his native country. With this view he planned, and afterwards completed, that elegant range of building called THE NEW Ex-CHANGE OF EDINBURGH, the foundation-stone of which he laid on the 13th of September 1753, as Grand Master. An event so remarkable in the annals of Masonry justly merits attention, and cannot fail to render an account of a ceremony fo splendid, and conducted with so much regularity, interesting to every brother who has the honour of the Society at heart.

Early in the morning of the day appointed for the celebration of this ceremony, a magnificent triumphal arch, in the true Augustan style, was opened to public view; it was erected at the entrance leading toward the place where the foundation-stone of the intended building was to be laid. In the niches between the columns on each fide of the entrance were two figures, representing GEOMETRY and Architecture, each as large as life. On the frieze of the entablature, which was of the Corinthian order, were the following words: Quon FELIX FAUSTUMQUE SIT; That it may be happy and prosperous. On the middle pannel of the attic base, placed over the entablature, was represented the GENIUS. OF EDINBURGH, in a curule chair, under a canopy on her right hand stood a groupe of figures, reprefenting the lord provost, magistrates, and council, in their robes; on her left, was another groupe, representing the noblemen and gentlemen employed in the direction of the intended structure. In front, was placed the Grand Master, offering a plan of the Exchange, attended by feveral of his brethren properly clothed. The whole was decorated with laurels, bays, and other ever-greens, interspersed with festoons of slowers.

At three o'clock in the afternoon, the feveral lodges, with their Masters at their head, met at Mary's chapel in Niedry's Wind, and at half past three, the procession began to move from the chapel in the following order, the city guard covering the rear:

- 3. Operative Masons not belonging to any lodge present.
- 2. A band of French horns.
- 3. The Lodges prefent arranged as follows:

The military Lodge belonging to General Johnson's regiment.

The Thiftle Lodge.

The Scots Lodge in Canongate.

Holyrood house Lodge.

Vernon Kilwinning Lodge.

Canongate from Leith Lodge.

Dalkeith Lodge.

Lodge of Journeymen Masons.

Canongate and Leith, Leith and Canongate Lodge.

Leith Kilwinning Lodge.

Canongate Kilwinning Lodge.
Mary's Chapel Lodge.

All the brethren properly clothed, and the Masters and Wardens in the jewels of their respective lodges, with their badges of dignity, formed the last rank of each lodge.

- 4. Gentlemen Masons belonging to foreign Lodges.
- 5. A band of Hauthois.
- 6. The Golden Compasses, carried by an operative Mason.
- 2. Three Grand Stewards, with rods.
- 8. The Grand Secretary, Grand Treasurer, and Grand Clerk.
- 9. Three Grand Stewards, with rods.
- The Golden Square, Level, and Plumb, carried by three operative Maions.
- 21. A band of French horns.
- 12. Three Grand St. wards, with rods.
- 13. The Grand Wardens.
- 14. The Cornucopia, and Golden Mallet, carried by an officer of the Grand Lodge, and an operative Mason.
- 15. The GRAND MASTER, supported by a Past Grand Master, and the present Substitute.

The procession was closed with a body of operative Masons; and the whole brethren, amounting exactly to 672, walked uncovered.

At the head of Niddry's Wind the cavalcade was received by 150 of the military, and a company of grenadiers, drawn up in two lines, under arms, who escorted the procession; one-half of the grenadiers marching in front, and the other half in the rear, with bayonets fixed. As the procession passed the city guard, a company was drawn out, with the proper officers at their head, who faluted the Grand Mrster with military honours, drums beating, and music playing. When the procession reached the Parliament Close, the troops formed a line, as did also the Masons within that line. The Grand Master and the officers of the Grand Lodge then made a stop at the north-west corner of the Close, and dispatched a message to the Councilhouse, to acquaint the magistrates that the brethren were ready to receive them; on which the lord provoft, magistrates, and council, in their robes, preceded by the city officers, with the fword and mace, accompanied by several of the gentlemen in the direction of the intended buildings, proceeded through the lines formed by the foldiers and the Masons, when the Grand Master, properly supported as before, preceded by his officers, and having his jewels borne before him, marched to the place where the ceremony was to be performed, and passed through the triumphal arch erected for the occasion, the lodges following according to seniority. On the west side of the place where the stone was to be laid, was erected a theatre, covered with tapeftry, and decked with flowers, for the lord provost, magistrates, council, and attendants; on the east was erected another theatre, for the Grand Master and his officers, on which was set a chair for the Grand Master. Before the chair was a table covered with tapestry, on which were placed two silver vessels, filled with wine and oil; the golden jewels, and the cornucopia, which had been carried in the procession. The Masters, Wardens, and brethren of the several lodges were then arranged in galleries, properly sitted up for the occasion.

The ceremony of laying the stone now commenced. By order of the Substitute Grand Master, the stone was slung in a tackle, and, after three regular stops, let down gradually to the ground, during which the Masonic anthem was sung, accompanied by the music, all the brethren joining in the chorus. The Grand Master, supported as before, preceded by his officers, and the operative Masons carrying the jewels, then descended from the theatre to the spot where the stone lay, and passed through a line formed by the officers of the Grand Lodge. The Substitute Grand Master deposited in the stone, in cavities made for the purpose, three medals with the following devices: On one fide, was the effigies of the Grand Master in profile, vested with the ribbon officially worn by him; and in front, a view of the Royal Infirmary, with the following inscription:

G. Drummond, Architect. Scot. Symmus Magis Edin. Ter Cos.

GEORGE DRUMMOND, of the Swiety of Free Majon: in Scotland, Grand Master, thrite Provost of Edinburgh. On the reverse was a perspective view of the Exchange, on which was inscribed in the circle. VERBI EXORNANDE CIVIVMQUE COMMODITATI, For adorning the City, and the conveniency of its Inhabitants; and undermeth.

FORI NOVI EDINBURGENSIS
POSITO LAPIDE PRIMO
ORDO PER SCOTIAM ARCHITECTONICUS
EXCUDI JUSSIT,
XIII SEPTEMBRIS 1753.

The first flone of the New Exc. ange of Edinburgh being laid, the brotherbood of Masons through Scotland ordered this to be struck, 13th September 1753.

The other medals contained the effigies as above, and on the reverse the Masons' Arms, inclosed within the collar of St. Andrew, with the following inscription:

IN THE LORD IS ALL OUR TRUST.

The former Grand Master and the Substitute retiring, two operative Masons came in their place, and assisted the Grand Master to turn over the stone, and lay it in its proper bed, with the inscription * undermost. The Grand Master then taking his station at the east of the stone, with the Substitute on the left, and his Wardens in the west, the operative who carried the Square delivered it to the Substitute, who presented it to the

The following is the infcription on the stone:

Georgius Drummondus
In Architectonica Scotie Repub.

Curio Maximus
Urbis Edinburgi ter Consul
Adstantibus Fratribus Architectonicis ccc.
Præsentibus multis regni magnatibus
Senatu etiam populoque Edinensi
Et hominum ördinis cujusque
Magna stipante frequentia
Cunctisque plaudentibus
Ad Edinensium commoditatem
Et decus publicum

Edificiorum novorum Principium

Grand Master, and he having applied it to that part of the stone which was square, returned it back to the operative. The operative who carried the plumb, then delivered it to the Substitute, who presented it also to the Grand Master, and he having applied it to the edges of the stone, holding it upright, delivered it back to the operative. In like manner, the operative, who carried the level, delivered it to the Substitute, and he prefented it to the Grand Master, who applied it above the stone in several positions, and returned it back to the operative. The mallet was then prefented to the Grand Master, who gave three knocks upon the stone, which was followed by three huzzas from the brethren. An anthem was then fung, accompanied by the music; during which the cornucopia, and the two filver veffels containing the wine and oil, were brought down to the stone. The cornucopia was delivered to

LAPIDEM HUNC POSUIT
GULIFUMO ALEXANDRO COS.
IDIBUS SEPTEMBR. A. D. MDCCLIII.
ÆRE ARCHITECTONICÆVMDCCLIII.
IMPERIIQUE GEORGII II. BRITANNIARUM REGIS ANNO XXVII.

Translated,

GEORGE DRUMMOND, of the Society of Free-Masons in a Scotland, Grand Masser, thrice Provost of Edinburgh, three hundred brothers Masons attending, in presence of many persons of distinction, the Magistrates and Citizens of Edinburgh, and of people of every rank an innumerable Multitude, and all applauding, for the conveniency of the inhabitants of Edinburgh, and the public ornament, as the beginning of the new Buildings, laid this Stone, WILLIAM ALEXANDER being Provost, on the 13th September 1753, of the Æra of Masonry 5753, and of the reign of George II. king of Great Britain the 27th year.

the Substitute, and the vessels to the Wardens. The anthem being concluded, the Substitute prefented the cornucopia to the Grand Master, who turned out the ears of corn upon the stone. The filver vessels were then delivered by the Wardens to the Substitute, and by him presented to the Grand Master, who poured the contents upon the stone, faying, "May the bountiful hand of Heaven " fupply this city with abundance of corn, wine, "oil, and all the other conveniencies of life." This was fucceeded by three huzzas, after which an anthem was fung. The Grand Master then repeated these words: " As we have now laid this "foundation-stone, may the Grand Architect of "the univerfe, of his kind providence, enable us " to carry on and finish the work which we have " now begun; may he be a guard to this place, "and the city in general; and may he preferve it "from decay and ruin to the latest posterity." The ceremony was concluded with a fhort prayer for the fovereign, the fenate of the city, the fraternity of Masons, and all the people; the music was refumed, and the Grand Master returned to his chair, amidst the plaudits of the brethren.

The Grand Master then addressed the lord provost, magistrates, and council, in an appropriate speech; in which he thanked them for the honour which they had done him in witnessing the act of laying the foundation-stone of the intended structure, and expressed his earnest wish, that they and their successors might be happy instruments to forward the great and good work which was now begun, and offered so fair a prospect of success; and he sincerely hoped, that it might add, not only to the ornament and advantage of the city of Edinburgh, but be the means of ensuring to them lasting honour, and transmitting their memories to the latest posterity. He next addressed the undertakers of the work on the importance of the trust reposed in them, and recommended diligence and industry to all the workmen who might be employed under them.

The magistrates then took their leave, and the brethren refumed the procession to the palace of Holyrood-house, escorted by the military, as before, amidst an immense crowd of spectators. On arriving at the palace, the Grand Master, in the name of himself and his brethren, returned his most grateful acknowledgments to the commanding officer of the troops for the affiftance which he had given. The brethren then entered the inner court of the palace, and formed a fquare, to receive the Grand Master and his officers with alk due honour; who, followed by the lodges according to feniority, proceeded to the great gallery, where an elegant entertainment was provided, and the greatest harmony prevailed. At nine o'clock in the evening the company broke up.

Such was the regularity observed throughout the ceremony of the day, that notwithstanding the crowds of people who were collected on the occafion, the whole was concluded without a fingleaccident.

I have been thus minute in the above detail, not only that an event of fuch importance to the nitized by Google

Society might be recorded, but that it might ferve as an example worthy of imitation in ceremonies of a fimilar kind, on a future occasion.

The marquis of Carnarvon (afterward duke of Chandos) succeeded lord Carysfort in the office of Grand Master of England, in March 1754. He began his administration by ordering the Book of Constitutions to be reprinted, under the inspection of a committee, consisting of the Grand Officers, and some other respectable brethren. The Grand Master's zeal and attention to the true interests of the Society were shewn on every occasion. He presented to the Grand Lodge, a large silver jewel, gilt, for the use of the Treasurer, being cross keys in a knot, enamelled with blue; and gave several other proofs of his attachment.

Soon after the election of the marquis of Carnarvon, the Grand Lodge took into confideration a complaint against certain brethren, for assembling, without any legal authority, under the denomination of ancient malons: and who, as fuch, confidered themselves independent of the Society, and not subject to the laws of the Grand Lodge, or to the control of the Grand Master. Dr. Manningham, the Deputy Grand Master, pointed out the necesfity of discouraging such meetings, as being contrary to the laws of the Society, and openly subversive of the allegiance due to the Grand Master. On this representation the Grand Lodge resolved, that the meeting of any brethren under the denomination of Masons, other than as brethren of the ancient and honourable Society of Free and. Accepted Masons established upon the universal system, is inconsistent with the honour and interest of the craft, and a high insult on the Grand Master and the whole body of Masons. In confequence of this resolution, sourteen brethren, who were members of a lodge held at the Ben Johnson's head in Pelham-street, Spitalsields, were expelled the Society, and that lodge was ordered to be erased out of the list.

No preceding Grand Master granted so many provincial deputations as the marquis of Carnaryon-On the 7th of October 1755, his lordship appointed a Provincial Grand Master for Durham. and foon after a very respectable lodge was constituted at Sunderland under his lordship's auspices. In less than two years the following patents were issued by his lordship; 1. for South Carolina; 2. for South Wales; 3. for Antigua; 4. for all North America, where no former provincial was appointed; 5. for Barbadoes, and all other his majesty's islands to the windward of Guadaloupe; 6. for St. Eustatius, Cuba, and St. Martin's, Dutch Caribbee islands in America; 7. for Scilly, and the adjacent islands; 8. for all his majesty's dominions in Germany, with a power to chuse their successors; and o for the County Palatine of Chester, and the City and County of Chester. The greater part of these appointments appear to have been mere honorary grants in favour of individuals, few of them having been attended with any real advantage to the Society.

The marquis of Carnarvon continued to prefide over the fraternity till the 18th of May 1757, when he was succeeded by lord Aberdour; during whose mastership the Grand Lodge voted, among other charities, the sum of fifty pounds to be sent to Germany, to be distributed among such of the soldiers as were Masons in prince Ferdinand's army, whether English, Hanoverians, or Hessians; and this sum was soon after remitted to general Kingsley for the intended purpose.

These were the principal proceedings of the fraternity during the reign of George II., who, on the 5th of October 1760, expired at his palace at Kensington, in the 77th year of his age, and the 34th of his reign.

This period feems to have been the golden æra of Masonry in England; the sciences were cultivated and improved, the royal art was diligently propagated, and true architecture clearly understood; the fraternity were honoured and esteemed; the lodges patronised by exalted characters; and charity, humanity, and benevolence, appeared to be the distinguishing characteristics of Masons.

SECT. X.

History of Masonry in the South of England from the Accession of George III. to the end of the year 1779.

On the 6th of October 1760, his present majesty George III. was proclaimed. No prince ever ascended the throne, whose private virtues and amiable character had so justly endeared him to his people. To see a native of England the sovereign of these realms, afforded the most glorious prospect of fixing our happy constitution in church and state on the firmest base. Under such a patron the polite arts could not fail of meeting with every encouragement; and to the honour of his majesty it is to be observed, that, since his accession to the throne, by his royal muniscence no pains have been spared to explore distant regions in pursuit of useful knowledge, and to dissue science throughout every part of his dominions.

Masonry now flourished at home and abroad under the English Constitution, and lord Aberdour continued at the head of the fraternity five years, during which time the public festivals and quarterly communications were regularly held. lordship equalled any of his predecessors in the number of appointments to the office of Provineial Grand Master, having granted the following deputations: 1. for Antigua and the Leeward Caribbee islands: 2, for the town of Norwich and county of Norfolk; 3. for the Bahama Islands, in the room of the governor deceased; 4- for Hamburgh and Lower Saxony; 5. for Guadaloupe; 6. for Lancaster; 7. for the province of Georgia; 8. for Canada; o. for Andalusia, and places adjacent; 1c. for Bermuda; 11. for Carolina; for Mufquitto shore; and 13. for East India. The fecond of these appointments, viz. for Norwich, is that by which the Society has been materially benefited. By the diligence and attention of the late Edward Bacon efg. to whom the patent was first granted, the lodges in Norwich and Norfolk confiderably increased, and Masonry was regularly conducted in that province under his inspection for many years.

Lord Aberdour held the office of Grand Mafter till the 3d of May 1762, when he was succeeded by earl Ferrers, during whose presidency nothing remarkable occurred. The Society feems at this time to have lost much of its consequence; the general affemblies and communications not having been honoured with the presence of the nobility as formerly, and many lodges erased out of the lift for non-attendance on the duties of the Grand Lodge*. By the diligence and attention, however, of the late general John Salter, then Deputy Grand Master, the business of the Society was carried on with regularity, and the fund of charity confiderably increased. Provincial patents were made out during earl Ferrers's prefidency; 1. for Jamaica; 2. for East India, where no particular provincial was before appointed; 2. for Cornwall; 4. for Armenia; 5. for Westphalia; 6. for Bombay; 7, for the Dukedom of Brunswick; 8, for the Grenades, St. Vincent, Dominica, Tobago, &c.; and q. for Canada. From these appointments no confiderable emoluments have refulted to the Society, excepting from the third and fixth; George Bell for Cornwall; and James Todd for Bombay. Both these gentlemen were particularly attentive to the duties of their respective offices, especially the former, to whom the Society is in a great measure indebted for the flourishing state of Masonry in Cornwall.

* Since this period new Constitutions had been too easily granted, and lodges multiplied beyond proportion. A proper check, however, is now put to this practice, the legislature having prohibited by a late Act of Parliament the constituting any new lodges.

On the 8th of May 1764, at an affembly and feast at Vintners'-hall, lord Blaney was elected Grand Master. Lord Ferrers invested John Revis efg. late Deputy Grand Master, as proxy for his lordship, who continued in office two years; during which time, being chiefly in Ireland, the business of the Society was faithfully executed by his Deputy, general Salter, an active and a vigilant officer. The scheme of opening a subscription for the purchase of furniture for the Grand Lodge was agitated about this time, and fome money collected for the purpose; but the design dropped, for want of encouragement. A new edition of the Book of Constitutions was ordered to be printed under the inspection of a committee, with a continuation of the proceedings of the Society fince the publication of the last edition.

During lord Blaney's presidency, the dukes of Gloucester and Cumberland, his majesty's brothers, were initiated into the Order; the former, at an occasional lodge assembled at the Horn tavern Westminster, on the 16th of February 1766, at which his lordship presided in person; the latter, at an occasional lodge assembled at the Thatched House tavern in St. James's street, under the direction of general Salter.

The following deputations for the office of Provincial Grand Master were granted by lord Blaney: 1. for Barbadoes; 2. for Upper Saxony; 3. for Stockholm; 4. for Virginia; 5. for Bengal; 6. for Italy; 7. for the Upper and Lower Rhine, and the circle of Franconia; 8. for Antigua; 9. for the Electorate of Saxony; 10. for Madras, and its dependencies; 11. for Hampshire; and 12. for Montserrat. The fifth, tenth, and eleventh of these appointments have been faithfully executed. By the indefatigable affiduity of that truly masonic luminary, the late Thomas Dunckerley esq. in whose favour the appointment for Hampshire was first made out, Masonry has made considerable progress in that province, as well as in many other counties in England. Soon after his appointment to this office, he accepted the superintendence of the lodges in Dorsetshire, Eslex; Gloucestershire, Somersetshire, and Herefordshire *. The revival of the Bengal and Madras appointments have been also attended with considerable advantage to the Society, as is evident by the late liberal remittances from the East Indies.

Among feveral regulations respecting the fees of constitutions, and other matters which passed during lord Blaney's administration, was the following: That as the Grand Lodge entertained the highest sense of the honour conserved on the Society by the initiation of the dukes of Gloucester and Cumberland; it was resolved, that each of their royal highnesses should be presented with an apron, lined with blue silk; and that, in all suture processions, they should rank as Past Grand Masters, next to the Grand Officers for the time being. The same compliment was also paid to

In grateful testimony of the zealous and ind farigable exertions of this gentleman for many years to promote the honour and interest of the Society, the Grand Lodge resolved, that he should rank as a Past Senior Grand Warden, and in all processions take place next the present Senior Grand Warden for the time being. In November 1795, he died at Portsmouth.

their royal brother the late duke of York, who was initiated into Masonry abroad, while on his travels.

The duke of Beaufort succeeded lord Blaney in the office of Grand Master, and was installed by proxy at Merchant Taylors'-hall on the 27th of April 1767; and under his patronage the Society flourished.

In the beginning of 1768, two letters were received from the Grand Lodge of France, expressing a desire of opening a regular correspondence with the Grand Lodge of England. This was cheerfully agreed to; and a Book of Constitutions, with a list of the lodges under the constitution of England, and the form of a deputation, elegantly bound, were ordered to be sent as a present to the Grand Lodge of France.

Several regulations for the future government of the Society were also made about this time, particularly one respecting the office of Provincial Grand Master. At a Grand Lodge held at the Crown and Anchor tavern in the Strand, on the 29th of April 1768, it was resolved that ten guineas should be paid to the fund of charity on the appointment of every Provincial Grand Master who had not served the office of Grand Steward.

The most remarkable occurrence during the administration of the duke of Beaufort, was the plan of an incorporation of the Society by royal charter. At a Grand Lodge held at the Crown and Anchor tavern on the 28th of October 1768, a report was made from the Committee of Charity held on the 21st of that month at the Horn tavern in Fleet-street, of the Grand Master's intentions to have the Society incorporated, if it met with the approbation of the brethren; the advantages of the measure were fully explained, and a plan for carrying it into immediate effect was submitted to the consideration of the Committee. This plan being approved in the Grand Lodge, thanks were voted to the Grand Master, for his attention to the interests and prosperity of the Society. The hon. Charles Dillon, the Deputy Grand Master, informed the brethren, that he had submitted to the Committee a plan for raising a fund to build a hall, and purchase jewels, furniture, &c. for the Grand Lodge, independent of the general fund of charity; a measure which, he apprehended, would be a proper prelude to the Incorporation, should it be the wish of the Society to obtain a charter. This plan being also maturely investigated, several amendments were made, and the whole referred to the next Grand Lodge for confirmation. In the mean time it was refolved. that the plan should be printed, and transmitted to every lodge on record *. The duke of Beaufort finding that the Society approved of the Incorporation, contributed his best endeavours to carry the defign into execution: at first he was opposed by a few brethren, who misconceived his good intentions; but the majority of the Society persevering in the measure, a copy of the intended charter was printed, and ordered to be dispersed among the lodges. Before the Society, however, had come to any determined refolution on the business, the members of a respectable lodge, then held at the Half Moon tavern Cheapside, entered a caveat in the attorney-general's office against the Incorporation; and this circumstance being reported to the Grand Lodge, an impeachment was laid against the officers of that lodge, for unwarrantably exposing the private resolutions of the Grand Lodge. On the business being brought before the Grand Lodge, it was determined that the members of the faid lodge had been guilty of a great offence, in prefuming to oppose the resolutions of the Grand Lodge, and frustrate the intentions of the Society. A motion was therefore made, that the lodge should be erased from the lift, but, on the Master acknowledging the fault, and, in the name of himself and his brethren, making a proper apology, the motion was withdrawn, and the offence forgiven. From the return of the different lodges it appeared, that one hundred and fixty-eight had voted for the Incorporation, and only forty-three against it; upon which a motion was made in Grand Lodge on the 28th of April 1769, that the Society should be incorporated, and it was carried in the affirmative by a great majority.

* This plan confifted chiefly of certain fees to be paid by the Grand Officers annually, by new lodges at their conflictation, and by brethren at initiation into Masenry, or admission into lodges as members, &c.

At a Grand Lodge held at the Crown and Anchor tavern on the 27th of October 1769, it was refolved, That the sum of 1300l. then standing in the names of Rowland Berkeley esq. the Grand Treasurer, and Mr. Arthur Beardmore and Mr. Richard Nevison his sureties, in the three per cent. bank consolidated annuities, in trust for the Society, be transferred into the names of the present Grand Officers; and at an Extraordinary Grand Lodge on the 29th of November following, the Society was informed that Mr. Beardmore had refused to join in the transfer; upon which it was resolved that letters should be sent, in the name of the Society, signed by the acting Grand Officers, to lord Blaney the Past Grand Master, and to his Deputy and Wardens, to whom the Grand Treasurer and his sureties had given bond, requesting their concurrence in the resolutions of the Grand Lodge on the 29th of October last. Mr. Beardmore, however, dying soon after, the desire of the Grand Lodge was complied with by Mr. Nevison his executor, and the transfer regularly made.

The duke of Beaufort constituted several new lodges, and granted the following provincial deputations during his prefidency: 1. for South Carolina; 2. Jamaica; 3. Barbadoes; 4. Naples and Sicily: 5. the Empire of Russia; and 6. the Austrian Netherlands. The increase of foreign lodges occasioned the institution of a new officer, a Provincial Grand Master for foreign lodges in general; and his grace accordingly nominated a gentleman for that office. He also appointed Provincial Grand Masters for Kent, Suffolk, Lancashire, and Cumberland. other new appointment likewise took place during his grace's administration, viz. the office of General Inspector or Provincial Grand Master for lodges within the bills of mortality; but the majority of the lodges in London disapproving the appointment, the authority was foon after withdrawn.

At a Grand Lodge held at the Crown and Anchor tavern on the 25th of April 1770, the Provincial Grand Master for foreign lodges acquainted the Society, that he had lately received a letter from Charles baron de Boetzelaer, Grand Master of the National Grand Lodge of the United Provinces of Holland and their dependencies, requesting to be acknowledged as fuch by the Grand Lodge of England, whose superiority he confessed; and promising, that if the Grand Lodge of England would agree in future not to constitute any new lodge within his jurisdiction, the Grand Lodge of Holland would observe the same restriction with respect to all parts of the world where lodges were already established under the patronage of England. Upon these terms he requested that a firm and friendly alliance might be established between the Officers of both Grand Lodges, an annual correspondence kept up, and each Grand Lodge regularly made acquainted once in every year with the most material transactions of the other. On this report being made, the Grand Lodge agreed, that fuch an alliance or compact should be entered into, and executed, agreeably to baron de Boetzelaer's request.

In 1771, a bill was brought into parliament by the hon. Charles Dillon, the Deputy Grand Mafter, for incorporating the Society by act of parliament; but on the second reading of the bill, it having been opposed by Mr. Onslow, at the desire of several brethren who had petitioned the house against it, Mr. Dillon moved to postpone the consideration of it fine die; and thus the design of an Incorporation fell to the ground.

Lord Petre succeeded the duke of Beaufort on the 4th of May 1772, when several regulations were made for better fecuring the property belonging to the Society. A confiderable fum having been subscribed for the purpose of building a hall, a committee was appointed to superintend the management of that business. Every measure was adopted to enforce the laws for raising a new fundto carry the defigns of the Society into execution, and no pains were spared by the committee to complete the purpose of their appointment. By their . report to the Grand Lodge on the 27th of April 1774, it appeared, that they had contracted for the purchase of a plot of ground and premises, consisting of two large commodious dwelling-houses, and a large garden, situated in Great Queen-street, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, late in the possession of Philip Carteret Webb efq. deceased, the particulars of which were specified in a plan then delivered; that the real value appeared to be 3,205l. at the least, but that 3,180l. was the sum contracted to be paid for the premises; that the front-house might produce ool. per annum, and the back-house would furnish commodious committee-rooms, offices, kitchens, &c. and that the garden was fufficiently large to contain a complete hall for the use of the Society. the expence of which was calculated not to exceed 3000l.* This report having met with general approbation, Lord Petre, the dukes of Beaufort and Notwithstanding this estimate, it appears by the Grand Treafurer's accounts, that in 1702 above 20,000l. had been expended on this building, and that, exclusive of an annuity of 250l. on account of a tontine, there then remained due from the hall fund to fundry tradesmen a considerable debt, the greatest part of which has been since paid off. The tayern has been rebuilt, and enlarged, within these sew years, which has increased the expence to 30,000l.

Chandos, earl Ferrers, and lord viscount Dudley and Ward, were appointed trustees for the Society, and the conveyance of the premises which had been purchased was made out in their names.

On the 22d of February 1775, the hall-committee reported to the Grand Lodge, that a plan had been proposed and approved for raising good, to complete the defigns of the Society, by granting annuities for lives, with benefit of survivorship; a plan now known under the name of Tontine. It was accordingly refolved, That there should be one hundred lives at 50l. each; that the whole premises belonging to the Society in Great Queenftreet, with the hall to be built thereon, should be vested in trustees, as a security to the subscribers, who should be paid 51. per cent. for their money advanced, the whole interest amounting to 250l. per annum; that this interest should be divided among the fubscribers, and the survivors or survivor of them; and, upon the death of the last furvivor, the whole to determine for the benefit of the Society. The Grand Lodge approving the plan, the subscription immediately commenced, and in less than three months it was complete; upon which the trustees of the Society conveyed the estate to the trustees of the tontine, in pursuance of a resolution of the Grand Lodge entered into for that purpose.

On the 1st of May 1775, the foundation-stone *

ANNO REGNI GEORGII TERTII QUINDECIMO, SALUTIS HUMANÆ, MDCCLXXV. MENSIS MAII DIE PRIMO, HUNC PRIMUM LAPIDEM.

• Within the foundation-stone was deposited a plate, with the following inscription;

of the new hall was laid in folemn form*, in the presence of a numerous company of the brethren. After the ceremony, the company proceeded in carriages to Leathersellers'-hall, where an elegant entertainment was provided on the occasion; and at this meeting the office of Grand Chaplain was first instituted.

The building of the hall went on fo rapidly, that it was finished in little more than twelve months. On the 23d of May 1776, it was opened,

* For the ceremony observed on this occasion see p. 92.

AULÆ LATOMORUM,
(ANGLICE, FREE AND ACCEPTED MASONS)
POSUERIT

HONORATISSIMUS ROB. EDV. DOM. PETRE, BARO PETRE, DE WRITTLE,

SUMMUS LATOMORUM ANGLIÆ MAGISTER; ASSIDENTIBUS

VIRO ORNATISSIMO ROWLANDO HOLT, ARMIGERO, SUMMI MAGISTRI DEPUTATO; VIRIS ORNATISSIMIS

JOH. HATCH ET HEN. DAGGE, SUMMIS GUBERNATORIBUS:

PLENOQUE CORAM FRATRUM CONCURSU; QUO ETIAM TEMPORE REGUM, PRINCIPIUMQUE VIRORUM FAVORE.

STUDIOQUE SUSTENTATUM—MAXIMOS PER LUROPAM

HONORES OCCUPAVERAT NOMEN LATOMORUM,

CUI INSUPER NOMINI SUMMUM ANGLIÆ CONVEN-TUM PRÆESSE FECERAT

UNIVERSA FRATRUM PER ORBEM MULTITUDO, F. COELO DESCENDIT.

ΓΝΩΘΙ ΣΕΑΥΤΟΝ.

N 4

and dedicated *, in folemn form, to MASONRY, VIRTUE, and UNIVERSAL CHARITY and BENEVO-LENCE, in the presence of a brilliant assembly of the brethren. A new Ode †, written and set to music on the occasion, was performed, before a number of ladies who honoured the Society with their company on that day. An exordium on Masonry, not less elegant than instructive, was given by the Grand Secretary, and an excellent oration delivered by the Grand Chaplain. In commemoration of an event so pleasing to the Society, it was agreed, that the anniversary of this ceremony should be ever after regularly kept.

Thus was completed, under the aufpices of a nobleman, whose amiable character as a man, and zeal as a Mason, may be equalled, but cannot be surpassed, that elegant and highly finished room in Great Queen-street, in which the annual assembly and quarterly communications of the fraternity are held; and to the accomplishment of which many lodges, as well as private individuals, have liberally subscribed. It is to be regretted, that the finances of the Society will not admit of its being solely referved for masonic purposes.

The brethren of St. John's lodge in Newcastle, animated by the example set them in the metropolis, opened a subscription among themselves for the purpose of building, in the Low Friar Chair in that town, a new hall for their meetings; and, on the 23d of September 1776, the foundation-stone * of that building was laid by Mr. Francis Peacock, then Master of the lodge. This edifice was speedily completed, furnished, and dedicated; but we learn that it has been since sold, and appropriated to other purposes.

* For the ceremony of dedication fee p. 95.

<sup>4</sup> See Ode II. at the end of the volume.

The flourishing state of the Society in England attracting the attention of the Masons in Germany, they solicited our friendship and alliance. The Grand Lodge at Berlin, under the patronage of the prince of Hesse Darmstadt, requested a friendly union and correspondence with their brethren of England, which was agreed to, on the Grand Lodge of Germany engaging to remit an annual donation to the fund of charity.

The business of the Society having now considerably increased, it was resolved, that the Grand Secretary should be permitted in suture to employ a deputy, or assistant, at an annual salary proportioned to his labour.

* Underneath the from was placed a copper-plate, with the following infeription:

ÆDIFICII HVIVS
IN MVTVAM AMICITIAM STABILIENDAM
PRO SVMMI NATVRÆ NVMINIS
ARCHITECTI REGNA FORIS VENERATIONE
PRO VIRI INVESTIGATIONE
MORVM SCIENTIÆ ARTIVMQ. BONARVM
INGENVO CVLTV

HVMANI CENERIS BENEFICIO
SOLATIVM TEMPESTIVVM PRÆBENDO
CONVENTVI FRATERNO SACRI
FRANCISCVS PEACOCK PRÆFFCT. HONORAND, FVNDAMEN FA POSUIT
IN CALEND. OCTOB.
AN. SAL. HVM. MDCCLXXVI.
AN. CONSORT, MMMMMMDCCLXXVI.

On the 14th of February 1776, the Grand Lodge resolved, That in suture all Past Grand Officers should be permitted to wear a particular gold jewel, the ground enamelled blue; and each officer be distinguished by the jewel which he wore while in office; with this difference, that such honorary jewel should be fixed within a circle, or oval; on the borders of which were to be inscribed his name, and the year in which he served the office. This jewel was intended to be worn in Grand Lodge pendant to a broad blue riband, and, on other occasions, to be fixed to the breast by a narrow blue riband*.

Many regulations respecting the government of the fraternity were established during lord Petre's administration. The meetings of irregular Masons again attracting notice, on the 10th of April 1777, the following law was enacted: "That the per-" fons who affemble in London, and elfewhere, in the character of Masons, calling themselves " Ancient Masons, and at present said to be under " the patronage of the duke of Athol, are not to be "countenanced, or acknowledged, by any regu-" lar lodge, or Mason, under the constitution of " England: nor shall any regular Mason be present "at any of their conventions, to give a fanction "to their proceedings, under the penalty of for-" feiting the privileges of the Society: nor shall " any person initiated at any of their irregular

* How far the introduction of new ornaments is reconcilable to the original practices of the Society, I will not prefume to determine; but it is the opinion of many old Masons, that multiplying honorary distinctions among Masons, lessens the value and importance of the real jewels by which the acting officers of the lodge are distinguished.

"meetings, be admitted into any lodge, without being re-made*. That this cenfure shall not extend to any lodge, or Mason made, in Scotland or Ireland, under the constitution of either of these kingdoms; or to any lodge, or Mason made abroad, under the patronage of any foreign Grand Lodge in alliance with the Grand Lodge of England; but that such lodge and Masons shall be deemed regular and constitutional."

An Appendix to the Book of Constitutions, containing all the principal proceedings of the Society fince the publication of the last edition, was ordered to be printed; also a new annual publication, intitled THE FREE-MASONS' CALENDAR; and the profits arising from the sale of both, were to be regularly brought to account in the charity fund. To preserve the consequence of the Society, the following law was also enacted at this time: That the fees for constitutions, initiations, &c. be advanced; that no person be initiated into Masonry in any lodge under the constitution of England for a less sum than two guineas; and that the name, age, profession, and place of residence of every perfon so initiated, and of every admitted member of a regular lodge since the 29th of October 1768, be registered, under the penalty of such Mason made, or member admitted, being deprived of the privileges of the Society.

† The usual charitable donation at initiation in many lodges is now seldom under five guineas, and more frequently double that fum.

* Rema k.—This censure only extends to those irregular lodges in London, which seceded from the rest of the fraternity in 1738, and set up an independent government, in open defiance of the established authority of the kingdom, and the general rules of the institution. See p. 241—244; it cannot apply to the Grand Lodge in York city, or to any lodges under that truly ancient and respectable banner; as the independence and regular-proceedings of that affembly have been fully admitted and authenticated by the Grand Lodge in London, in the Book of Constitutions printed under their sanction in 1738, p. 195.

The Masons in Sunderland having considerably increased during his lordship's administration, an elegant hall was built in that town for their meet. ings. On the 16th of July 1778, this hall was dedicated in folemn form before a numerous company of brethren; on which occasion a very animated oration on Masonry was delivered in the presence of above 120 ladies. On the 19th of November 1782, this hall was destroyed by fire, and many valuable books and papers were burnt. The zeal of the brethren however induced them the following year to build another hall, named Phoenix-hall, of which the foundation-stone was laid in great pomp on the 5th of April 1784; and in the following year it was finished, and dedicated in solemn form.

Lord Petre granted provincial deputations for Madras and Virginia; also for Hants, Sussex, and Surrey. During his lordship's presidency, some lodges were erased out of the list for nonconformity to the laws, but many new ones were added; so that, under his banner, the Society became truly respectable.

On the first of May 1777, lord Petre was succeeded by the duke of Manchester; during whose administration the tranquillity of the Society was interrupted by some private dissensions. An unfortunate dispute having arisen among the members of the Lodge of Antiquity, on account of some proceedings of the brethren of that lodge on the festival of St. John the Evangelist after his grace's election, the complaint was introduced into the Grand Lodge, where it occupied the attention of every committee and communication for twelve months. It originated from the Master, Wardens, and some of the members, in consequence of a resolution of the lodge, having attended divine fervice at St. Dunstan's church in Fleet-street, in the clothing of the Order, and walked back to the Mitre tavern in their regalia, not having obtained a dispensation for the purpose. The Grand Lodge determined the measure to be a violation of the general regulations respecting public processions*, and various opinions being formed, feveral brethren were highly difgusted.

Another circumstance tended still farther to widen this breach. The Lodge of Antiquity having expelled three of its members for misbehaviour, the Grand Lodge interfered, and, without proper investigation, ordered them to be re-instated. With this order, the lodge refused to comply, the members conceiving themselves competent and sole judges in the choice of their own private Members. The privileges of the Lodge of Antiquity † acting by immemorial constitution began to be set up, in opposition to the supposed uncontrollable authority of the Grand Lodge established by themselves in 1717; and in the investigation of this point, the original cause of the dispute was totally forgotten. Matters were now carried to the extreme on both fides, resolutions precipitately entered into, and edicts inadvertently issued; memorials and remonstrances were presented in vain, and at last a rupture enfued. The Lodge of Antiquity, on one hand, supported its immemorial privileges; appointed committees to examine records; applied to the old lodge in York city, and to the lodges in Scotland and Ireland, for advice; entered a protest against, and peremptorily refused to comply with, the resolutions of the Grand Lodge; discontinued the attendance of the Master and Wardens at the committees of charity and quarterly communications as its representatives; published a manifesto in its vindication; notified its separation from the Grand Lodge; and avowed an alliance with the Grand Lodge of all England held in the city of York, and every lodge and Mason who wished to act in conformity to the original constitutions. The Grand Lodge, on the other hand, enforced its edicts, and extended protection to the few brethren whose cause it had espoused, by permitting them to assemble as a regular Lodge without any warrant, under the denomination of the Lodge of Antiquity itself, and fuffering them to appear by their representatives at the Grand Lodge as the real Lodge of Antiquity, from which they had been excluded, and which still continued to act by its own immemorial constitution: anathemas were issued, and several worthy men expelled the Society, for refusing to surrender the property of lodge to persons who had been regularly expelled from it; while printed letters were circulated, with the Grand Treasurer's accounts, highly derogatory to the dignity of the Society. This produced a schism, which subsisted for the space of ten years.

• For an explanation of the nature of public proceffions at funerals, fee p. 99.

† For an account of this lodge and its privileges, see p. 209. to p. 215.

To justify the proceedings of the Grand Lodge, the following resolution of the Committee of Charity held in February 1779, was printed and disperfed among the lodges:

"Refolved, That every private lodge derives its authority from the Grand Lodge, and that no authority but the Grand Lodge can withdraw or take away that power. That though the maijority of a lodge may determine to quit the Society, the constitution, or power of assembling, remains with, and is vested in, the rest of the members who may be desirous of continuing their allegimance; and that if all the members withdraw themselves, the constitution is extinct, and the authority reverts to the Grand Lodge."

This resolution, it was argued, might operate with respect to any lodge which derived its constitution from the Grand Lodge, but could not apply to one which derived its authority from another channel, long before the establishment of the Grand Lodge, and which authority had never been superseded, but repeatedly admitted and acknowledged. Had it appeared upon record, that, after the establishment of the Grand Lodge, this original authority had been surrendered, forfeited, or exchanged for a warrant from the Grand Lodge, the Lodge of Antiquity must have admitted the resolution of the Grand Lodge its full force; but as no fuch circumstance appeared on record, the members of the Lodge of Antiquity were justified in considering their immemorial constitution facred, while they chose to exist as a lodge, and act in obedience to the ancient constitutions.

Considering the subject in this point of view, it evidently appears that the resolutions of the Grand Lodge could have no effect on the Lodge of Antiquity, after the publication of the manifesto which avowed its feparation; nor while the members of that lodge continued to meet regularly as heretofore, and to promote the laudable purposes of Masonry on their old independent foundation. The Lodge of Antiquity, it was afferted, could not be diffolved while the majority of its members kept together, and acted in conformity to the original constitutions; and no edict of the Grand Lodge, or its committees, could deprive the members of that lodge of a right which had been admitted to be vested in themselves collectively from time immemorial; a right which had not been derived from, or ever ceded to, any Grand Lodge whatever.

To understand more clearly the nature of that constitution by which the Lodge of Antiquity is upheld, we must have recourse to the usages and customs which prevailed among Masons at the end of the last, and beginning of the present, century. The fraternity then had a discretionary power to meet as Masons, in certain numbers, according to their degrees, with the approbation of the master of the work where any public building was carrying on, as often as they found it necessary so to do; and when so met, to receive into the Order brothers and fellows, and practife the rites of Masonry. The idea of investing Masters and Wardens of lodges in Grand Lodge affembled, or the Grand Master himself, with a power to grant warrants of constitution to certain brethren to meet as Masons at certain houses on the observance of certain conditions, had then no existence. The fraternity were under no fuch restrictions. The ancient charges were the only standard for the regulation of conduct, and no law was known in the Society which thosé charges did not inculcate. To the award of the fraternity at large in general meeting affembled once or twice in a year, all brethren were subject, and the authority of the Grand Master never extended beyond the bounds of that general meeting. Every private affembly, or lodge, was under the direction of its particular Master, chosen for the occasion, whose authority terminated with the meeting. When a lodge was fixed at any particular place for a certain time, an attestation from the brethren present entered on record, was a sufficient proof of its regular constitution; and this practice prevailed for many years after the revival of Masonry in the South of England. By this authority, which never proceeded from the Grand Lodge, unfettered by any other restrictions than the constitutions of Mafonry, the Lodge of Antiquity has always acted, and still continues to act.

While I have endeavoured to explain the subject of this unfortunate dispute, I rejoice in the opportunity which the proceedings of the grand feast in 1790 have afforded, of promoting harmony, by restoring to the privileges of the Society all the brethren of the Lodge of Antiquity who had been falfely accused and expelled in 1779. By the operation of our professed principles, and through the mediation of a true friend to genuine Mafonry, the late William Birch efq. Past Master of the Lodge of Antiquity, unanimity was happily restored; the manifesto published by that lodge in 1779 revoked; and the Master and Wardens of that truly ancient affociation, the first lodge under the English constitution, resumed their seats in Grand Lodge as heretofore; while the brethren who had received the fanction of the Society as nominal members of the Lodge of Antiquity during the separation, were re-united with the original members of the real lodge, and the privileges of that venerable body limited to their original channel.

Although I have confiderably abridged my observations on this unfortunate dispute in the latter editions of this Treatise, I still think it proper to record my sentiments on the subject, in justice to the gentlemen with whom I have long affociated; and to convince my brethren, that our re-union with the Society has not induced me to vary a well-grounded opinion, or deviate from the strict line of consistency which I have hitherto purfued.

SECT. XI.

History of the most remarkable Events in the Society from 1779 to 1791 inclusive.

AMIDST these disagreeable altercations, intelligence arrived of the rapid progress of the Society in India, and that many new lodges had been constituted, which were amply supported by the first' characters in the East. Omdit-ul-Omrah Bahauder. eldest fon of the nabob of the Carnatic, had been initiated into Masonry in the lodge at Trichinopoly near Madras; and had expressed the highest veneration for the institution. This news having been transmitted to England officially, the Grand Lodge determined to fend a congratulatory letter to his highness on the occasion, accompanied with a blue apron elegantly decorated, and a copy of the Book of Constitutions superbly bound. To Sir John Day, advocate-general of Bengal, the execution of this commission was entrusted *. In the beginning of 1780, an answer was received from his highness, acknowledging the receipt of the present, and expressing the warmest attachment and benevolence to his brethren in England. This letter, which is written in the Persian language, was enclosed in an elegant cover of cloth of gold, and addressed To the Grand Master and Grand Lodge of England.

At the grand feast in 1792, Sir John was honoured with a blue appon and the rank of a Grand Officer, as a compliment for his meritorious services on this occasion.

This flattering mark of attention from so distinguished a personage abroad, was peculiarly grateful to the Grand Lodge; who immediately resolved, that an answer should be prepared and transmitted to his highness, expressing the high opinion which the brethren in England entertained of his merits, and requesting the continuance of his friendship and protection to the Masonic institution in the East. The thanks of the Grand Lodge were voted to Sir John Day; and a translation of his highness's letter * was ordered to be copied on vellum, and,

- * As this Letter is replete with genuine good fense and warm benevolence, we shall here insert the translation for the gratification of our brethren:
- "To the right worshipful his Grace the Duke of Manchester, Grand "Master of the illustrious and henevolent Society of Free and Accepted. "Masons under the Constitution of England, and the Grand Lodge "thereof.
  - "Much honoured SIR, and BRETHREN,
- "An early knowledge and participation of the benefits arifing to our house, from its intimate union of councils and interests with the British nation, and a deep veneration for the laws, constitution, and manners of the latter, have, for many years of my life, led me to seize every opportunity of drawing the ties between us fill closer and closer.
- "By the accounts which have reached me, of the principles and practices of your frateinity, nothing can be more pleafing to the fovereign Ruler of the universe, whom we all, though in different ways, addre, or more honourable to his creatures; for they stand universal benevolence.
- "Under this conviction, I had long wished to be admitted of your fraternity, and now that I am initiated, I consider the title of an English Mason, as one of the most honourable that I possess; for it is at once a cement of the friendship between your nation and me, the friend of mankind.
- "I have received from the advocate-general of Bengal, Sir John Day, the very acceptable mark of attention and effects with which with the original, elegantly framed and glazed, hung up in the hall at every public meeting of the Society.

The first testimony which Omdit-ul-Omrah gave of his regard to the institution, was by the initiation of his brother Omur-ul-Omrah, who seems to be equally attached with himself in promoting the welfare of the Society.

Another event has also taken place at Madras, which must be very satisfactory to the brethren of England. The divisions and secosions which originated in London in 1738, having unfortunately reached India; by the intervention of brigadier general Horne, who had been appointed, by patent from the duke of Cumberland, Provincial Grand Master on the Coast of Coromandel, an union of the brethren in that part of the world has been effected, and the lodge, No. 152, styling themselves Ancient York Masons, has joined a regular &quot; you have favoured me: it has been presented with every circum" stance of deserence and respect that the situation of things here, of and the temper of the times, would admit of; and I do affure your for grace, and the brethren at large, that he has done ample justice

&quot; to the commission you have consided to him, and has executed it

*i in fuch manner as to do honour to himfelf and me.

&quot;I shall avail myself of a proper opp rtunity, to convince your grace, and the rest of the brethren, That Omsit-u'-Omrah is not an unfeeling brother, or heedless of the precepts he has imbibed;

&quot; and that, while he teftifies his love and effect for his brethren, by

&#x27;4' ftrengthening the bonds of humanity, he means to minister to the 4' wants of the diffrested.

&quot;May the common Father of All, the one omnipotent and meratical God, take you into his holy keeping, and give you health, ciful God, take you into his holy keeping, and give you health, fe peace, and length of years, prays your highly honoured and affeca-

<sup>4</sup> tionate brother, OMDIT UL OMRAH EAHAUDER."

lodge under his auspices, and voluntarily surrendered the irregular warrant under which they had formerly acted. This desirable object being accomplished, and the wishes of the brethren suffilled, the General requested their assistance to form a Grand Lodge, when the following Officers were appointed, and installed in due form:

Brigadier gen. Horne, Prov. Grand Master.
Ter. Gahagan esq. Deputy Grand Master.
Jos. Du Pre Porcher esq. Acting Grand Master.
Lieut. col. Ross, Grand Architect.
Lieut. col. J. Campbell, Sen. Grand Warden.
—Hamilton esq. Junior Grand Warden.
James Grierson esq. Grand Secretary.
James Amos esq. Grand Treasurer.
Lieutenant-colonel Moor-house and colonel L.
Lucas esqrs. Grand Stewards.
Major Maule, Grand Orator.
Charles Bromley esq. Grand Sword-Bearer.

The Grand Lodge having been regularly established, a proposal was made, that a new lodge should be formed at Madras, under the name of Persect Unanimity, No. I. This was unanimously agreed to, and the Provincial Grand Master giving notice that he should persorm the ceremony of confecration on Saturday the 7th of October 1787, in commemoration of the union which had been so amicably formed that day, requested the proper officers to attend on the occasion. Accordingly, on the morning of the day appointed, upwards of sifty brethren assembled at the house on Choultry Plain in which the public rooms were held, and at half past eleven o'clock the ceremony commenced. After the preparatory business had been gone through in Grand Lodge, a procession * was formed, and Here follows the Order of the Procession.

 Two Tylers, with drawn fwords.
 Music.

Brothers Elphinstone and Moorhouse, Grand Stewards, with white wands.

Brother Gillespie, as youngest apprentice, carrying the rough stone.

Apprentices, two and two.

Fellow-crafts, two and two.

Master-masons, two and two.

Brothers Latham and Robson, as Secretary and Treasurer of the new lodge.

PAST-MASTER.

Brother Taner, carrying a filver pitcher with corn.

Brothers Gomond and Goree, carrying pitchers, containing wine and oil.

Brothers Home and Horfiman, carrying two great lights. CHOIRISTERS.

Brothers Rofs, Grand Architect, carrying the polished stone. Brother Donaldson, (36th regiment,) as Grand Sword-Bearer, carrying the sword of state.

Prother Grierson, Grand Secretary, with his bag.

Brother Amos, Grand Secretary, with his staff.

The Lodge, covered with white satin, carried by four Tylers.

The worshipful brother Lucas, as Master of the new lodge, carrying the bible, compaffer, and square, on a crimson velvet cushion, supported by Prothers Dalrymple and Chase, Affistant Stewards.

Brother Sir George Keith, carrying the filver cenfer.

Brother Maule, Grand Orator.

Third great light carried by Brother Gregory.

Brothers Campbell and Hamilton, Senior and Junior Grand Wardens, with their columns and trun beons.

Brother Porcher, Acting Grand Master. Brother Sadlier, as chief Magistrate.

Brother Sir Henry Coshy, carrying the Book of Constitutions.

Brigadier General Hornes. Provincial Grand Master, supported by Brothers Howley and Harris, Assistant Stewards.

marched three times round the lodge; after which the business of consecration commenced, and was completed in a manner suitable to the solemnity of the occasion. Several old Masons, who were prefent, declared that they never saw a ceremony conducted with more dignity and propriety.

The following brethren were then installed Officers of this new lodge, viz. Colly Lyons Lucas esq. Master; Pullier Spencer esq. Senior Warden; George Robert Latham esq. Junior Warden; George Maule esq. Secretary; John Robins esq. Treasurer.

At two o'clock the brethren fat down to an excellent dinner, which had been provided by the Grand Lodge; and many masonic and loyal toasts being drank, the day was concluded with that pleasing sestivity, harmony, and good fellowship, which has always distinguished the Society of Free and Accepted Masons.

We shall now return to the history of Masonry in England; and recite the particulars which are most deserving attention.

During the prefidency of the duke of Manchester, new lodges were constituted in different parts of England, and considerable additions made to the general funds of the Society. The sums voted to distressed brethren far exceeded those of any former period; and among other instances of liberality, may be specified, a very generous contribution of one hundred pounds, which was voted by the Grand Lodge towards the relief of our brethren in America who had suffered great losses in consequence of the rebellion there, and whose situation was very feelingly described in a letter from the lodge No. I. at Halifax in Nova Scotia.

A fingular proposition was made in Grand Lodge on the 8th of April 1778, that the Grand Master and his Officers should be distinguished in future at all public meetings by robes, to be provided at their own expence; and that Past Grand Officers should have the same privilege. This measure at first was favourably received; but, on farther investigation in the Hall Committee, to which it was referred, it was found to be so diametrically opposite to the original plan of the institution, that it was very properly laid aside.

The finances of the Society occupied great part of the proceedings of the Committees and Communications during his grace's administration. The debts due on account of the hall appearing to be very confiderable, it was determined to make an application to the lodges to raise 2000l. to pay them off. For this purpose, in consequence of a plan offered to the confideration of the Grand Lodge in June 1779, it was refolved, that a fubscription should be opened, to raise the money by loan, without interest, at the discretion of the subscribers; that 251. should be the fum limited for each subferiber, and the number of fubferibers to be one hundred; and that the monies fo subscribed should be repaid, in equal proportions, among the fubferibers, at fuch times as the hall-fund would admit. It was also determined, that an honorary medal should be presented to every subscriber, as a mark of respect, on account of the service which he had rendered the Society; and that the bearer of such medal, if a Master Mason, should have the privilege of being present at, and voting in, all the suture meetings of the Grand Lodge. This mark of attention prompted some lodges, as well as individuals, to contribute, and the greatest part of the money was speedily raised, and applied for the purpose intended.

The Stewards' Lodge, finding their finances much reduced by several members having withdrawn their annual subscriptions, applied to the Grand Lodge for relief; upon which it was refolved, that in future no Grand Officer should be appointed, who was not at the time a subscribing member of the Stewards' Lodge.

A measure, however, of more importance attracted the attention of the Society at this period. It had been observed with regret, that a number of worthy brethren in distress had been subjected to much inconvenience and disappointment from a want of relief during the long summer recess, as there was seldom any Committee of Charity held from the beginning of April to the end of October. To remedy this complaint, the Grand Lodge unanimously resolved, that an Extraordinary Committee should meet annually in the last week of July, or first week of August, to administer temporary relief to such distressed objects as might regularly apply, not exceeding five pounds to one person.

The business of the Society having of late very confiderably increased, the Grand Lodge was induced to appoint pro tempore an affistant to the Grand Secretary, to hold equal rank and power with himfelf in the Grand Lodge *. Among many regulations which were now established, it was determined that in future no person should hold two offices at the same time in the Grand Lodge.

The Grand Lodge of Germany having applied for leave to fend a representative to the Grand Lodge of England, in order more effectually to cement the union and friendship of the brethren of both countries, brother John Leonahrdi was appointed to that office. The request being complied with, a resolution passed, that, in compliment to the Grand Lodge of Germany, brother Leonahrdi should wear the clothing of a Grand Officer, and rank next to Past Grand Officers in all the public meetings of the Society.

This additional cement was highly pleafing; and led the brethren to regret, that no intercourse or correspondence should have subsisted nearer home, between the Grand Lodge of England and the Grand Lodges of Scotland and Ireland, though all the members were now subjects of the same sovereign, and happily united in the encouragement of the Art. At the communication in April 1782, this important business coming under consideration, after a variety of opinions had been delivered, it was unanimously resolved, that the Grand Master should be requested to adopt such means as his wisdom might suggest, to promote a good under anding among the brethren of the three united kingdoms. Notwithstanding this resolution, the wishedfor union has not yet been accomplished; but we trust from some late proceedings in the Grand Lodge of Scotland, through the mediation of the Earl of Moira, that event is not far distant.

* The hufinefs is now conducted by one person as heretofore, who finds an affishant to act as Deputy; and a stray of rock, per annum from the Charity and Hall sunds jointly has been voted, out of which the Deputy's see is paid.

At this meeting also, the pleasing intelligence was communicated, that the duke of Cumberland intended to accept the government of the Society. This having been regularly stated to the Grand Lodge, his highness was proposed Grand Master elect; and, in compliment to him, it was resolved, that he should have the privilege of nominating a peer of the realm as Acting Grand Master, who should be empowered to superintend the Society in his absence; and that, at any future period when the fraternity might be honoured with a Prince of the blood at their head, the same privilege should be granted.

At the annual grand feast on the 1st of May 1782, the duke of Cumberland was unanimously elected Grand Master; and it being signified to the Society that his highness meant to appoint the earl of Essingham Acting Grand Master, the appointment was confirmed, and his lordship presided as proxy for his royal highness during the feaft.

On the 8th of January 1783, a motion was made in Grand Lodge, and afterward confirmed, that the interest of five per cent. on 1000l. which had been advanced for the purposes of the hall from the charity fund, should cease to be paid; and further, that the principal should be annihilated, and funk into the hall-fund. In consequence of this resolution, the money has been regularly brought to account in the hall expenditures. Many other regulations were confirmed at this meeting, to render the hall-fund more productive, and to ensorce obedience to the laws respecting it *. How far

- * The regulations established at this meeting were as follows:
- 1. That no brother initiated fince October 29, 1768, shall be appointed to the honour of wearing a blue or red apron, unless the Grand Secretary certifies that his name has been registered, and the fees paid.
- 2. That no brother initiated fince that time, shall be appointed Master or Warden of a lodge, or be permitted to attend any committee of charity, or grand lodge, unless his name has been registered, and the sees paid.
- 3. That every petitioner for charity, initiated fince that time, shall fet forth in his petition, the lodge in which, and the time when, he was made a Mason; in order that the Grand Scoretary may certify, by indorsement on the back of the petition, whether his name has been registered, and the tees paid.
- 4. That every lodge shall transmit to the Grand Secretary, on or before the grand feast in every year, a left of all persons initiated, or members admitted, together with the registering sees; or notice that they have not initiated or admitted any, that their silence may not be imputed to contempt.
- 5. That to prevent the plea of ignorance or forgetfulness, a blank form shall be printed, and sent to each lodge, to be filled up, and returned to the Grand Secretary.
- 6. That the Grand Secretary shall lay before the first quarterly communication after each grand feast, an account of such lodges as have not registered their members within the preceding year, that they may be erased from the list of lodges, or be otherwise dealt with as the Grand Lodge may think expedient.
- 7. That to prevent any injury to individuals, by being excluded from the privileges of the Society, through the neglect of their lodges, in 'their names not having been duly registered, any brethren, on producing sufficient proofs that they have paid the due registering fees to their lodges, shall be capable of enjoying all the privileges of the Society; but the offending lodges shall be rigorously.

fome of these regulations are consistent with the original plan of the institution, must be left to abler judges to determine; but it is certain that, in earlier periods of our history, such compulsory regulations were unnecessary.

At the Grand Lodge held on the 23d of November 1783, an addition was made to the Grand Officers, by the appointment of a Grand Portrait Painter; and, at the request of the duke of Manchester, that honour was conferred on the rev. William Peters, in testimony of the services which he had rendered to the Society, by his elegant present of the portrait of lord Petre.

During the remainder of this year, there was fearcely any farther business of importance transacted. On the 19th of November, information was given to the Grand Lodge, that two brethren, under fanction of the Royal Military Lodge at Woolwich, which claimed the privilege of an itinerant lodge, had lately held an irregular meeting in the King's Bench prison, and had there unwarrantably initiated fundry persons into Masonry. The Grand Lodge, conceiving this to be an infringement on the privileges of every regular constituted proceeded against, for detaining fees that are the property of the Society.

On the 20th of March 1788, an additional regulation was made, "That ten shillings and fix-pence be paid to the Grand Longe for registering the name of every Mason initiated in any lodge under the constitution after the 5th of May 1788." And at this meeting another resolution passed, "That no lodge should be permitted to attend or vote in Grand Lodge, which had not complied with this regulation."

lodge, ordered the said lodge to be erased from the list; and determined, that it was inconsistent with the principles of Masonry to hold any lodge, for the purposes of making, passing, or raising Masons, in any prison, or place of consinement.

At this Grand Lodge also, it was resolved, to enact certain regulations, subjecting the Deputy Grand Master and Grand Wardens to fines, in case of non-attendance on the public meetings of the Society; and these regulations were confirmed in Grand Lodge on the 11th of February sollowing.

While those proceedings were carrying on in England, the brethren in Scotland were prosecuting their labours with equal zeal for the good of the crast. The great improvements made in the city of Edinburgh afforded ample room for ingenious architects to display their masonic talents and abilities; and in this city the operative part of the fraternity were fully occupied, in rearing stately mansions, and planning elegant squares.

On the 1st of August 1785, a very pleasing fight was exhibited to every well-wisher to the embellishment of Edinburgh, in the ceremony of laying the foundation-stone of the South Bridge, being the first step to farther improvement. In the morning of that day, the right hon, the Lord Provost and Magistrates, attended by the Grand Master Mason of Scotland, and a number of nobility and gentry, with the masters, office-bearers, and brethren of the several lodges, walked from the parliament-house to the bridge in procession*. The streets were lined by the 58th regiment, and the city guard.

Lord Haddo, Grand Master, having arrived at the place, laid the foundation-stone with the usual folemnities. His lordship standing on the east, with the fubflitute on his right hand, and the Grand Wardens on the west, the square, the plumb, the level, and the mallet, were fuccessively delivered by an operative mason to the Substitute, and by him to the Grand Master, who applied the square to that part of the stone, which was square, the plumb to the feveral edges, the level above the stone in several positions, and then with the mallet gave three knocks, faying, "May the Grand Architect of the Universe grant a bleffing on this foundation-stone, which we have now laid; and by his providence enable us to finish this, and every other work which may be undertaken for the embellishment and advantage of this city!" On this the brethren gave the honours.

The cornucopia and two filver veffels were then brought from the table, and delivered, the cornucopia to the Substitute, and two vessels to the

The following Order of Procession was observed:
The proper Officers, bearing the city infignia.
The right hon. Lord Provost and Magistrates.

Band of instrumental music.

A band of fingers.

The Lodges according to feniority, prethren walking three and three.

Lodge of Grand Stewards.

Nobility and Gentry, three and three.

Office-bear is of the Grand Lodge, in their badges of office.

Officers of the Grand Lodge, with infignia.

Grand Wardens.

Deputy
G. Maiter.
GRAND MASTER.
Substitute
G. Mafter.

Wardens, which were fuccessively presented to the Grand Master, who, according to ancient form, scattered the corn, and poured the wine and oil, which they contained, on the stone, saying, "May the All-bounteous Author of Nature bless this City with an abundance of corn, wine, and oil; and with all the necessaries, conveniences, and comforts of life! and may the same Almighty Power preserve this City from ruin and decay to the latest posterity!"

The Grand Master, being supported on the right hand by the duke of Buccleugh, and on the left by the earl of Balcarras, addressed himself to the Lord Provost and Magistrates in a suitable speech for the occasion; and the coins of the present reign, and a silver-plate, with the following inscription, were deposited in the stone:

ANNUENTE DEO OPTIMO MAXIMO,
REGNANTE GEORGIO III. PATRE PATRIAE,
HUJUS PONTIS
QUO VICI EXTRA MŒNIA EDINBURGI, URBI COMMODE ADJUNGERENTUR,
ADITUMQUE NON INDIGNUM TANTA
URBS HABERET,
PRIMUM LAPIDEM POSUIT

NOBILIS VIR GEORGIUS DOMINUS HADDO; ANTIQUISSIMI SODALITII, ARCHITECTONICI APUD SCOTOS CURIO MAXIMUS, PLAUDENTE AMPLISSIMA FRATRUM CORONA, IMMENSAQUE POPULI FREQUENTIA.

OPUS,

UTILE CIVIBUS GRATUM ADVENIS, URBI DECORUM PATRIÆ HONESTUM, DIU MULTUMQUE DESIDERATUM, CONSULE JACOBO HUNTER BLAIR, INCEPTI AUCTORE INDEFESSO, SANCIENTE REGE, SENATUQUE BRITANNIAE, APPROBANTIBUS OMNIBUS,
TANDEM INCHOATUM EST
IPSIS KALENDIS AUGUSTI
A. D. MDCCLXXXV.
AERAE ARCHITECTONICAE 5785.
Q. F. F. Q. S.

TRANSLATION.

By the bleffing of Almighty God, in the reign of George the Third, the Father of his country, the right hon. George Lord Mador of George Lord Madons in Scotland, amidst the acclamations of a Grand Assembly of the brethren, and a vast concourse of people, laid the first stone of this bridge, intended to form a convenient communication between the city of Edinburgh and its suburbs, and an access not inworthy of such a city.

"This work, so useful to the inhabitants, so pleasing and convenient to strangers, so ornamental to the city, so crediable to the country, so long and much wanted and wished for, was at last begun, with the sanction of the king and parliament of Great Fritain, and with universal approbation, in the provostship of James Hunter Blair, the author and indefatigable promoter of the undertaking, August the 18, in the year of our Lord 1785, and of the zera of Masonry 5725.—Which may God prosper."

An anthem was then fung, and the procession being reversed, returned to the Parliament-house. After which the Lord Provost and Magistrates gave an elegant entertainment at Dunn's rooms to the Grand Lodge, and the nobility and gentry who had affisted at the ceremony.

The next public ceremony in which the Society bore a principal share, was in laying the foundation-stone of that valuable seminary of learning, the new College of Edinburgh. This University has for many years been esteemed one of the most celebrated in Europe, and has attracted a great number of students in physic, and other branches of science, from all parts of the wor'd. The eminence of its professors in every branch of learning is universally admitted; and it is most fervently to be wished, for the honour of the kingdom, that the whole plan may be completely executed agreeably to the intention of the original promoters. As this is an event worthy of record in the annals of Matonry, I shall describe minutely the ceremony observed on the occasion.

On the 13th of October 1789, Mr. Robert Adam, architect, presented the plans of the intended building, at a public breakfast given by the Lord Provost to the Magistrates and the Principal and Professors of the University of Edinburgh, and explained their uses, for the various schools, halls, and houses. The whole company having expressed the highest satisfaction at the design, it was immediately resolved, that a subscription should be opened to carry the plan into execution; and Monday the 16th of November was fixed for laying the foundation-stone of the new structure.

On the morning of the day appointed for performing the ceremony, the brethren affembled at eleven o'clock in the Parliament-house, to meet lord Napier, who was at the time Grand Master of Scotland. When the lodges were arranged, the Grand Master sent notice to the Lord Provost and Magistrates, who had affembled in the Council-chamber; and to the Principal, Professors, and Students of the University, who had met in the High Church. At half past twelve, the procession began to move in the following order:

rst. The Principal, Professors, and Students of the University, with their mace carried before them. Principal Robertson being supported on the right hand by the Rev. Dr. Hunter, professor of divinity, and on the lest by the Rev. Dr. Hardy, professor of church history. The Professors were all robed, and each of the Students had a spring of laurel in his hat.

2d. The Lord Provoft, Magistrates, and Council, in their robes, preceded by the sword, mace, &c. The Lord Provost being supported on the right and left by the two eldest Baillies.

3d. A complete choir of Singers, under the direction of fignor Schetky, finging anthems as the procession moved.

4th. The Lodges, according to feniority, juniors preceding, with their different infignia.

5th. A complete band of instrumental music.

6th. The Grand Stewards, properly clothed, with white rods.

7th. The Noblemen and Gentlemen attending the Grand Master. 8th. A large drawing of the East Front of the New College, car-sied by two operative Masons.

oth. The grand jewels, borne by the Past Masters of Lodges.

noth. Officers of the Grand Lodge, properly clothed.

Eath. Lord Nables, present Grand Master, supported on the right hand by Sir William Forbes Bart. Past Grand Master, and on the left, by the duke of Buccleugh.

A detachment of the 35th regiment from the caffle, together with the city guard, lined the fireets.

At one o'clock, the Grand Master reached the site of the College, when the foundation-stone was laid with the usual ceremonies*. After which the Grand Master addressed himself to the Lord Provost and Massistrates as follows:

My Lord Provost, and Magistrates, of the City

In compliance with your request, I have now had the honour, in the capacity of Grand Master Mason of Scotland, to lend my aid towards laying that stone, on which it is your intention to erect a new College. I must ever consider it as one of the fortunate events in my life, that the Crast of Free and Accepted Masons should be called forth, to affist at an undertaking so laudable, and so glorious, during the time that, from their affection, I have the honour of sitting in the chair of the Grand Lodge.

* The particulars of this part of the ceremony were exactly armalar to that observed at laying the foundation stone of the South Bridge, see p. 295.

The attention to the improvement of this city, manifested by the Magistrates, your predecessors in office, has, for many years, excited the admiration of their fellow-citizens. The particular exertions of your Lordship and your Colleagues have merited, and it gives me infinite satisfaction to say, have obtained, the universal approbation of all ranks of men.

The business of this day, equally to be remembered in the annals of this city and of Matonry, will transmit your names with lustre to posterity. Thousands yet unborn, learning to admire your virturs, will thereby be stimulated to follow the great example you have set them, of steady patriotism, love of your country, and anxious defire to advance the welfare, and increase the same, of the city of Edinburgh.

In the name of the Craft of Free and Accepted Masons, and in my own, I fincerely implore the protection of the Supreme Architect of the Universe on your lordship and your brethren in the magistracy! May you long continue here the emaments of civil society; and may you hereafter be received into those mansions, those lodges, prepared in heaven for the blessed!

To this address the Lord Provost, in name of the Magistrates and Town Council of the City of Edinburgh, made a suitable reply.

The Grand Master then addressed the Principal, as representing the University of Edinburgh, in the following words:

Reverend Sir,

Permit me to congratulate you as Principal, and your brethren as Professors, of the University of Edinburgh, on the work in which we have this day been engaged.—A work, worthy of your Patrons, who (ever considering the public good) will not permit the seat of learning, established in this ancient metropolis, to bear the appearance of decay, at a time when so much attention is bestowed on the elegance and convenience both of public and private ediffices.

Permit me, likewife, to congratulate my country, on the probability of feeing the different chairs of the magnificent structure, now to be erected, filled by men so distinguished for their piety, so eminent for their learning, and so celebrated for their abilities, as those to whom I now have the honour to address myself.

Any panegyric that I can pronounce, must fall so far short of what is due to you, Sir, and your honourable and learned brethren, that it would be presumption in me to attempt to express my sense of your deferts. Suffice it to say, that the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and the lodges depending on it, are most happy, in hiving this opportunity of affishing at, and witnessing, the laying the soundation, whence it is their earnest wish a building may arise, which, in sure tages, may be as renowned for the excellence of its teachers, and as much respected for the propriety of conduct in its students; as the University now is, over which you have the peculiar satisfaction of presiding.

May the Almighty Architect, the Sovereign Disposer of all events, grant, that the Principal and Professions of this College may continue to deliver their instructions, and the students receive their admonitions, in such a manner as may redound to the viery of God, the promoting of science, and the extension of all useful Larning.

To which the rev. Principal made the following reply:—

My LORD,

From very humble beginnings, the University of Edinburgh has attained to such eminence, as entitles it to be ranked among the most celebrated seminaries of learning. In sebted to the bounty of several of our Sovereigns—diffings shed particularly by the gracicus i rince now seated on the British throne, whom, with gratitude, we reckon among the most muniscent of our royal benefactors—and cherished by the continued attention and good offices of our honourable Patrons, this University can now boost of the number and variety of its institutions for the instruction of youth in all the branches of literature and science.

With what integrity and differenment persons have been chosen to preside in each of these departments, the character of my learned colleagues affords the most satisfying evidence. From confidence in their abilities, and affiduity in discharging the duties of their respective offices, the University of Edinburgh has become a seat of education, not only to youth in every part of the British dominions, but, to the honour of our country, students have been attracted to it from almost every nation in Europe, and every state in America.

Digitized by Google

One thing still was wanting. The apartments appropriated for the accommolation of Frosesfors and Students were so extremely unsuitable to the flourishing state of the University, that it has long been the general with to have buildings more decent and convenient erected. What your lordship has now done, gives a near prospect of having this wish accomplished; and we consider it as a most auspicious circumstance, that the soundation-stone of this new mantion of science is laid by your lordship, who, among your ancestors, reckon a man, whose original and universal genius places him high among the illustrous persons who have contributed most eminently to enlarge the boundaries of human knowledge.

Permit me to add, what I regard as my own peculiar felicity, that by having remained in my prefent station much longer than any of my predect stors, I have lived to witness an event so beneficial to this University, the prosperity of which is near to my heart, and has ever been the object of my warmest withes.

May Almighty God, without invocation of whom no action of importance should be begun, bless this undertaking, and enable us to carry it on with success! May be continue to protect our University, the object of whose institution is to infili into the minds of youth, principles of sound knowledge; to inspire them with the love of religion and virtue; and to prepare them for filling the various situations in society, with honour to themselves, and with benefit to their country!

All this we ask, in the name of Christ; and unto the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, w. astribe the kingdom, power, and gory! Amen."

After the Principal had finished his speech, the brethren concluded the ceremony with the honours.

Two crystal bottles, cast on purpose at the glass-house of Leith, were deposited in the foundation-stone. In one of these were put different coins of the present reign, each of which was previously enveloped in crystal, in such an ingenious manner that the legend on the coins could be distinctly read without breaking the crystal. In the other bottle were deposited seven rolls of vellum, containing a fhort account of the original foundation and present state of the University, together with several other papers; in particular, the different newfpapers, containing advertisements relative to the college, &c. and a lift of the names of the prefent Principal and Professors, also of the present Lord Provoft and Magistrates, and Officers of the Grand Lodge of Scotland. The bottles being carefully fealed up, were covered with a plate of copper wrapt in block-tin; and, upon the under-fide of the copper, were engraven the arms of the city of Edinburgh, and of the University; likewife the arms of the right hon. lord Napier, Grand Master Mason of Scotland. Upon the upper side, a Latin inscription, of which the following is a copy:

ANNUENTE DEO OPT. MAX.
REGNANTE GEORGIO III. PRINCIPE MUNIFICENTISSIMO.

ACADEMIÆ EDINBURGENSIS ÆDIBUS,

INITIO QUIDEM HUMILLIMIS,

ET JAM, POST DUO SECULA, PENE RUINOS

NOVI HUJUS ÆDIFICII,

FIRI COMMODITATI SIMUL ET EL EGANTLÆ

UBI COMMODITATI SIMUL ET ELEGANTLE, TANTO DOCTRINARUM DOMICILIO DIGNÆ, CONSULERETUR,

PRIMUM LAPIDEM POSUIT,

PLAUDENTE INGENTI OMNIUM ORDINUM FRE-

QUENTIA,

VIR NOBILISSIMUS FRANCISCUS DOMINUS NAPIER, REIPUB. ARCHITECTONICÆ APUD SCOTOS CURIO

MAXIMUS.

XVI KAL. DECEMB.

ANNO SALUTIS HUMANÆ MDCCLXXXIX. ÆRÆ ARCHITECTONICÆ IDDIDCCLXXXIX. CONSULE THOMA ELDER; ACADEMIÆ PRÆFECTO GULIELMO ROBERTSON,
ARCHITECTO ROBERTO ADAM.

Q. F. F. Q. S.

TRANSLATION.

By the bleffing of Almighty God,
In the reign of the most munificent Prince Grorge III.
The buildings of the University of Edinburgh,
Being originally very mean,
And now, after two centuries, almost a ruin,
The Pinks Her. For a control of the North Prince III.

The Right Hon. Francis Lord Napier,
Grand Master of the Fraterity of Free Masons in Scotland,
Amidst the acclamations

Of a prodigious concourse of people,

Laid the soundation-stone

Of this new sabric.

In which an union of elegance with convenience,
Suitable to the dignity of fuch a celebrated feat of learning,
Has been fludged,

On the 16th day of November, In the y ar of our Lord 1789, And of the æra of Masonry 5789.

THOMAS ELDER being the Lord Provost of the City;
WILLIAM ROBERTSON, the Frincipal of the University;
And ROBERT ADAM, the Architect.

May the undertaking prosper, and be crowned with success.

An anthem having been fung, the brethren returned, the whole procession being reversed; and when the junior lodge arrived at the door of the Parliament-house, it fell back to the right and left within the line of soldiers; when the Principal, Professors, and Students; the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Town Council; and the Grand Lodge, passed through, with their hats off.

The procession on this occasion was one of the most brilliant and numerous that ever was exhibited in the city of Edinburgh. The Provost and Magistrates had very properly invited many of the Nobility and Gentry from all parts of the country, to witness the solemnity of laying the foundationstone of a College, the architecture of which, it is agreed by all who have feen the plan, will do honour to the city, to the nation, and to Europe. But the number of persons invited was far exceeded by the immense multitude of all ranks, who, defirous of viewing so magnificent a spectacle, filled the streets, windows, and even roofs of the houses. all the way from the Parliament-close, down the High-street and Bridge-street, near the fouth end' of which the foundation-stone was laid. Above 20,000 were supposed to be witnesses of this ceremony; and, notwithstanding this immense crowd, the greatest order and decency were observed; nor did the fmallest accident happen.

On the 7th of January 1795, the brethren in Scotland had another opportunity of exemplifying their skill in the practical rules of the Art, at opening the new bridge for carriages at Montrose. This undertaking had been long deemed impracticable, on account of the extent being near half a mile across a rapid influx and reflux of the sea; but was at last happily accomplished under the superintendence of the fraternity, and the great post road from the south to the north of Scotland is now united. A public procession was formed on this occasion, and the Grand Master, amidst an immense concourse of people, having critically examined the work, declared it well built and ably executed.

Having described the principal works in which the brethren in Scotland were employed, we shall now resume the history of Masonry in England, and trace the occurrences that have taken place there, under the auspices of the duke of Cumberland, and his successor the prince of Wales.

On Thursday the 9th of March 1786, his royal highness Prince William Henry, now duke of Clarence, was initiated into Masonry at the Lodge No 86, held at the Prince George inn at Plymouth.

On the 4th of January 1787, was opened in London, the Grand Chapter of Harodim. Though this order is of ancient date, and had been patronifed in different parts of Europe, there appears not on record previous to this period the regular establishment of such an association in England. For some years it was faintly encouraged, but since its merit has been further investigated, it has received the patronage of several exalted masonic characters.

The mysteries of this order are peculiar to the institution itself, while the lectures of the Chapter include every branch of the masonic system, and represent the art of Masonry in a finished and complete form.

Different classes are established, and particular lectures restricted to each class. The lectures are divided into sections, and the sections into clauses. The sections are annually assigned by the Chief Harod, to a certain number of skilful companions in each class, who are denominated Sectionists; and they are empowered to distribute the clauses of their respective sections, with the approbation of the Chief Harod and General Director, among the private companious of the Chapter, who are denominated CLAUSEHOLDERS. Such companions as by affiduity become possessed of all the sections in the lecture, are called LECTURERS; and out of these the General Director is always chosen.

Every Clauseholder, on his appointment, is prefented with a ticket, figned by the Chief Harod, specifying the clause allotted to him. This ticket entitles him to enjoy the rank and privileges of a Clauseholder in the Chapter; and no Clauseholder can transfer his ticket to another Companion, unless the confent of the Council has been obtained for that purpose, and the General Director has approved the Companion to whom it is to be transferred, as qualified to hold it. In case of the death, fickness, or non-residence in London, of any Lecturer, Sectionist, or Clauseholder, another Companion is appointed to fill up the vacancy for the time being, that the lectures may be always complete; and during the fession, a public lecture is usually delivered at stated times.

The Grand Chapter is governed by a Grand Patron, two Vice-Patrons, a Chief Ruler, and two Assistants, with a Council of twelve respectable Companions, who are chosen annually at the Chapter nearest to the session of St. John the Evangelist.

On Thursday, the 6th of February 1787, his royal highness the Prince of Wales was made a Mason, at an occasional lodge, convened for the purpose, at the Star and Garter tavern, Pall-mall, over which the Duke of Cumberland presided in person. And on Friday the 21st of November following, his royal highness the Duke of York was initiated into Masonry at a special lodge convened for the purpose, at the same place, over which the Grand Master also presided in person. His highness was introduced by his royal brother the Prince of Wales, who assisted at the ceremony of his initiation.

On the 25th of March 1788, another event worthy of notice in the annals of Masonry took place -the institution of the Royal Cumberland Freemasons-school, for maintaining, clothing, and educating the female children and orphans of indigent brethren. To the benevolent exertions of chevalier Bartholomew Ruspini, the fraternity are first indebted for this establishment. Under the patronage of her royal highness the duchess of Cumberland, the school was originally formed; and to her follering hand is owing its present flourishing state, by her recommending it to the Royal Family; as well as to many of the nobility and gentry of both fexes. On the 1st January 1780, fifteen children were taken into a house provided for them at Somers Town, St. Pancras; but fince that time, by the liberal encouragement which the Charity has received from the fraternity in India as well as in England, the Governors have been enabled to augment the number of children at different periods to fixty five.

The object of this Charity is to train up children in the knowledge of virtue and religion; in an early detestation of vice, and its unhappy consequences; in industry, as necessary to their condition; and to impress strongly on their minds, a due sense of subordination, true humility, and obedience to their superiors.

In 1793, the Governors, anxious still farther to extend the benefits of this Institution, hired on lease a piece of ground in St. George's Fields belonging to the city of London, on which they have erected a commodious and spacious school-house at the expence of upwards of 2,500l., in which the children are now placed. This building is sufficiently extensive to accommodate an hundred children; and from the exertions of the fraternity at home and abroad, there is every reason to hope that the Governors will soon have it in their power to provide for that number*.

* The following are fome of the general regulations for the management of this School:

Every child who is admitted into the School must be the daughter of a Mason who has been initiated into the Society three years, and registered in the books of the Grand Lodge; and such child, at the time of application, must be between the age of five as d ten years; not weak, sickly, or afflicted with any disorder or infirmity; must have had the small-pox, and be free from any corposeal or mental defect. There is no restriction as to her parochial settlement, whether it be in town or country.

Children continue in the School till they attain the age of fifteen years, during which time they are carefully instructed in every domestic employment; and when they quit the School, are placed out as apprentices, either to trades, or as domestic fervants, as may refound most suitable to their respective capacities.

A Quarterly General Court of the Governors is held on the fecond Thursday in January, April, July, and October, to receive the reports of the General Committe, order all payments, admit and discharge children, and transact all general business relative to the Charity.

A General Committee, confifting of perpetual and life Governors, and thirty annual Governors, neet on the last Thursday in every month, to receive the reports of the Sub-committees, and give such directions as they shall judge proper subject to the confirmation or rejection of the succeeding Quarterly Court.

A House Committee, confishing of tweive members of the General

This Charity is under the immediate fuperintendance of her royal highness the duchess of Cumberland, the patroness; their royal highnesses the prince of Wales, the duke of York, the duke of Gloucester, and Prince Frederick of Orange, the Patrons; Chevalier Bartholomew Ruspini, the Institutor; the right hon. earl of Moira, sir William Addington knt., James Heseltine, James Galloway esqrs. the Trustees; and sir Peter Parker bart. and William Forsteen esq. the Treasurers*.

Committee, meet on the Thursday preceding each meeting of that Committee, (or oftener, if any matter require their attendance,) to whom the internal management is specially delegated; for which purpose they visit the School in weekly rotation, examine the provisions and stores sent in for the use of the Charity, and see that the several regulations are street, each committee, and report their proceedings to the General Committee.

d

A.

A Committee of Auditors, confifting of twelve members of the General Committee, meet previous to every Quarterly Court, to examine the vouchers and accounts of the Treasurer and Collector, see that the same are properly entered by the Secretary, and prevent any payments being made, which have not been previously examined and approved by the House and General Committees.

- Abfract of the general Principles upon which this Charity is conducted, and the Qualification as d Privileges of a Governor.
- 1' Every person subservible, one guinea annually, is deemed a Governor, or Governess, during the time such subservible is continued.
- 2. Every fur feriber of ten guineas, or upwards, as deemed a Governor or Governess for life; and fur h Governor is a Member of the General Committee.
- 3. The Matter for the time being of any lodge fubfcribing one guinea annually, is dremed a Governor during that time.
- 4 The Matter for the time being of any lodge functioning tenguineas, is a member of the Committee for fifteen years; and on such lodge paying the further fum of tenguineas within the space of ten years, such Master for the time being is a Governor, and member of the Committee, so long as such lodge exists.

To the benevolent and indefatigable exertions of William Forsteen, Anthony Ten Broeke, Adam Gordon, esqrs., and a few other respectable brethren, the Society are principally indebted for the complete establishment of this truly laudable Institution; and such have been the care and pains bestowed on the education of the children, that the sums arising from their work, for several years past, have exceeded 2001. annually.

On the 10th of February 1790, the Grand Lodge voted an annual subscription of 251 to this Charity, and particularly recommended it to the lodges as deserving encouragement; in consequence of which considerable sums have been raised for its

1.

<sup>5.</sup> The Master for the time being of any lodge subscribing twenty guineas, is a perpetual Governor, so long as such ledge exists.

<sup>6.</sup> Any subscriber who has already made a benefaction of ten guineas, or the Master of any lodge who has contributed twenty guineas, and chooses to repeat such donation, is snittled to the privilege of a fecond vote on all questions relative to the Charity.

<sup>7.</sup> The executor of any person paying a legacy of one hundred pounds for the use of the Charity, is deemed a Governor for life; and in case a legacy of two hundred pounds, or upwards, be paid for the use of the Charity, then all the executors proving the will are deemed Governors for life.

<sup>8.</sup> Every Governor has a right to vote at all Quarterly and Special Courts; and every Nobleman, Member of Parliament, Lady, Mafter of a country lodge, and Governor not refiding within the bills of mortality, have a right to vote by proxy, at all ballots and elections; but no perfon, being an annual Governor, can be permitted to vote at any election until the subscription for the current year (and arrears, if any) are paid to the Treasurer.

<sup>9.</sup> Any Governor supplying this Institution with any article, wherefrom any emolument may arise, shall not vote on any question relative thereto; nor can such Governor be a member of any Committee whatever during the time he serves the Charity.

furport; and among the very liberal fubscriptions from the lodges, the Shakespeare Lodge at Covent-Garden under William Forsteen Esq. is particularly distinguished, having as a lodge, and from individuals belonging to it, paid above a thousand pounds to the fund. From these donations and the increase of annual contributions, an Institution, which restects great honour on the fraternity, promises fair to have a permanent establishment.

The duke of Cumberland continued in the office of Grand Master till his death in September 1790; when it may be truly said, that such a valuable acquisition was made to the Society during his highness's administration, as is almost unparalleled in the annals of Masonry.

On the 10th of February 1790, regular notice was given in Grand Lodge, that his royal highness prince Edward, now duke of Kent, while on his travels, had been regularly initiated into Masonry in the Union Lodge at Geneva; and we are since credibly informed that his royal highness prince Augustus Frederick, now duke of Sussex, has been likewise initiated into the Order at a Lodge in Berlin.

The Grand Lodge, highly fensible of the great honour conferred on the Society by the initiation of so many royal personages, unanimously resolved, that each of them should be presented with an apron, lined with blue silk, the clothing of a Grand Officer; and that they should be placed, in all public meetings of the Society, on the right hand of the Grand Master, and rank in all processions as Past Grand Masters.

 $\underline{\text{Digitized by }Google}$

On the 2d of May 1790, the grand feast was honoured with the presence of the duke of Cumberland, the Grand Master, in the chair; attended by his royal nephews, the prince of Wales, and the dukes of York and Clarence, with above five hundred other brethren. At this Grand Assembly was confirmed the re-instatement of the members of the Lodge of Antiquity in all their masonic privileges, after an unfortunate separation of ten years; and among those who were re-instated, the Author of this treatise had the honour to be included.

On the 24th of November 1790, his royal highness the prince of Wales was elected to the high and important office of Grand Master, and he was pleased to appoint lord Rawdon (now earl of Moira) Acting Grand Master, who had previously filled that office under his late royal uncle, on the resignation of the earl of Essingham, who went abroad on his accepting the governorship of Jamaica.

On the 9th of February 1791, the Grand Lodge resolved, on the motion of lord Petre, that, in testimony of the high sense the fraternity entertained of the honour done to the Society by his royal highness the prince of Wales's acceptance of the office of Grand Master, three elegant chairs and candlesticks should be provided for the use of the Grand Lodge; and at the grand feast in May following, these were accordingly finished, and presented to public view; but unfortunately the Grand Master's indisposition at that time prevented him from honouring the Society with his presence. Lord Rawdon, however; officiated as proxy for his royal highness, who was re-elected with the most joyful acclamations.

SECT. XII.

History of Masonry from the Installation of the Prince of Wales as Grand Master, to the Grand Feast in 1795 inclusive.

Ar the Grand Feast held at Freemasons'-Hall on the 2d of May 1792, his royal highness the Prince of Wales was installed Grand Master, to the inexpressible joy of the fraternity, in the presence of his royal brother the duke of York, the right hon. lord Rawdon, now earl of Moira, and above 500 other respectable brethren. The repeated applauses bestowed by the company upon the royal brothers, were highly grateful to their feelings, while the affability and heart-felt satisfaction of the Grand Master at the head of his brethren were particularly noticed. His highness performed the duties of his office in a style superior to most of his predecessors. His observations were clear, acute, and distinct; his expression was fluent, manly, and pertinent; and his eulogium on his deceased uncle, the last Grand Master, pathetic, graceful, and elegant. The compliment he conferred on the earl of Moira as Acting Grand Master, was truly masonic; and to all his Officers, on their appointments, he paid the proper tribute to their respective merits. short, during the whole ceremony, his demeanour was courteous, pleasing, and dignified.

An æra so important in the annals of Masonry must be recorded with peculiar satisfaction. Under the auspices of so illustrious a patron as the heir apparent to the crown of Great Britain, the Society must necessarily extend its influence, and the fraternity derive great encouragement in their zealous endeavours to promote the principles of the institution. Testimonies of loyalty and attachment to the family on the throne, and to the happy constitution of the country, were transmitted to his highness from the brethren in every quarter. The lodges in town and country vied with each other in expressions of duty and affection to the Grand Master, and in various addresses to his highness testified submission and obedience to the laws, and an ardent wish to support that well-regulated form of government, from which they and their ancestors had derived the invaluable bleffings of liberty, fo truly effential to the happiness of his majesty's subjects in general, and to the propagation of those principles which distinguish the Craft of Masons in particular—univerfal charity, brotherly love, and peace.

On the 21st of June, the brethren in the county of Lincoln transmitted their grateful acknowledgments to his highness in a column of heart of oak, which was presented by the rev. William Peters, their Provincial Grand Master. Stimulated by the same motive, several other lodges copied the example; and on the 7th of January 1793, the Freemasons of Cornwall unanimously voted an address to his highness, which was presented by fir John St. Aubyn, their Provincial Grand Master, and most graciously received. In short, one spirit feemed to animate the whole fraternity, who joyfully hailed the rising splendor and prosperity of the Craft.

The French revolution, which, in extent and importance of effect, is unquestionably the most momentous event that has happened fince the religious revolutions in Europe at the beginning of the fixteenth century, having unfortunately given rife at this time to many unhappy diffensions, which spread their contagion among some of the inhabitants of this island, it became necessary to counteract the measures of those mistaken individuals who were endeavouring to fow the feeds of anarchy, and poison the minds of the people against his majesty's government, and the excellent constitution under which they enjoyed the invaluable bleffings of liberty and property. This induced most of the corporate bodies in the kingdom, and all the true friends to the constitution, to stem the torrent of opposition, and promote in their different departments a just sense of the advantages enjoyed under the present government. Hence addresses to the throne were daily presented, with affurances of a determination to support the measures of administration; and among the rest, it was deemed proper that the Society of Masons, by adding their mite to the number, should shew that attachment to the King and Constitution which the laws of the Order enjoined. Accordingly, on the 8th of February 1793, the Grand Lodge unanimously refolved, that the following Address should be prefented to his Majesty by his Royal Highness;

who, in compliance with the request of his brethren, condescended to present it in person to his Royal Parent, by whom it was most graciously received:

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty,

The bumble Address of the Grand Lodge of the Ancient Fraternity of Free and Accepted Masons under the Constitution of England.

MOST GRACIOUS SOVEREIGN.

AT a time when nearly the whole mais of the people anxioufly prefs forward, and offer with one heart and one voice the most animated testimonies of their attachment to your Majesty's Person and Government, and of their unablited zeal, at this period of innovation and anarchy in other countries, for the unequalled Constitution of their own, permit a body of men, Sire, which, though not known to the laws, has been ever obedient to them—men who do not, yield to any description of your Majesty's subjects in the love of their Country, in true allegiance to their Sovereign, or in any other of the duties of a good Citizen—to approach you with this public declaration of their political principles. The times, they think, demand it of them; and they wish not to be among the last, in su h times, to throw their weight, whatever that may be, into the scale of Order, Subordination, and good Government.

It is written, Sire, in the Inftitute of our Order, that we shall not, at our meetings, go into religious or political discussion; because, composed (as our fraternity is) of men of various nations, professing different rules of faith, and attached to opposite systems of government, such discussions, sharpening the mind of man against his brother, might offend and disunite. A criss, however, so unlooked for as the present, justifies to our judgment a relaxation of that rule; and our first duty as Britons superfeding all other confiderations, we add, without farther pause, our voice to that of our fellow-subjects, in declaring one common and servent attachment to a government by King, Lords, and Commons, as established by the glorious Revolution of 1638.

The excellence of all human inftitutions is comparative and fleeting: positive persection, or unchanging aptitude to its object, we know, belongs not to the work of man: but, when we view the principles of government which have recently obtained in OTHER NATIONS, and then look upon our own, we exult in possessing, at this time, the wifelf and best poised system the world has ever known:—a system which affords EQUAL protection (the only EQUALITY we look for, or that indeed is practicable) and impartial justice to all.

It may be thought, perhaps, being what we are, a private fociety of men—connected by invisible tils—professing secrecy,—mysterious in our meetings,—stamped by no Act of Prerogative,—and acknowledged by no law: we assume a port and hold a language upon this occasion, to which we can urge no legal or admitted right. We are the free citizens, Sire, of a free state, and number many thousands of our body.—The Heir Apparent of the empire is our Chief.—We fraternize for the purposes of social intercourse, of mutual assistance, of charity to the distressed, and good-will to all: and sidelity to a trust, reverence to the magistrate, and obedience to the laws, are sculptured in capitals upon the pediment of our Institution. And let us add, that, pervading as we do, every class of the community, and every walk of life, and disseminating our principles wherever we strike root, this address may be considered as speaking, in epitome, the sentiments of a people.

Having thus attested our principles, we have only to implore the Supreme Architect of the Universe, whose almighty hand hath laid in the deep the firm foundation of this country's greatness, and whose protesting spield hath covered her amidst the crush of nations, that he will continue to shelter and sustain her. May her sons be contented, and her daughters happy I and may your Majesty—the immediate instrument of her present prosperity and power, to whom unbiasted posterity shall thus inscribe the column:

To Grouge, the Friend of the People,
and Patron of the Arts, which brighten and embellish life,
With your amiable Queen, and your royal Progeny,
Long, long continue to be the bleffing and the boast of a grateful, happy, and united people!

Given, unanimoufly, in Grand Lodge, at Freemafons'-Hall, this 6th of February, 1793. (Signed)
(Counterfigned) RAWDON, A. G. M.
WILLIAM WHITE, G. S. PETER PARKER, D. G. M.

For the Grand Master's attention to the interests of the Society, in presenting the above loyal and affectionate Address, the Grand Lodge unanimously voted the following Address to his Highness:

To bis Royal Highness the PRINCE of WALES, Grand Master of the must sincent and Honourable Society of Free and siccepted Masons.

MOST WORSHIPFUL AND ROYAL SIR,

ACCUSTOMED, as we have been, from the hour in which your mame first adorned tie roll of our Order, to the manly vigor of your mind, and the winning benignity of your manners, we did not look for any event which could raife you in our estimation, or draw you nearer to our affections. With you at our head, we have feen our reputation advanced in the opinion of our fellow-subjects, our system . expand itself, and added honour and increasing prosperity lie in unclouded prospect before us. These things we ascribe to you, Sir, as to their proper fource; and yet the filent homage of the heart has been lutherto the only return we have made you. Such, however, has been the generous alacrity with which your Royal Highness has. offered to prefent to his Majeffy the accompanying tribate of our fervent lovalty to him, and of our unthaken attachment to that Conftitistion, which (happily for these nations) at once confirms his nosfession and your inheritance, and all the rights of all the people; and fuch the sense we entertain of the proud diffinction you have thus conferred upon our Body, that it were inconfistent with our honour, we think, as well as irksome to our feelings, to continue longer filent.

Accept then, Royal Sir, our warmest and most dutiful acknowledgments for your gracious condescension upon this (to us) most momentous occasion. May he, by whom kings govern and empires prosper, shower upon your Royal Parents, yourself, and the whole of your illustrious line, his choicest bleffings! May you all long exist in the hearts of a brave and generous people; and Britain triumphant, her enemies be abased! May her acknowledged superiority, returning peace, and the grateful reverence of rescued nations, perpetuate the same of her virtues, the influence of her example, and the weight and authority of her dominion!

By the unanimous order of the Grand Lodge,
(Counterfigned) (Signed) RAWDON, A. G. M.
WILLIAM WRITE, G. S. PETER PARKER, D. G. M.

While these proofs of the prosperity of the Society in England were universally spread throughout the kingdom, accounts were daily transmitted of the rapid progress of the Institution in different parts of the world. Many dignified and respectable characters had enrolled their names among the fraternity; and it is with some degree of satisfaction, that among them we have to record the name of the present king of Sweden, who was initiated into the Order at the Grand Lodge of Stockholm on the 22d of March 1793, under the auspices of Charles duke of Sudermania, regent of the kingdom, who presided as Grand Master on the occasion.

The brethren in America at this period also seem to have been no less zealous in expressing a dutiful attachment to their patrons and protectors; for the Grand Lodge of the Commonwealth of Massachufetts in North America having nearly arranged their Constitutions, transmitted a copy of them to General Washington with the following Address:

Address of the Grand Lodge of Free and Accepted Massins of the Commonwealth of Massinchusetts in North America, to their Brother George Washington.

WHILST the historian is describing the career of your glory, and the inhabitants of an extensive empire are made happy in your unexampled exertions; whilst some celebrate the Hero, so distinguished in liberating United America, and others the Patriot who presides over her councils; a band of brothers, having always joined the acclamations of their countrymen, now testify their respect for those milder virtues which have ever graced the man.

Taught by the precepts of our Society, that all its members fland upon a LEVEL, we venture to affume this station, and to approach you with that freedom which diminishes our diffidence, without lessening our respect. Desirous to enlarge the boundaries of social happiness, and to vindicate the ceremonies of their Institution, this Grand Lodge has published "A Book of Constitutions," (and a copy for your acceptance accompanies this,) which, by discovering the principles that actuate, will speak the eulogy of the Society, though they fervently wish the conduct of its members may prove its higher commendation.

Convinced of its attachment to its cause, and readiness to encourage its benevolent designs, they have taken the Liberty to dedicate this work to one, the qualities of whose heart, and the actions of whose life, have contributed to improve personal virtue, and extend throughout the world the most endearing cordialities; and they humbly hope he will pardon this freedom, and accept the tribute of their efterm and homage.

May the Supreme Architect of the Universe protect and bless you, give you length of days and increase of selicity in this world, and then receive you to the harmonious and exalted Society in Heaven!

Boston, Dec. 27, A. L. 1792. JOHN CUTLER, G. M.
JOSEAH BARTLET, S. G. W.
MUNGO MACKAY, J. G. W.

To this Address General Washington returned the following Answer:

Answer to the GRAND LOBGE of Free and Accepted Masons of Massimuletts.

FLATTERING as it may be to the human mind, and truly honourable as it is, to receive from our fellow-citizens testimonies of approbation for exertions to promote the public welfare; it is not less pleasing to know, that the milder virtues of the heart are highly respected by a Society whose liberal principles are sounded in the immutable laws of true b and justice

To enlarge the sphere of social happiness is worthy the benevolent design of a Masonic Institution; and it is most servently to be wished, that the conduct of every member of the fraternity, as well as those publications that discover the principles which actuate them, may tend to convince mankind, that the grand object of Masonry is to promote the happiness of the human race.

While I beg your acceptance of my thanks for the "Book of Conflitutions," which you have fent me, and for the honour you have done me in the Dedication, permit me to affure you, that I feel all those emotions of gratitude which your affectionate Address and cordial wishes are calculated to inspire; and I sincerely pray, that the Great Architect of the Universe may bless you here, and receive you bereaster into his immortal temple!

Geo. Washington.

From this time we perceive that the Society of Freemasons in America continued to slourish under the auspices of General Washington, who continued his patronage to the lodges till his death. This great man, who displayed in his own person the rare combination of military and pacific talents, of general and statesman, and evinced in private life the most endearing manners and unblemished probity, died at his feat at Mount Vernon in Baltimore, of an inflammation in his throat, on the 14th of December 1799. On the 18th, his remains. were configned to the tomb with the most folemn funeral pomp. The procession from Mount Vernon was formed about three o'clock in the afternoon, and moved to the place of his interment in the following order:

Minute guns from a veffel in the river announced the commencement of the ceremony.

Cavalry, Infantry, and Guards, marched with arms reversed.

Music—Cl. rev.

The General's Horse, with his saddle, holsters, and pistols.

The Corpse, supported by Colonels Little, Marstelle, Gilpin, Payne, Ramsay, and Simms, as pall-bearers.

At the head of the coffin was inscribed, Surge ad judicium;
About the middle, Gloria Deo;

And on the filver plate, "General George Washington departed this life on the 14th December 1799. Ætatis 68."

The Mourners, Masonic Brethren, and Citizens, closed the procession.

Having arrived at the bottom of the elevated lawn on the banks of the Potomak, where the family vault is placed, the cavalry halted, and the infantry marched towards the Mount and formed their lines. The clergy, masonic brethren, and citizens then descended into the vault, when the funeral service was performed. After which three general discharges were given by the infantry, while the cavalry, and eleven pieces of artillery, which lined the banks of the Potomak at the back of the vault, paid the last tribute of respect to their venerable departed hero, and the firing was repeated from the vessel in the river.

At a meeting of the house of representatives at Philadelphia on the day following this ceremony, it was voted that a committee should be appointed. in conjunction with one from the fenate, to confider on the most suitable means of paying honour to the memory of this great man, who ranked first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen; it was also resolved, that the house should wait on the President of the United States. to express their condolence on the mournful event: that the speaker's chair should be covered with black, and that all the members and officers of the house should appear in deep mourning during the Thus was demonstrated the warmest testimonies of affection of a grateful people, to the memory of their truly benevolent chief, who justly merited the esteem of his country, his brethren, and his friends.

Under the auspices of his royal highness the Prince of Wales, and the indefatigable exertions of the earl of Moira, the progress of the Society in England far exceeded at this time that of any former period. The lodges not only confiderably increased in numbers and consequence, but were in general better regulated, and the principles of the Institution being more clearly understood, the brethren both in town and country vied in promoting the useful purposes of the Society.

On the 24th of September 1793, the lodges in the county of Durham made a grand proceffion through the town of Sunderland, on laying the foundation-stone of the bridge over the river Wear. which was afterwards opened on the 9th of August 1796, in the presence of his royal highness Prince William of Gloucester, the magistrates, a numerous affemblage of Masons, and a vast concourse of spectators. On this occasion a grand triumphal arch, decorated with flowers, was raifed, through which the procession passed, and proceeded along the bridge to the north fide of the river, up to the lime-kilns, and returned by the low road through the dry arch of the bridge to the Pan Ferry, thence to the centre of the bridge, where the lodge was formed, and an oration delivered by the rev. Mr. Nesfield. The whole ceremony was conducted under the patronage of Rowland Burdon esq. M. P. Provincial Grand Master for the county. The Lincoln militia attended, and fired three vollies on the occasion. The brethren then proceeded to church, where an appropriate fermon was preached by the rev. Mr. Brewster. From church the procession was resumed to the Assembly-room, where the evening was concluded with the greatest harmony.

On Monday the 25th November 1793, the Prince of Wales laid the first stone of the New Chapel at Brighthelmstone. His highness was accompanied from the pavilion to the appropriated place by the rev. Mr. Hudson the vicar, Mr. Saunders, &c.

On coming to the ground, Mr. Saunders addressed his royal highness as follows: That, as constructor of the building, the high honour was allotted to him of pointing out to the Prince the situation where the stone was intended to be placed, and he respectfully requested that, as Grand Master of the Masons, he would be pleased to signify if it met his approbation. On receiving assurance that it did, the stone, with the following inscription, was laid in due form:

"This stone was laid by his royal highness GEORGE PRINCE of WALES, November 25, 1793."

On Mr. Saunders covering it with a plate of metal, he defired leave to fay, That however late the period might be before it was again exposed to the face of the day, and he sincerely wished that it might be a very distant one, he hoped that the descendants of his royal highness's august family would be found, as now, happily governing a happy people.

Mr. Hudson then respectfully addressed the Prince, and desired permission to return his most sincere and grateful thanks to his highness for the honour he had that day done, not only to him in particular as proprietor, but to the town at large; and he hoped that God would give his blessing to the undertaking thus begun, and long preserve his royal highness, their majesties, and every branch of the royal family, to superintend our invaluable, unequalled, and long envied Constitution in church and state.

The day proved fine, and the acclamations of the furrounding crowd shewed how much they were gratified with fuch an instance of goodness in the Prince, who, at the same time, was both a refident in, and protector of, their town and liberties.

The Prince ordered a handsome distribution to the workmen, &c. The promenade gardens were laid open, and the company was entertained with refreshments. A party of gentlemen dined at the Castle, and some lines were composed and sung on the occasion.

Among the masonic occurrences of this year, it may be proper to mention the publication of a periodical Miscellany, entitled, The Free-masons' Magazine; or, General and Complete Library: the first number of which appeared in June 1793, and a number was continued to be published monthly till the end of December 1798, when its title was changed. Independent of this Magazine being a general repository for every thing curious and important in Masonry, it contained a choice selection of miscellaneous and literary articles, well calculated for the purpose of general instruction and improvement, and for some time was honoured with the sanction of the Grand Lodge.

On the 4th of June 1793, the Shakespeare Lodge at Stratford on Avon was opened, and dedicated in solemn form, in the presence of a numerous assembly of brethren from different lodges. The ceremony was conducted with the greatest order and regularity, under the direction of Mr. James Timmins, D. P. G. M. for the county of Warwick,

On the 28th of July 1794, the Royal Brunf-wick Lodge at Sheffield was constituted in due form. The brethren made a very elegant proceffion to St. James's church, where an excellent fermon was preached by the rev. brother Chadwick; after which the procession was resumed to the lodge, when the ceremony of dedication took place. Several anthems and psalms suited to the occasion were sung, and the whole was concluded with a liberal subscription to the poor girls' Charity School.

On the 31st of July 1794, the Lodge of Apollo at Alcester was constituted in due form in the prefence of 121 brethren. At ten in the morning, a procession was made to the church, where a fermon was preached before the lodge by the revbrother Green. After which the brethren returned to the Hall, when the ceremonies of consecration and dedication took place, according to ancient usage.

The Prince of Wales's marriage with Princess-Caroline of Brunswick having taken place on the 8th of April 1795, the Grand Lodge on the 15th of that month unanimously voted the following Address to his highness on the occasion:

To his Royal Highress the PRINCE of WALES, Grand Master of the mest Ancient and Honourable tociety of Free and Accepted Masons under the Constitution of England.

Most Worshipful and Royal Grand Master,

UPON an event so important to your own impoiness, and to the interests of the British empire, as the late nuptials of your royal highness, we feel ourselves peculiarly bound to testify our joy, and to offer our humble congratulations.

To affect a degree of gratification superior to that professed by, others, when all his majesty's subjects exhibit such heartfelt satisfaction at the union which you have formed, would, perhaps, be in us an undue pretension; we cannot, however, but be proudly confeious, Sir, that we possess a title beyond what any other class of men can advance, to approach you upon an occation like the prefent with a tender of our particular duty. When your royal highness deigned fo far to honour the Craft as to accept the truft of prefiding over us, the condescention not only authorised but demanded from all and each of us a peculiar fentibility to whatever might concern your welfare; and the ties of brotherhood, with which you invested yourself in becoming one of our number, entitle us to express, without lear of incurring any charge of prefumption, the fatisfaction we feel in contemplating such an accession to the prospects of the nation, and to those of your own selicity. That the interests of your royal highness and those of the British people may ever continue as strictly united as we feel them in this most auspicious occurrence, is the warmest wish, and, at the same time, the confident trust, of those who hold it the highest honour to have your name enrolled in the records of their Institution.

To the obligations which the brethren already owe to you, Sir, it will be a material addition, if you will render acceptable to your royal Confort, the humble homage of our veneration, and of our prayers for every possible blessing upon your union.

By the unanimous order of the Grand Lodge,

(Signed) MOIRA, A. G. M.

(Counter-figned) WILLIAM WHITE, G. S.

(L. S.)

The right hon, the earl of Moira having, at the request of the Giant Lodge, presented the above Address to the Prince of Wales, his royal highness was graciously pleased to return the following Answer:

THE Grand Master has received with great satisfaction the Address of the Craft; which he regards as not indicating folely their fentiments toward him, but as also repeating those declarations of devotion to their Sovereign and attachment to the House of brunfwick, heretofore to becomingly expreshed by them.

He has had peculiar pleature in explaining to the Princefa of Wales their loyal congratulations; and he defires to convey to the brethien the fincere thanks of the Princess for their generous wishes.

A grand feast was held at Freemasons' Hall on the 13th of May 1795, the Grand Master in the chair. His royal highness was accompanied by the duke of Clarence, and prince William of Gloucester, who had been initiated at an occasional lodge convened for the purpose on the preceding evening. Five hundred brethren were also present at this feast. Happiness was visible in every countenance, and the benevolent principles of Masonry cheered the heart. His royal highness thanked the brethren for the many instances he had received of their attachment, and for the repeated honours they had conferred on After expressing his warmest wishes for the prosperity of the Society, he concluded with a handfome compliment to the acting Grand Master, the earl of Moira, whom he stiled "the man of his heart, and the friend he admired;" and fincerely hoped that he might long live to fuperintend the government of the Craft, and extend the principles of the Art.

SECT. XIII.

The History of Masonry from the Grand Feast in 1795, to the end of the year 1800.

NO remarkable event took place in the Society from the festival in 1795 till the year 1797. The greatest harmony prevailed among the brethren during the whole period, and many valuable additions were made to the list of lodges. The general contributions to the charitable funds were likewise considerably extended, and the annual reports from the Provincial Grand Masters in their respective districts announced the prosperity of the Crast.

The only circumstance which tended to damp the ardour of the brethren for the propagation of the art either at home or abroad, was the publication of fome tracts, which stated that a new fect of philosophers had arisen in Germany and France, who had affiliated themselves to the Society of Masons, and had, under that sanction established lodges, for the more extended dissemination of the principles of their new theory. To these philosophers was attributed the design of destroying Christianity, and subverting all the regular governments of Europe. The degrees of Masonry were understood to be preparatory steps to this new establishment, and from that Society were selected the principal members of which this fect was composed. In their occult lodges, as they were termed, were inculcated the feeds of those dangerous principles which had brought about the French revolution, and produced all the evils which had refulted from it.

The circulation of these publications excited a general alarm, and for some time checked the progress of the Society in Europe; till the mystery being unveiled, it was found that the constitutions of Masonry did not warrant the proceedings of this new system, and that therefore new degrees had been instituted under the same appellation, to carry, into effect the purposes of these new associates. The Masons of this country, and all the lodges under the English constitution, were fully exempted from any share in the general censure; but as the Society was much injured by these publications, a few remarks on their contents may not be unaccept-

The first tract which excited alarm, was an octavo volume, intitled, "The Life of M. Zim-" merman, first Physician to the King of England "at Hanover. By Dr. Tissot." From this work it appears, that one of the most distinguished incidents of Zimmerman's life was a fummons which he received from the great Frederick, king of Prussia, to attend him in his last illness in 1786. This opportunity the Doctor improved, to enjoy a confidential intercouffe with that illustrious character. from which he derived the materials of an interesting narrative, that he afterwards published. The partiality of this prince in favour of Zimmerman, disposed him to a reciprocal good opinion of that monarch, and in 1788 he published "A Defence " of Frederick the Great against the Count de "Mirabeau;" which was followed in 1790, by "Fragments on Frederick the Great," in 3 vols. The publications of Zimmerman relative to this king, gave offence to fome individuals, and subjected him to many severe criticisms, which he felt with more fensibility than accorded with his peace of mind. The religious and political opinions which he had imbibed in his latter years, were in wide contradiction to the principles which had so generally spread over Europe, and which operated as perpetual fuel to the irritability of his nervous system. About this time the rise of the Society of the Illuminati in Germany, who were faid to have coalefced with the Freemasons, excited a violent commotion among men of letters and re-The Society was supposed to have in Hection. view nothing less than the abolition of christianity. and the subversion of all constituted authorities. Its partizans expected from it the most beneficial reforms of every kind; and its opponents dreaded from it every mischief that could happen to mankind. Zimmerman, who is represented to have been a hunter of fects, was among the first who took alarm at this formidable affociation, and stept forth to oppose its progress. His regard for religion and focial order, led him to fee in the most obnoxious light the pernicious principles of these new philosophers. Determined therefore to suppress the influence of their system, he painted in the strongest colouring all the maxims of this new fect, and addressed a memorial to the emperor Leopold on the subject, with a view to check their further progress. The emperor very graciously received this memorial, and returned him an answer in his own hand-writing, accompanied with a splendid present *. Leopold seemed to be well-inclined to use the decisive interference of civil authority on this occasion, and would probably have had recourse to violent measures against the Illuminati, had not the death of Zimmerman prevented it.

The number of the affiliated members of this fociety, Zimmerman fays, increased daily, chiefly by the affiduity of Baron de Knigge, who in 1782 first suggested the idea of illuminating the Society of Freemasons, and who succeeded in that object, from Hanover, to Copenhagen on one hand, and to Naples on the other. In 1788, the brotherhood, he observes, was unmasked, and driven out of Bayaria; and in 1781 their papers were seized at Munich and printed, but no discovery of importance was made*.

* This was a locket, adorned with diamonds and the emperor's cypher.

* Of this Society we have the following account in this tract:

"Whether this fect be the same with that of the Free masons, or the Jefuits, both of which suppositions is improbable, is uncer-" tain; but in 1774 or 1775, a Society was undoubtedly established in Bavaria, of which a celebrated Professor at Ingolstadt has been regarded as the founder. This Society, under pretext of confult-" ing the happiness of the people, and supposing that happiness to be "incompatible with every species of religious and civil establish-"ment at present existing, said with one voice, Let us destroy them " all, and raze their very foundations. The secret Order of the 11-« luminati included among its mysterious principles, at present ex-" posed to the whole world, the whole of the doctrine which the "Izobine of Paris have fince put in practice; and it has been proved, by the most irrefragable documents, that they maintained an intimate correspondence together before the French revolution. et destruction of the Christian religion, and the subversion of every "throne and of all governments, have been their aim ever fince the "vear 1776. It was not understood, by the new associates of this 66 Order, that the magic words, the happiness of the people, were the 66 furest means to recruit their number with ease, and by which, in fact, the recruits became fo numerous and well disciplined. Young 66 men were chiefly pitched upon, who, not having yet formed a frong attachment to any particular opinion, were the more eafily 66 led away to embrace whatever was offered to them, and men of ce literary talents, whom it is important to fecure when the propaga-"tion of any new opinion is in agitation. When once a person was enlifted, and fully penetrated with the enticing words, the happinels of the people; let us labour to procure the happiness of the people; he 66 became impatient to know the obstacles which were in the way of "this purpole, and the means to be made use of to remove them, " these were therefore offered to his view in succession.

"The Order has five degrees: in the lower, the mysteries are not unveiled; they are only preparatory, on which the minds of the novitiates are sounded and prepared; then, by degrees, those who are found worthy are initiated into the higher ranks."

Previous to the death of Zimmerman, in conjunction with M. Hoffman of Vienna, he began a periodical work on the old principles. In this work all his former zeal was displayed, and the new philosophers were attacked with vehemence. This occasioned a violent repulse on their part, and the writers of the Bibliotheque Universelle, or Universal Library, as well as some of the best journalifts, bore a confiderable share in the contest, in opposition to Zimmerman and Hoffman; till the former got himself embroiled in a court of law by a publication in the journal, intitled, "The Baron "de Knigge unmasked, as an Illuminati, Demo-" crat, and Seducer of the People." This charge was founded on a work which was not openly avowed by the baron, who commenced a fuit against Zimmerman on this account as a libeller, in which the doctor, being unable to exculpate himself, was cast. This state of warfare proved very unfriendly to the doctor's nerves, and fenfibly affected his mind, which had been much agitated from a personal fear of the approach of the French towards Hanover in 1794. The idea of his becoming a poor emigrant perpetually haunted him, nor could the negociations which afterwards took place, and fecured that country, restore him to tranquillity. He used various remedies to overcome his apprehensions, and even took a journey for that purpose; but it was fruitless. On his return home, he entered his habitation with the same idea which he had left it, perfuaded that he faw it pillaged, and fancied that he was entirely ruined. This notion to ftrongly impressed his mind, that, togepoverty, he wore away to a skeleton, became decrepid, and at last died on the 7th of October 1705, at the age of 67.

The next tract which deserves notice is a translation of "the Memoirs of Jacobinism in France," in 4 vols. 8vo, by the Abbé Barruel. In this work the Abbé endeavours to shew, that there existed on the continent long before the French revolution. a threefold conspiracy to effect the ruin of the altar, the throne, and all focial order. conspiracy was formed by a sect of philosophers. who aimed to destroy the altars of Jesus Christ and his gospel; the second, were the sophists of rebellion, who conspired against the thrones of kings, and who had affiliated themselves to the Society of Freemasons, engrafting on that institution the fecrets of their occult lodges; and the third, passed under the denomination of Illuminati, or enlightened, who formed an union with the two former, and aimed at the subversion of all social order, property, and science. This coalition, the Abbé observes, gave rife to the club of Jacobins in France, which was fo denominated from hokling their meetings in a convent of the order of Jacobias that they had feized in Paris.

Of these three conspiracies, antichristian, antimonarchial, and antisocial, very unfortunately for the Abbé, each successive one has been brought forward in his subsequent volumes with diminished evidence and decreasing plausibility. To expose to view the unknown chieftains and agents of his conspiracies, he has been obliged to describe the symbols and reveal the fecrets of an invisible Society wholly unconnected with them, and to represent the lodges of Freemasons as schools of insidelity and insurrection, whence all these conspiracies have originated. Although he makes France the theatre for their exhibition, he is obliged to have recourse to a strange language and to a Bavarian cloister for their origin; and, from a want of sacts, to supply, from his own imagination, by ingenious interpretations, the lessons which he can nowhere esse discover.

Notwithstanding this serious attack on the Freezemasons, the Abbé is candid enough to admir, that the occult lodges of the Illuminati are unknown in England, and that the English Freemasons are not implicated in the charge which he has made. With his remarks therefore on this subject, we shall conclude our observations on the Memoirs of Jacob inism:

"England, in particular," he fays, "is full of those upright men, who, excellent citizens and of all stations, are proud of being Masons; and who may be distinguished from the others by ties which only appear to unite them more closely in the bonds of charity and fraternal affection. It is not the fear of offending a nation in which I have found an asylum, that has fuggested this exception. Gratitude, on the contraty, would silence every vain terror, and I should be seen exclaiming in the very streets of. London that England was lost; that it could not escape the French revolution, if its Freemasons. Hodges were similar to those of which I am about to treat. I would fay more, that Christianity and all government would have long been at an end in England, if it could be even supposed that her Masons were initiated into the last mysteries of the sect. Long since have their lodges been sufficiently numerous to execute fuch a design, had the English Masons adopted either the means, or the plans and plots, of the cocult lodges.

"This argument alone might suffice to except the English Masons in general from what I have to say of the sect. But there exist many passages in the history of Masonry which necessitate this exception. The following appears convincing:

"At the time when the Illumines of Germany, the most detestable of the Jacobin crew, were seeking to strengthen their party by that of Mass sonry, they affected a sovereign contempt for the English lodges."

The Abbe's information with respect to the Illuminati may perhaps be just, in so far as respects the establishment of that sect, and their deviation from the English lodges; but between the genuine Masons of Germany and their brethren in England, there has long subsisted the most friendly intercourse; and it cannot otherwise be, in any country where Flasonry is conducted according to the pure principles of the institution.

The next publication which claims our attention is a work entitled, "Proofs of a Conspiracy gazainst all the religions and governments of Europe, carried on in the secret meetings of Freemasons, Illuminati, and Reading Socie"ties. By John Robison, M. A. Professor of "Natural Philosophy, and Secretary to the Royal Society of Edinburgh." This work, like the former, aims at proving that a fetret affociation had been formed, and for many years carried on, for rooting out all the religious establishments, and overturning all the existing governments of Europe; and that this affociation had employed, as its chief instruments, the lodges of Freemasons, who were under the direction of unknown superiors. and whose emissaries were every where busy to complete the scheme. Of the rise and progress of this fociety in France he affects to give an account. which agrees in the main with that of the Abbé Barruel, by alleging that feveral of its most ingenious and indefatigable members were active Freemasons, who spread their infectious principles in most of the Freemasons' lodges in Europe. He then enters into an historical detail of the origin of the Scotch degrees, and gives them a consequence to which I hope they are not entitled, as belonging to an institution formed by craft, founded in the deepest motives, and capable of effecting the most important events.

It is well known, I believe, to the Masons of this country, that some men of warm and enthusiastic imaginations have been disposed, within these few years, to amplify parts of the Institution of Freemasonry; and in their supposed improvements to have elevated their discoveries into new degrees; to which they have added ceremonies, rituals, and dresses, ill-suited to the native simplicity of the Order of Masonry as it was originally practised in this country. But in all these degrees, though probably deserving reprehension, as improper innovations on the original system of Masonry, I can never believe that they have either proceeded from bad motives, or could be viewed in any other light than as innocent and inossensive amusements. Thus much I can aver, that all the degrees of Masonry practised in England under the English Constitution are pure and genuine, and that no part of the system established among us is injurious either to Church or State.

In order to refute, however, the flimfy proofs which are produced by the learned Professor, I cannot do better than use the language of an able writer *, who has entered into a ferious investigation of them in a monthly miscellany +. If the principles adopted by foreign Masons be such (says he) as the Professor represents, whence is it that fo many loyal and pious members of the fraternity continue their patronage of the Society, and are still ignorant of the real quality of our principles? Is it that Masonry is one thing on the continent, and another in England? This cannot be, for Mafonry is an universal establishment, and a mutual communication and agreement has long fubfifted between the British and foreign lodges. Some of the wifest and most upright English Masons have visited their brethren abroad, and have not been able to difcover the wonderful disparity, or been shocked at the abominable practices faid to be carried on among them. Even Mr. Robifon himself saw nothing of all this mischievous system while he was in the closest habits of intimacy with the foreign Masons; and this surely must be some proof that Masonry, as it was then practised, had not the tendency which he has fince been pleased to attribute to it. All the conspiracy, therefore, which he pretends to have discovered, if it ever did exist, must be charged to other causes. It must strike the mind with astonishment, that an institution like Masonry, organized and reduced to a complete fystem, should fuddenly be changed from a harmless and innocent appearance, to one the most ferocious and wicked; and that, from being in the highest degree friendly to order and religion, it should all at once become the most powerful and inveterate enemy to both. Whoever confiders this, and attends to the great numbers of eminent characters who continue to give the art their countenance, and to patronise our affemblies, and whoever contrasts with them the names of the persons brought forward as the agitators of this conspiracy, will be led not only to question the truth of the affertions, but allow that both the Professor and the Abbé have gone too wide in their charges, and fuffered a heated imagination to teem with prejudices that have no foundation in truth.

Dr. Watkins.

† See Free Masons Magazine, vol. x. p. 35.

Some foreign Masons may probably have given into the modern wretched philosophy, and, more effectually to propagate their tenets with safety, may have erected a salse banner under the appellation of Masonry, to entrap the unwary; but shall we on that account attribute to the institution of Freemasonry the dreadful acts of those individuals, or the baneful consequences of their conspiracies? Certainly not; for, in opposition to all the Professor's affertions, it remains to be proved that Masonry ever was, is, or can be savourable to infidelity or insurrection.

That a regular confederacy ever has been formed upon this basis, or that the corruptions of the institution of Freemasonry have been so far systematized as to have produced that shock which religion and government have lately received by the French revolution, can never be admitted. Those who view the wonderful changes which have recently taken place in Europe, and which are still going on, will naturally be led to examine further into the causes of so stupendous an event. Whatever opinion the Abbé or the Professor may hold of their own fagacity, future historians will have little reason to compliment them. Possessed of greater lights, it will probably be found that no conspiracy, or ingenious scheme of any body of men, has brought about the late great alterations. They will on the contrary fee much in the natural constitution of things, much in the very principle of fociety itself, more in the corruptions of fociety, a great part in the general diffusion of letters, not a little in the various arts of life and in the extension of commerce, and, above all the rest, in the increase and high pitch of luxury. Connecting all these with circumstances and persons, they will come to a fairer conclusion than either the Abbé or the ingenious Professor. Upon the Illuminati, or the enlightened, I shall make no remarks. I know them not, or their principles. They may, or may not, have arisen from Freemasonry. It is a matter of little moment to the man who is well acquainted with the principles of his Society, what ambitious or corrupt minds may have devised in imitation of it. It is enough for him to know that the doctrines of the institution to which he belongs are simply good, and have no natural tendency to evil. If bad men have perverted the external parts of the fystem to wicked purposes, he laments the depravity of human nature, and regards the genuine principles of his Order with greater affection. The best of doctrines has been corrupted, and the most facred of all institutions prostituted to base and unworthy purposes. The genuine Mason duly considering this, finds a confolation in the midst of reproach and apostacy; and while he despises the one, will endeavour, by his own example, to refute the

It is to be regretted that a Lecturer in Natural Philosophy, of whom his country has the most favourable opinion, should have produced a work which can do so little credit to his character either for knowledge or judgment. Were his volume to be stript of its declamation and conjecture, the remainder would be too insignificant to merit a minute investigation.

In a postscript to the second edition, the Professor, in imitation of the Abbé Barruel, has condescended to except the English lodges from the charge of disloyalty, or want of attachment to government. He admits the innocence and inoffensiveness of their meetings, and acknowledges the benevolent principles of the inftitution as practifed by them. This, however, is but a flimfy evasion, it being evident from the whole tenor of his book that he intended to found the trumpet of alarm in the ears of his Majesty's ministers, by the thunder of his extraordinary denunciations. We are happy, however, to discover, that after all the proofs against the Masons which he has attempted to produce, none of our illustrious patrons have been induced on that account to desert the Society. On the contrary, at the Grand Lodge on the 3d of June 1800, we find the Earl of Moira thus addressing the brethren:

"Certain modern publications have been hold-"ing forth to the world the Society of Masons as " a league against constituted authorities; an im-" putation the more secure, because the known " constitutions of our fellowship make it certain "that no answer can be published. It is not to "be disputed, that in countries where impolitic "prohibitions restrict the communication of sen-"timent, the activity of the human mind may, " among other means of baffling the control, have " reforted to the artifice of borrowing the deno-" mination of Freemasons, to cover meetings for " feditious purpofes, just as any other description-" might be assumed for the same object. But, in " the first place, it is the invaluable distinction of "this free country, that fuch a just intercourse " of opinions exists without restraint, as cannot " leave to any number of men the defire of form-" ing or frequenting those disguised societies where « dangerous dispositions may be imbibed. And,

"2dly, the profligate doctrines, which may have 66 been nurtured in any fuch felf-established assem-" blies, could never have been tolerated for a mo-"ment in any lodge meeting under regular au-"thority. We aver, therefore, that not only such 66 laxity of opinion has no fort of connection with "the tenets of Masonry, but is diametrically " opposite to the injunction which we regard as "the foundation-stone of the Lodge, "FEAR GOD, AND HONOUR THE KING. In con-"firmation of this folemn affertion, what can we "advance more irrefragably, than that fo many " of his Majesty's illustrious Family stand in the "highest order of Masonry, are fully instructed in " all its tendencies, and have an intimate knowledge " of every particular in its current administration " under the Grand Lodge of England."

After fo public a testimony of approbation of the Society, and of the purposes for which it is instituted, little more can be wanted to refute the ungenerous aspersions which have been wantonly thrown out against it.

On the 12th of July 1798, an act of parliament was passed for the more essectual suppression of societies established for seditious and treasonable purposes, and for preventing treasonable and seditious practices. In this act the following clauses in favour of the Society of Masons are inserted, exempting their lodges from the penalties of the act:

"And whereas certain focieties have been long accustumed to be holden in this kingdom under the denomination of lodges of Freemasons, the meetings whereof have been in great measure directed to charitable purposes: Be it therefore enacted, that nothing in this act shall extend to the meetings of any such society or lodge, which shall, before the passing of this act, have been usually holden under the said denomination, and in conformity to the rules prevailing among the said societies of Freemasons.

"Provided always, that this exemption shall not extend to any fuch fociety, unless two of the members composing the same shall certify upon oath, (which oath any justice of the peace or other magistrate is hereby empowered to administer,) that such fociety or lodge has, before the passing of this act, been usually held under the denomination of a Lodge of Freemasons, and in conformity to the rules prevailing among the focieties of lodges of Freemasons in this kingdom; which certificate, duly attested by the magistrate before whom the same shall be sworn, and subscribed by the persons so certifying, shall, within the space of two calendar months after the passing of this act, be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county, stewatry, riding, division, shire, or place where such fociety or lodge hath been usually held: Provided alfo, that this exemption shall not extend to any fuch fociety or lodge, unless the name or denomination thereof, and the usual place or places, and the time or times, of its meetings, and the names and descriptions of all and every the members thereof, be registered with such clerk of the peace as aforefaid within two months after the passing of this act, and also on or before the twenty-fifth day of March in every succeeding year.

"And be it enacted, that the clerk of the peace, or the person acting in his behalf, in any fuch county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place, is hereby authorized and required to receive fuch certificate and make fuch registry as aforefaid, and to enrol the fame among the records of fuch county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place, and to lay the same once in every year before the general fession of the justices for such county, * stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place: and that it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, or for the major part of them, at any of their general fessions, if they shall so think sit, upon complaint made to them upon oath by any one or more credible persons, that the continuance of the meetings of any fuch lodge or fociety is likely to be injurious to the public peace and good order, to direct that the meetings of any fuch fociety or lodge within fuch county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place, shall, from thenceforth, be discontinued; and any fuch meeting held, notwithstanding such order of discontinuance, and before the same shall, by the like authority, be revoked, shall be deemed an unlawful combination and confederacy under the provisions of this act."

FORM OF CERTIFICATE.

Here infert the name of the county.

WE, the underwritten A. B. of in the county of and C. D. of &c. (Here insert the full names and description of the two brathren certifying) two of the members of the Lodge of Freemasons held at .called the Lodge of and being No. in the list of Lodges, do hereby, pursuant to an act of the 30th year of his present Majesty, intitled, "An act for the more "effectual suppression of societies established for seditious and trea- fonable purposes, and for better preventing treasonable and sedi- tious practices," certify upon oath, that the said Lodge, of which we are respectively members as aforesaid, hath, before the passing of the said act, been usually held under the denomination of a Lodge of Freemasons, under the Constitution of England, and in conformity to the rules prevailing among the Societies or Lodges of Freemasons in this kingdom.

A. B.

C. D.

Sworn at the day of in the year of our Lord 1800. before

FORM OF REGISTER.

Here insert the name of the county.

A Register to be enrolled, pursuant to an act of the 30th year of his present Majesty, initided, "An act for the more effectual sup"pression of societies established for seditious and treasonable purfoses, and sorbetter preventing treasonable and seditious practices," of a Lodge of Freemasons, called the Lodge of being No. and usually held at the house of in in the county asoresaid, on specified the time of meeting) and composed of the sollowing members, viz.

Christian and Surnames.	Place of Ahode.	Title, Profession, or Business.

On our conforming to this act, which I am convinced every Mason in this country will most cheerfully do, we may, in defiance of all the salie charges against the Society, rest secure in our lodges, and practife our rites, under function of the best constitution, and the mildest legislature on earth.

We shall now proceed to confider the farther progress of the Society in England, and record some of the principal occurrences which have taken place within the last seven years.

On the 4th of October 1798, the General Infirmary at Sheffield was opened, and dedicated in solemn form, in the presence of a splendid company of brethren from all the lodges in the county of York. Lord Fitzwilliam, Lord Galway, the trustees of the charity, and many of the most respectable gentlemen in the neighbourhood, attended on the occasion.

The accounts from the Provincial Grand Lodges at this time, afforded the most pleasing prospects of the future prosperity of the Society, and of the great increase of members in the lodges under their separate jurisdictions. The anniversary seftivals in the different counties were observed with the strictest regularity, and all the brethren seemed to vie in their exertions to add splendor to the Crast, and to rescue the institution from the unjust charges and illiberal aspersions which had been thrown out against it. Several lodges, animated by a firm attachment to their king and country, liberally contributed to the support of government, and testified their loyalty, and adherence to the principles of the constitution, by the most affectionate addresses to their Sovereign.

An event of real importance to the Society now particularly claims our attention, and further proves our benevolence: it is the inftitution of a new Mafonic Society, for the relief of fick, aged, and imprisoned brethren, and for the protection of their widows, children, and orphans. This Society is established under the patronage of the Prince of Wales, the earl of Moira, and all the other acting Officers of the Grand Lodge; who, in order to render its advantages more generally known, have particularly recommended it to all the Provincial Grand Masters in their several districts. The individuals who are enrolled members of this Society, and are in embarrassed circumstances, have every reason to expect more ample aid than is usually given in other benefit societies, as the greater part of the subscribers to the common stock are respectable characters, who have not the most distant idea of becoming burdensome to the fund. The mode of selecting the members is also highly judicious and proper, as no one can be admitted unless he be recommended by the Master of a lodge, who must vouch for him as being a man of irreproachable character and regular habits; and fo strictly is this rule observed, and so cautious have been the original institutors of the Charity that no improper persons be enrolled, we are informed that feveral hundred names have been already rejected. This inftitution therefore may operate toward the improvement of morals and ftrict regularity of conduct, while the subscribers are gratified with the pleafing prospect of extending relief to the truly industrious and deserving. Above 2500 names are enrolled, and the subscriptions already received amount to feveral thousand pounds. The funds have also considerably increased, not only by many voluntary donations from a number of eminent brethren who have patronifed the Charity, but by the addition of one guinea to the first annual subscription having been paid by every member admitted since the 25th of June 1800. Thus has been established, under a very respectable banner, the Masonic Benefit Society, which, under wise and prudent regulations, may be productive of the most beneficial effects.

The following is an abstract of the Rules and Orders of this Society:

- Any Brother of fair character, being a fubscribing member of a regular lodge under the constitution of England, and recommended by a member of this Society who is Master of a lodge, is capable of admission.
- No person above 45 years of age is admitted a member of this Society, unless he give proper security that he will not become charge-able in his own person to the fund; which, though under this restriction, shall always be liable to the provisions for his widow and children, after his decease.
- The fubscription is one guinea per annum; and at the end of twentyfour months the subscriber becomes a free member, and is entitled to all the benefits of the Society.
- Members when fick, lame, or blind, are to be entitled to fourteen shillings per week.
- Members in reduced circumflances, and imprisoned for debt, are to be allowed a fum not exceeding four shillings per week, if found not unworthy of aid.
- Members who through old age become incapable of earning their fiving, are to be allowed fix shillings per week till the first general court, and afterwards such a pension for life as their situation may require, and the funds of the Society will admit.
- The widows of members, if their circumstances require it, are to be allowed the sum of four shillings per week, and two shillings per week for every lawful child under twelve years of age.
- The orphans of members, not otherwife provided for, are to be entitled to the fum of four shillings per week for their maintenance, and a further sum at a proper age as an apprentice-see.

A general court of all the subscribers is to be held once a year, to fill up any vacancy which may have happened among the trustees, choose committee-men, make bye-laws, &c. The other affairs of the Society are to be managed by a quarterly and monthly Committee, a Committee of Auditors, and an Actuary.

Having stated in a preceding part of this history the initiation of the King of Sweden into Masonry, under the auspices of the Duke of Sudermania *, it may not be uninteresting to our readers to lay before them the result of a correspondence which was opened this year between the Grand Lodges of Sweden and England. Nothing can more truly shew the high estimation in which the English Masons are held abroad, than the repeated applications that are constantly made to the Grand Lodge of England for the purposes of effecting a social union and correspondence.

At the Grand Lodge held at Freemasons'-hall on Wednesday the 10th April 1799, present the right honourable Earl of Moira, Acting Grand Master as Grand Master; the Baron de Silverhjelm, minister from his majesty the king of Sweden to the court of Great Britain, presented to the Grand Master in the chair the following Letter from the National Grand Lodge of Sweden, which was read:

TO THE GLORY OF THE GRAND ARCHITECT OF THE UNIVERSE.

We Charles, by the grace of God Hereditary Prince of the Swedes, Goths, and Vandals, duke of Sudermania, Heir of Norway, Duke of Slefwick. Holstein, Stormarric, and Dittmarche, Count of Oldenburg and Delmenhorst, Grand Admiral of Sweden, Vicar of Solomon of the 7th and 9th Province, and National Grand Master of all the Lodges reunited under the Grand Lodge of Sweden working.

* See page 321.

in the Royal Art within the states and dominions dependent on our august Sovereign, Master and Protector, his Majesty the King of Sweden,

STRENGTH, HEALTH, AND PROSPERITY.

To the Most Illustrious, Most Enlightened, Most Sublime, Most Venerable and Venerable the National Grand Lodge of England, the National Grand Master, Deputy Grand Master, Grand Wardens, Grand Dignitaries, Grand Officers superior and inserior, and Worshipful Members, Union, Content, and Wisdom.

Most Illustrious and Most Enlightened Brethren,

To contract an intimate, fincere, and permanent tie between the National Grand Lodge of Sweden and that of England, has long been ardently our object: but if temporary circumstances have delayed the effect of our wishes, the present moment leaves us at liberty. Our Order, which enjoys in the two States the same privileges and the same protection of government, is not obliged to seek for security in darknes; and our labours approved, as known to promote the public good, are protected by the power of our Sovereigns; enjoying the sacred rights of true liberty, (their essence,) in being able without danger to exercise those charitable deeds towards the unfortunate, which are the principal objects of our duty.

This uniformity of fituation, as well as the fundamental principles of the Craft, which we equally profess, authorise us to confolidate and to draw closer a confidence, friendship, and reciprocal union between two bodies, whose common object is the good of humanity, who mutually confider friendship as the nerve, and the love of our neighbour as the pivot of all our labours. Deeply penetrated by these principles, we fend the Most Illustrious Brother George Baron de Silverhjelm, decorated with the highest Degrees of Masonry, as our Plenipotentiary, to present to the Most Enlightened. Most Sublime, and Most Venerable the National Grand Lodge of England our affectionate greeting. He is charged on our part to express to you the fincere esteem we bear you, and how desirous we are to contract with you a fixed and permanent union. therefore that you will receive him amongst you as the bearer of our fraternal fentiments, and that you will be pleased to give faith and credence to all that he may fay on our part, conformable to these our cordial professions.

The union which is the basis of our labours being once established between two nations who reciprocally esteem each other, and who are both known to possess the requisite qualities of all Free and Accepted Masons, it will consolidate for ever the foundation of the Masonic Temple, whose majestic edifice will endure to suture ages.

May the Most High, the Grand Architect of the Universe, deign to be favourable to the wishes we offer for the success of your endeavours; and we remain always, Most Illustrious and Most Enlightened Brothers, by the Sacred Numbers,

Your devoted Brother,

CHARLES, Duke of Súdermania.

Grand Lodge of Sweden, 24th Jan. 5798. G. A. REUTERHOLM, Grand Chancellor.

This letter being read, it was refolved unanimously, that the Grand Master be requested to return an Answer on the part of the Society to the Duke de Sudermania, expressive of every sentiment correspondent to the warm and brotherly Address received; and that the Baron de Silverhjelm be received as the representative of the Grand Lodge of Sweden, and have a seat with the Grand Officers at all meetings of the Grand Lodge.

At the next Grand Lodge, which was held at Freemasons'-hall on Wednesday the 8th May 1799, present the right hon. the Earl of Moira, Acting Grand Master, as Grand Master in the chair; the Earl of Moira reported, that his royal highness the Grand Master had been pleased, on the part of the Society, to return the following Answer to the Letter received from the Duke de Sudermania, Grand Master of Sweden.

In the Name of the Grand Architect of the Universe. GEORGE Prince of Wales, &c. &c. &c.

STRENGTH, HEALTH, AND PROSPERITY.

To our very dear, very Illustrious, and very Enlightened Brother Charles Duke of Sudermania, &c. &c. &c.

Union, Contentment, and Wisdom.

It was with the trueft satisfaction, Most Illustrious, Most Worshipful, and Most Enlightened Brother, that I received the Letter in which you express your define to see an intimate connection established between the worthy and regular Masons of Sweden and those of England. The high opinion that I have of your character, and the fraternal esteem which is the consequence of it, add greatly to the pleasure I feel on your being on this occasion the voice of your brethren. A reciprocal sentiment has long disposed these two brave nations to admire each other; but this admiration, howsoever generous, is barren; it is therefore to be wished that it should be improved by a close relation between the members of a Craft, the existence of which in each of the countries is sounded on beneficence to mankind.

I am earnefly intreated by my brethren of the Grand Lodge of England to request that you, very illustrious and very enlightened Brother, will impart their most unanimous and most cordial concurrence in these dispositions to the Grand Lodge of Sweden.

We are fully sensible how much a course of communication must contribute to preserve that simplicity which has for so many centuries distinguished the Craft; a simplicity at once dignified in itself, and satisfactory as a pledge towards every government that affords us protection. Let us unite to maintain it. Let us proscribe all those innovations which can enable either dangerous enthusiasts or prostigate conspirators to work in darkness under the hallowed veil of our institution; and let our labours, like those of our predecessors, be characterised by our adoration of the Almighty, by our submission to the government of our country, and by our love to our neighbour. These principles will justify the protection which you receive from your august Sovereign, and which we similarly enjoy under our inestimable Father and King.

May the Great Architect of the Universe be propitious to the vows which we will unceasingly offer to Heaven for the welfare of those two magnanimous Protectors of our Brotherhood: and may he shed upon you, most illustrious and most enlightened Brother, and upon your worshipful sellow-labourers in the Crast, the inexhaustible fruits of his benevolence!

I falute you by the Sacred Numbers.

(Signed) GEORGE, P.

London, 8th May 1799.

By command of the Grand Master,

WM. WHITE, G. S.

(L. S.)

From the above correspondence, and the happy opening of a regular communication between the Grand Lodges of England, Scotland, and Sweden, there is the greatest reason to believe that the best effects will result, and that, agreeably to the wish of every zealous brother, a friendly and lasting intercourse will be preserved with the Freemasons of all the kingdoms.

In detailing the farther events of this period, the following circumstance is too important to escape notice.

On the 15th of May 1800, just as his Majesty entered his box at Drury-lane theatre, and was bowing to the audience with his usual condescension, a person who sat in the second row from the orchestra, toward the middle of the pit, got up on the seat, and levelling a horse-pistol towards the king's box, fired it. Fortunately at the moment a gentleman who fat next him raifed the arm of the affaffin, fo as to direct the contents of the piftol toward the roof of the box, by which means the life of his majesty was happily preserved. The man dropt the pistol. and was immediately feized. He was conveyed to the Green-room, where he underwent a private examination. Terror, difmay, and rage were marked in every countenance except that of his Majesty, who fat with the utmost ferenity, while the Queen, who was just near enough to hear the report of the pistol and see the flash, collected confidence from his magnanimity. The royal family fat out the play of She would and she would not, with the farce of the Humourist, and enjoyed the happiness of receiving from every individual the warmest testimonies of affection. At the conclusion of the play. God fave the King was thrice fung, accompanied by the exstatic plaudits of every part of the audience; and at the end of the farce, it was again repeated, with the following lines annexed, written by Mr. Sheridan on the spur of the moment:

From every latent foe,
From the affaffin's blow,
God fave the King;
O'er him thine arms extend,
For Britain's fake defend
Our father, prince, and friend,
God fave the King.

Nothing could equal the indignation which was univerfally felt by the populace at this daring attempt on the life of a Sovereign who justly reigns in the hearts of his people, and who never by one act of his life provoked their reference.

The name of the affaffin was James Hadfield. who had ferved his apprenticeship to a working filversmith, and enlisted in the 15th regiment of light dragoons, in which he had boldly fought for his king and country. On his examination at the theatre before the duke of York, he turned to his royal highness and faid, "I know you, God bless " you—you are a good fellow. I have ferved with "your highness, and (pointing to a deep cut over "his eye, and another long fcar on his cheek) I "got these, and more than these, in fighting by " your side. At Lincelles I was left three hours "among the dead in a ditch, and was taken pri-" foner by the French. I had my arm broke by a "fhot, and got eight fabre wounds in my head: "but I recovered, and here I am." From this time he began to shew manifest signs of mental derangement. He was committed to Cold Bath Fields prison for the evening, and in the morning brought before the Privy-Council for further examination. When ministers were pressing him to answer many questions, he fullenly replied, "I fired the pistol, "loaded with two flugs, at the King; -what " would you have more?" He refused to answer any other questions; and was fully committed to Newgate for trial. On the 26th of June, he was brought up to Westminster-Hall, and tried in the court of King's Bench. After the examination of an immense number of witnesses, and a trial of eight hours, the jury found the prisoner "Not "guilty, being under the influence of infanity at "the time the act was done." He was then removed to Newgate, and ordered into confinement for life.

On this happy escape of his Majesty from so daring an attempt on his life, addresses poured in from every quarter of the kingdom; and in such general testimonies of loyalty and attachment, it could scarcely be expected that the Society of Freemasons, over which the Prince of Wales was the professed Patron, would be backward. At a special Grand Lodge, therefore, convened at Free-masons'-Hall on Thursday the 3d of June, the following address was unanimously voted, and afterwards prefented to his Majesty by the Prince of Wales in person at the first levee:

Most gracious Sovereign,

The danger to which your Majefty was exposed in the atrocious attempt lately made against your facred person, whilst it filled the hearts of all in this country with alarm and abhorrence, has authorifed every class of your subjects to offer at your throne the experfions of their ardent attachment, without fear of incurring the charge of intrusion.

Vouchfafe, Sire, under this construction, to admit the homage of a description of men who, in ordinary circumstances, could not as a hody tender the profession of that devotion to your royal person and to your government, which it is their boast to cherish, not in their individual capacities alone, but in their peculiar association.

The law, by permitting, under certain regulations, the meetings of Freemasons, has defined the existence of the Society; binding, at the same time, the members of it, by a new obligation of gratitude for the considence extended toward them, to labour, as far as their feeble powers may apply, in inculcating loyalty to the King, and reverence to the inestimable fabric of the British constitution.

Being so acknowledged, we should think ourselves wanting in the first duty towards your Majesty, and towards that constitution, did we not approach your Majesty with the testimony of our feelings on this awful occasion.

Your Majesty is therefore implored to receive the humble congratulations of the GRAND LONGE of FREEMASONS under the constitution of England, (the Representative Assembly of all the Lodges under that constitution,) in the name of themselves and of all their brethren, on your having been shielded by the hand of Providence from the desperate and execrable attempt of the assembly.

When principles were first promulgated in France, which, to our conception, tended to the overthrow of all peace and order in society, we felt ourselves called upon to depart from a rule which had been till then religiously observed in our affociation.

As a veil of secrecy conceals the transactions at our meetings, our fellow-subjects have no affurance that there may not be in our association a tendency injurious to their interests, other than the general tenor of our conduct, and a notoriety that the door of Freemasonry is not closed against any class, prosession, or sect, provided the individual desiring admission be unstained in moral character. To remove, therefore, as far as possible, any ground for suspicion, it has been from time immemorial a fundamental rule most rigidly maintained, that no political topic shail, on any pretence, he mentioned in a lodge.

The fingular juncture to which we have alluded feemed to call for Yome positive declaration which might distinctly exhibit our opinions; we thence ventured to profess to your Majesty the logalty with which the Freemasons of England glowed towards your royal person, and their unalterable attachment to the present happy form of government in this country. Fut as no foresight could devise a motive of equal importance with that which then actuated us, the recent occurrence being of a nature too horrid to be in supposition as a possibility, it was strongly declared that no precedent should be drawn from that step; and that on no future occasion should the Grand Lodge exercise an advertence to events which might entail upon Freemasons the charge of assuming the privilege to deliberate as a body upon public affairs. Hence, Sire, our present address has not been so early as our individual anxiety would have dictated; for it was requisite that a general concurrence should fanction the Grand Lodge, in a second relaxation of its rules, before we could jointly express that which we severally selt in the most ardent manner on the solemn subject.

We have poured forth to the Grand Architect of the Universe our humble thanksgiving, that, to the other bleffings showered on this country, he has added that of defeating a crime the sole attempt at which produced universal dismay throughout these realms; and we earnestly confide in his Divine bounty to preserve to us and to our fellow-subjects, for many, very many, years to come, a life so important in its example, and so inestimable in its superintendance over our happiness, as that of your Majesty.

WILLIAM WHITE, G. S.

GEORGE, P.

Several falutary regulations were adopted this year to liquidate the debts of the Society. On a strict examination of the accounts, it appeared that these debts had considerably increased; that 7000l. remained due from the Society on account of the hall and tavern, besides the tontine of 250l. per annum, and that the average income of the hall-fund, after paying the interest of the debt, the tontine, and incidental expences, lest but a very small sum towards the reduction of the principal; and that many years must elapse before the debt could be materially reduced. In order to discharge this debt therefore, and to render the charity more extensively beneficial, it was resolved in Grand Lodge, That every lodge in the list, until the-debt be extinguished, should pay annually in the month of February to the hall-fund, two shillings for every fubfcribing member of each lodge; and that any lodge neglecting to conform to this regulation, should be considered in contempt, and be subject to erafure from the lift. It was also resolved, that a declaration, figned by the master, wardens, treafurer, and fecretary, of each lodge, or any two of them, certifying the number of subscribing members at Christmas yearly, should be transmitted to the Grand Secretary, with a lift of the members, containing their christian and furnames, age, profession, and residence, when made Masons, or admitted members, in order to be registered in the books of the Grand Lodge; and also the fees prefcribed by the regulations to be paid for that purpose into the hall-fund, viz. For every Mason made in London, or within ten miles thereof, ten shillings and fixpence, and in all other lodges beyond that distance, five shillings; and for every brother made in one lodge and joining another, two shillings and sixpence; and that no brother whose name had not been registered and the fees paid as above, should be entitled to relief from the fund of charity, admission to the benefit fociety as a member, or have his daughter received into the Freemasons' school. This measure, we are happy to find, is likely to have the intended effect; the lodges having readily concurred in the plan of liquidating the debts, and the fums which have been already paid afford a certain prospect of speedily extricating the Society from its present burdens.

Digitized by Google

Among the numerous improvements in the city of London this year, the magnificent range of building at the East India House in Leadenhall-street deservedly claims our attention. The elegance of the structure confers equal honour on the Company for whose use it was built, as on the persons who have been employed in its erection. The architecture is the design of Richard Jupp, esq. the Company's surveyor, and the work is sinished in a very good style.

The following is a description of the Pediment:

COMMERCE, which is represented by Mercury, attended by NAVIGATION, and followed by Tritons and Sea-horses, is introducing ASIA to BRITANNIA, at whose feet she pours out her treasures. The King is holding the shield of protection over the head of Britannia and Liberty, who is embraced by her. By the side of his Majesty sits Order, attended by Religion and Justice. In the back ground is the City-Barge, &c. near to which stand Industry and Integrity. The Thames sills the angle to the right hand, and the Ganges the angle towards the East.

The fentiment of the composition is, "That a ration can only be truly prosperous, when it has King who makes Religion and Justice the basis of his Government, and a Constitution, which, while it secures the Liberties of the people, maintains a due subordination in the several ranks of society, and when the Integrity of the People secures to each individual the advantages which Industry creates and cultivates."

Digitized by Google

The extended progress of the Society of Masons at this period was sufficiently displayed by the erection of some new halls for the lodges in the country, and the institution of a school in London by the irregular Masons, for the education and support of the sons of distressed brethren.

On the 20th of August, a new hall, built at Hull by the members of the Rodney Lodge, was dedicated in solemn form according to the rites of Masonry, in the presence of three hundred brethren. The great zeal which was manifested by the Lodge on this occasion justly merited the marked distinction which was conferred on it by the corporation of Hull, who, with a numerous assemblage of the most eminent characters in the neighbourhood, honoured the Masons with their company. An elegant dinner was provided at the town hall, at which all the principal civil and military officers attended, and the entertainment concluded early in the evening with the greatest cordiality and friendship.

SECT. XIV.

The History of Masonry from the year 1800, to the Grand Feast in 1804.

THE Brethren of Scotland, ever emulous to excel in promoting the benefit and improvement of their country, had an opportunity of displaying their zeal in 1801, by giving their assistance in the erection of the Wet-docks at Leith, a measure well calculated for the convenience and accommodation of the numerous trading vessels which daily arrive in that port from different parts of the world.

The Grand Lodge received a message from the Magistrates of Edinburgh, requesting their company and assistance in laying the foundation-stone of these Docks on the 14th of May 1801. The earl of Dalkeith, the Grand Master, being absent, the direction of the ceremony was vested in his Deputy, Robert Dundas esq. of Melville (now Lord Melville), who conducted it in a very able and masterly stile.

On the day appointed, the Brethren, amounting to about 1200, met in the Assembly-rooms at Leith, where the Lodge was opened; and from thence they marched in procession to the Docks a little before nine o'clock in the morning, preceded by the Lord Provost, Magistrates, and Council of Edinburgh, with the Magistrates of Leith, in their robes; the Engineers and Architects of the proposed building; the Master, Wardens, and Brethren of the Trinity-house; and a number of respectable merchants and inhabitants of the town of Leith.

The Grand Master was supported by Sir James Stirling bart, the Past Grand Master, and Sir Patrick Murray bart, who acted as Deputy Grand Master; Lord Downe, and several other respectable characters, were present. The Substitute Grand Master, the Provincial Grand Masters for Peebles, Selkirk, &c. and the Masters of the Edinburgh lodges according to seniority, with their officers and members, walked in procession, having a band of music attached to each separate Lodge.

When they arrived at the spot where the stone was intended to be laid, the Lord Provost and Magistrates retired to a theatre erected for ione The

112

003

ent,

his

.10W

and ting

ith,

nce

be-

the

linveir

[[]]

c.

them on the west side; and the Grand Master with his officers to another on the east side, where a table was placed, on which were laid the jewels, and other emblems of the Crast. The Substitute Grand Master then ordered the stone to be slung, and let down gradually, making three regular stops before it came to the ground, during which ceremony an anthem was sung. He then placed a large phial in the centre of the under-stone, containing all the present current coins of the country, with a number of beautiful medals of the first characters of the age, all of which had been previously inclosed in crystal. Above the phial were also deposited two plates, on one of which the following inscription was engraved:

"In the reign of the Most Gracious Sovereign George Ill., and under the auspices of the Right Hon. WILLIAM FETTES, Lord Provost of Edinburgh,

The Harbour of Leith,
Though formed at a remote period,

And, as Commerce in the course of ages increased, often repaired and extended; Yet being still narrow and incommodious,

ROBERT DUNDAS Of Melville Equire,
In absence of the Right Hon. CHARLES Earl of DALKEITH,
Grand Master-mason of Scotland,

Laid the foundation-stone of these Docks,

In which the numerous vessels arriving from every quarter of the Globe,

Might-receive ample and secure accommodation;
On the 10th day of May, A. D. 1801. A. L. 5801.

JOHN RENNIE being Engineer.

May the Undertaking profper, By the bleffing of Almighty God!"

On the other plate was engraved:

R 3

The Names of the present Town Council of Edinburgh.
The right hon. HENRY DUNDAS, Member for the City.
The Magistrates of Leith.
The West-dock Committee

The Wet-dock Committee.
The Engineers.

The Contractors for the Work.
The Grand Lodge of Scotland; and
The Masters and Wardens of the Trinity-House, Leith.

The Grand Master, preceded by the Officers of the Grand Lodge, having the Jewels, &c. borne before them, was conducted by the Past Grand Master, Deputy, and Substitute, to the scite of the stone, where, with the assistance of two operative Masons, he turned the stone, and laid it in its proper bed. Then placing himself on the east side, with the Past Grand Master on his right, and the Substitute on his left, his Wardens being in the west, the plumb, level, square, and mallet, were separately delivered to him by the Substitute, and applied to the stone in feveral positions; after which he gave three knocks with the mallet, faying, "May the Great Architect of the Universe enable us fuccessfully to carry on, and finish, the work, of which we have now laid the foundation-stone, and every other undertaking that may tend to the advantage of the City of Edinburgh, and its harbour! May he be a guard and protection to them, and may they long be preferved from peril and decay!" The cornucopia, with the veffels con-. taining the wine and oil, were then delivered in the usual form to the Grand Master, who poured out the contents successively upon the stone, saying, " May the bountiful hand of Heaven ever supply this country with abundance of corn, wine, and oil, and all the necessaries and comforts of life!" The Brethren then gave three cheers; after which the Grand Master addressed the Provost and Magistrates as follows:

" My Lord Provoft, and Magistrates,

"It is with the highest satisfaction that I have now availed myfelf of the opportunity, which the situation I have the honour to hold in the Grand Lodge of Scotland has afforded me, of affishing at the commencement of a work so essential to the welfare of this metropolis, and which, I trust, will contribute, in an eminent degree, to the extension of the commerce, and the general prosperity of this portion of the united kingdom.

"The respect and esteem which you enjoy in the community over which you have the honour to preside, are the surest pledges that nothing will be wanting on your part to second the efforts and fulfil the wishes of those public-spirited individuals who have promoted this undertaking, and that the just expectations of the legislature, to whose liberality you are also indebted, will not be disappointed.

"It is impossible to contemplate the auspicious period at which this work is begun, without the strongest sensations of gratitude to that Providence which has inspired his Majesty's councils with temperate firmness, and his steets with irresistible valour, to affert and maintain the just rights of his subjects, on that element which has ever been the scene of their triumphs, and the source of their envied prosperity and power. May the same bountful Providence, in the blessings of an honourable and lasting peace, secure to the merchants of this, and of every other port in the British dominions, the free and uninterrupted enjoyment of their trade, and the well-earned fruits of industry and enterprizing activity!

66 In the name of the Craft of Free and Accepted Masons, I have to offer our humble supplications to the Supreme Architect of the Universe, that he will afford his protection to your Lordship, and your Brethren in the Magistracy, and that you may continue to be the instruments, through Him, of promoting the happiness and welfare of the community intrusted to your charge."

To which the Lord Provost made the following reply:

" Most Worshipful Sir,

"LEITH has long had reifon to be proud of the enterprise and fuccess of its merchants and sailors. The rapid increase of its commerce has made it necessary to extend the harbour, and improve the conveniencies for its trade. The plan of that able engineer Mr. Rennie has been adopted; and I think it one of the happiest events of my life, that I have the bonour to fill the chair of the City when the foundation stone is laid of these extensive wet-docks, which, I conceive, will not only be of great benefit to the City and its port, but to the country at large, as well as convenient for the admission of large ships of his Majesty's navy.

"I affure you, Sir, that it is highly gratifying to me, and to my fellow-citizens, that the first stone of this important work has been laid by you. Allow me to remark, that there appears a sortunate propriety in this ceremony being performed by the son of a man, to whom our City, the Navy of Britain, and the whole Empire, are under so many obligations.

"Permit me, in the name of the Magistrates and Council of the City of Edinburgh, to return our warmest thanks to you, to your brethren, and to the gentlemen who have honoured us with their attendance on this occasion. And may that Almighty Being, whom winds and seas obey, accompany this undertaking with his blessing, and crown the work with success!"

The ceremony was then concluded, and the Brethren having given three cheers, a falute of twenty-one guns was fired from the veffels in the Roads under the command of Capt. Clements of the royal navy; after which the procession was resumed, and returned to the Assembly-rooms at Leith, where the Grand Master received the thanks of the Brethren for the handsome manner in which he had conducted the ceremony of the day.

'The Substitute Grand Master then addressed the operative Brethren to the following effect:

The foundation-stone of the wet-docks at Leith, planned in much wisdom by the ingenious architect, being now laid, and these implements in your hands having been applied to it by the Grand Master, and approved of, they are recommitted to you, with full confidence, that, as skilful and faithful workmen, you will use them in such a manner, that the building may rise in order, harmony, and beauty; and, being persected in strength, will answer every purpose for which it is intended, to your credit as craftsmen, and to the honour of our ancient fraternity."

The lodge was then closed in due form, and the Brethren departed, highly gratified with the proceedings of the day, in the greatest order and regularity.

Notwithstanding the incredible number of spectators who were assembled on this occasion, no accident happened. The day being fine, and the ships in the Roads and harbour having their slags and colours displayed, rendered the spectacle peculiarly grand and pleasing.

Another incident occurred in Scotland in 1803. which justly deserves to be recorded. At a meeting of the Grand Lodge in Edinburgh on the 30th of November, the earl of Moira, the Acting Grand Master of England, attended, and in an impressive speech related the conduct of the Grand Lodge of England to the irregular Masons of that kingdom, with whom he understood the Grand Lodge of Scotland had established an intercourse. He stated, that the hearts and arms of the Grand Lodge which he had the honour to reprefent, had ever been open for the reception of their feceding Brethren: but that they had obstinately refused to acknowledge their error, and return to the bosom of their mother-lodge. He farther observed, that though the Grand Lodge of England differed in a few trifling observances from that of Scotland, the former had ever entertained for Scotish Masons that affection and regard which it was the object of Freemasons to cherish, and the duty of Freemasons to feel. His Lordship's speech was received with loud and repeated applause. From this circumstance, therefore, we may probably anticipate the renewal of an alliance between the Grand Lodges of Scotland and England *.

The state of the Society in England from the year 1800 has been regular and progressive. Under the patronage of the earl of Moira, Masonry has been cultivated and considerably extended. Many eminent and illustrious characters have enrolled their names among the fraternity; and, through various branches of the Royal Family, application has been made to the Grand Lodge, from the Masons in foreign countries, for renewing reciprocal aliances of permanent friendship.

* From Mr. Lawrie's valuable treatife on Freemasonry, lately published, the above particulars have been extracted. This gentleman has given a very fatisfactory account of the mifunderstanding between the regular and irregular Masons of London. After stating that the schism commenced with the secession of some brethren from the Grand Lodge in 1739, he observes that the active promoters of it, calling themselves Ancient Masons, not only formed lodges, in subversion of the rules of the Order, but actually established in London a nominal Grand Lodge, in open defiance of the ancient Grand Lodge, on whom they invidiously bestowed the appellation of Mo. dein Masons, on account of a few trifling innovations in the ceremonial observances, which had been inconsiderately sanctioned. The irregular Masons encouraged the revolt, and, having chosen as their Grand Master the duke of Athol, then Grand Master elect for Scotland, a friendly intercourse was opened between them and the Grand Lodge in Edinburgh. From this circumstance, more than from any predilection in their favour, a correspondence has fince that time been kept up, and the same prejudices imbibed by the Brethren of Scotland against the regular Masons of England. The businels, however, being now more clearly understood, it is expected that a general union will foon terminate all differences, and that a regular communication will be speedily effected among the regular Majons of both kingdoms.

At the Grand Lodge in February 1802, the Earl of Moira stated to the Brethren, that the Lodges in Berlin, under the auspices of the King of Prussia, had solicited the influence of the Duke of Sussex to carry on a friendly communication with the Grand Lodge of England; and had expressed a readiness, on their part, as far as was consistent with the duty they owed to their own Masonic jurisdiction, to act in unison with their Brethren of England, in promoting all the general principles of the Institution, and in extending relief to distressed Masons; on which it was immediately resolved, that a friendly communication should be kept up with our Brethren in Prussia, and every attention paid to their future recommendations.

At the Grand Lodge in May following, another application was made, through the fame channel, from four Lodges in Portugal, which had empowered M. Peter Hypolite Joseph de Costa, to act as their representative in the Grand Lodge of England, and in their name to solicit a regular authority to practise the rites of the Order under the English banner and protection. After mature deliberation it was determined, that every encouragement should be given to the Brethren in Portugal who might enrol their names in our records, and conform to the constitutions of the Order; but that a regular list of their names should be transmitted to England, and a recommendation given from the known Governors of the country where they intend to assemble as Masons, before their request could be complied with, or the sanction granted.

In the private proceedings of the Society few material incidents have occurred. In confequence of the death of Thomas Sanby efg. the office of Grand Architect remained vacant till 1700; when Robert Brettingham efq. was appointed his fucceffor. William Tyler efq. the Architect of the Tavern, having been proposed as a candidate for the office at the Grand Feast in May 1801, the Grand Master observed, that the office of Grand Architect had been conferred on Brother Sanby only as a mark of personal attachment, he having been the Architect of the Hall, but that it was never intended to be a permanent office in the Society. 'The Grand Lodge therefore refolved that the office of Grand Architect should be discontinued; but that, in compliment to Brothers-Brettingham and Tyler, both these gentlemen should be permitted to attend the Grand Lodge, and wear an honorary jewel as a mark of personal respect.

In November 1801, a charge was presented to the Grand Lodge against some of its members, for patronizing and officially acting as principal officers in an irregular society, calling themselves Ancient Masons, in open violation of the laws of the Grand Lodge. The charge being fully supported, it was determined that the laws should be ensorced against these offending Brethren, unless they immediately seceded from such irregular meetings. They solicited the indulgence of the Grand Lodge for three months, in hopes that, during the interval, they might be enabled to effect an union of the two Societies. This measure was agreed to; and that no impediment might pervert so desirable an object, the charge against the offending brethren was withdrawn; and a committee, confifting of lord Moira, and feveral other eminent characters, was appointed, to pave the way for the intended union; and every means ordered to be used to bring back the erring Brethren to a fense of their duty and allegiance. Lord Moira declared, on accepting his appointment as a member of the Committee, that he should consider the day on which a coalition was formed, one of the most fortunate in his life; and that he was empowered by the Prince of Wales to fay, his Royal Highness's arms would ever be open to all the Masons in the kingdom indifcriminately. On the oth of February 1803, it being represented to the Grand Lodge that the irregular Masons still continued refractory; and that, so far from soliciting re-admission among the Craft, they had not taken any steps to effect an union: their conduct was deemed highly cenfurable, and the laws of the Grand Lodge were ordered to be enforced against them. It was also unanimously refolved, That whenever it shall appear that any Mafons under the English constitution shall in future attend, or countenance, any lodge, or meeting of perfons, calling themselves Ancient Masons, under the fanction of any person claiming the title of Grand Master of England, who shall not have been duly elected in the Grand Lodge, the laws of the Society shall not only be strictly enforced against them, but their names shall be erazed from the list, and transmitted to all the regular Lodges under the Constitution of England.

As these censures extend to such a numerous circle, it may for a short time interrupt the general harmony of our meetings; but it is hoped, that when the Brethren of whom the irregular Societies are composed, are aware that, by continuing to assemble without regular sanction, they are acting contrary to the ancient charges of the Order, and encouraging a division in the family of Masons, they will soon re-unite under the legal banner, and acknowledge one supreme head, to whom all the fraternity in the kingdom are bound to pay allegiance. Should any trisling variations in the formalities of the institution impede the progress of this union, we trust they will be immediately removed, and every Brother vie who shall be most assiduous in preserving the original landmarks of the Order.

In February 1804, the Grand Lodge, desirous of expressing in the most public manner the high sense entertained of the services of the right hon. the earl of Moira, the acting Grand Master, unanimously resolved, that his Lordship's portrait should be painted by an able artist, and put up in the Hall, with those of the Past Grand Masters, as a lasting testimony of the gratitude and esteem of the Society for his Lordship.

The following list of the Provincial Grand Masters appointed since the year 1790, will afford the best testimony of the great increase of the Society under the English banner within the last fourteen years:

Over the Allied Nations of the Crecks, Cherokee, Chickefaw, and Chactaw Nations, in North America.

Hon. Rev. Francis Henry Egerton

Over the Allied Nations of the Crecks, Cherokee, Chickefaw, and Chactaw Nations, in North America.

Shropshire, Staffordshire, Flintshire, Denbigshire, and Montgomeryshire.

```
1792. Rev. Willi,m Peters Lincolnshire.
                                   Warwickshire
     Thomas Thompson, Efq.
                                   Worce fler shire.
       John Dent, Efq.
      Sir John Borlase Warren.
                                   Nottinghamshire.
         ĸ.B.
1793. Prince Charles, Landgrave
                                   Denmark, Norway, and Danish
                                     Dominions in Germany.
         of Heffe Caffel
                                   Frankfort on the Main, and Circles of the Upper and John Charles Broenner, Efq.
                                     Lower Rhine, and Franconia.
       Iohn Macdonald, Eki.
                                   Sumatra.
3794. William Perfect, M D.
                                   Kent.
                                   South Wales.
       Thomas Wyndham, Efq.
1795. James Meyrick, Efq.
                                   Surry.
                                   Berkfhire.
       Arthur Stanhope, Eig.
       Sir John Macnamara Hayes
                                   Oxfordshire.
         Bart.
1796. Sherborne Stewart, Efq.
                                   Hampshire.
       Sir John Throckmorton
                                   Buckinghamshire.
         Bart.
                                   Cambridgeshire.
       Lord Eardley
       George Downing, Efq.
                                   Effex.
       John Smith, Efq. (now
                                   Somersetshire.
         Leigh)
 1798. Earl of Pomfret
                                   Northamptonshire.
                                   Rutlandshire.
       Richard Barker, Efq.
                                   Islands of St. Christopher and Robert Wilkes, Efq.
                                      Nevis.
       Sir Ralph Milhanke, Bart.
                                    Durham.
 1799. Marquis of Worcester
                                    Gloucestershire.
       John Philip Beckmann,
                                   Hamburgh and Lower Saxony.
          LL. D.
                                    Bedfordshire.
        William Gill, Efq.
 Henry Jenner, Esq. 1800. Earl of Mountnorris
                                    City and County of Bristol.
                                    Huntingdonshire.
        John Losh, Esq.
                                    Cumberland.
 1801. Earl of Harrington
                                    Derbyshire.
                                    Cape of Good Hope, and South
       Richard Blake, Efq.
                                       Africa.
        John Sweetland, Eiq.
                                    Gibraltar.
        Hon. John Straker
                                    Barbadoes.
        W. E. Bulwer, Efq.
                                    Norfolk.
        Alexander Sinclair
                                    Herefordshire.
          don, Eíq.
        Henry Harnage, Eiq.
                                    Monmouthshire.
                                    Effex, vice G. Downing deceafed.
        William Wix, Efq.
  1802. Sir John Lester
                                    Dorsetshire.
                                    Hertfordshire.
  1803. George Harvey, Efq.
                                    St. Helena.
  1803. David Kay, M. D.
```

COLLECTION

O F

ODES, ANTHEMS, AND SONGS.

ODE I. [By Mr. Cunningham]

HAIL to the CRAFT! at whose screene command. The gentle ARTS in glad obedience stand: Hail, sacred MASONRY! of source divine, Unerring sov'reign of th' unerring line: Whose plumb of truth, with never-failing sway, Makes the join'd parts of symmetry obey: Whose magic stroke bids fell consusion cease, And to the sinish'd Orders gives a place: Who calls vast structures from the womb of earth, And gives imperial cities glorious birth.

To works of Art HER merit not confin'd,
She regulates the morals, squares the mind;
Corrects with care the sallies of the soul,
And points the tide of passions where to roll:
On Virtue's tablet marks HER moral rule,
And forms HER Lodge an universal school;
Where Nature's mystic laws unfolded stand,
And Sense and Science join'd, go hand in hand,

O may HER focial rules instructive spread, Till Truth erect HER long neglected head! Till through deceitful night SHE dart her ray, And beam full glorious in the blaze of day! Till men by virtuous maxims learn to move, Till all the peopled world HER laws approve, And Adam's race are bound in brother's love!

ODE II.

[Written by a Member of the ALFRED LODGE at Ox-FORD, fet to Music by Dr. FISHER, and performed at the Dedication of FREE-MASONS'-HALL.]

STROPHE.

AIR.

WHAT solemn sounds on holy Sinai rung, When heav'nly lyres, by angel singers strung, Accorded to th'immortal lay, 'That hymn'd Creation's natal day!

RECITATIVE, accompanied.

'Twas then the shouting sons of morn
Bless'd the great omnific Word;
Abash'd hoarse jarring atoms heard,
Forgot their pealing strife,
And softly crouded into life,
When Order, Law, and Harmony were borns

The mighty Master's pencil warm, Trac'd out the shadowy form, And bid each fair proportion grace Smiling Nature's modest face,

AIR.

Heav'n's rarest gifts were seen to join
To deck a finish'd form divine,
And fill the sov'reign Artist's plan;
Th' Almighty's image stamp'd the glowing frame,
And seal'd him with the noblest name,
Archetype of beauty, Man.

ANTISTROPHE.

SEMICHORUS AND CHORUS.

Ye fpirits pure, that rous'd the tuneful throng, And loos'd to rapture each triumphant tongue, Again with quick inflinctive fire, Each harmonious lip infpire:

Again bid every vocal throat

Dissolve in tender votive strain.

AIR.

Now while yonder white-rob'd train
Before the myftic shrine,
In lowly adoration join,
Now sweep the living lyre, and swell the melting note.

RECITATIVE.

Yet ere the holy rites begin, The conscious shrine within Bid your magic song impart,

AID.

How within the wasted heart,
Shook by passion's ruthless pow'r,
Virtue trimm'd her faded flow'r,
To op'ning buds of fairest fruit:
How from majestic Nature's glowing face,
She caught each animating grace,
And planted there th' immortal root.

BPODE.

RECITATIVE, accompanied.

Daughter of gods, fair Virtue, if to thee
And thy bright Sifter, Universal Love,
Soul of all good, e'er flow'd the soothing harmony
Of pious gratulation; — from above,
To us, thy duteous votaries, impart
Presence divine.—

AIR.

The fons of antique Art,
In high mysterious jubilee,
With Pæan loud, and solemn rite,
Thy holy step invite,
And court thy listening ear,
To drink the cadence clear,
That swells the choral symphony.

CHORUS.

To thee, by foot profane untrod, Their votive hands have rear'd the high abode.

RECITATIVE.

Here shall your impulse kind, Inspire the tranced mind:

AIR.

And lips of Truth shall tell
What heav'nly deeds besit,
The soul by Wisdom's lesson smit;
What praise he claims, who nobly spurus
Gay vanities of life, and tinsel joys,
For which unpurged fancy burns.

What pain he shuns, who dares be wise;
What glory wins, who dares excel!

ODE III.

[Performed at the GRAND CHAPTER of HARDDIM. Written by Brother NOORTHOUCK. Set to Music by Brother WEBBE.]

OPENING.

ORDER is Heav'n's first law: thro' boundless space Unnumber'd orbs roll round their destin'd race; On earth, as strict arrangements still appear, Suiting the varying seasons of the year: Beneficence divine presents to view Its plenteous gifts to man, in order true; But chief a mind, these blessings to improve, By arts, by science, by fraternal love.

DIVISION.

When men exalt their views to Heav'n's high will,
With steady aim their duty to fulfil,
'The mind expands, its strength appears,
Growing with their growing years,
Mounting the apex of masonic skill.
Be this the earnest purpose of our lives,

Success must crown the man who nobly strives !

CONCLUSION.

Loud let us raise our swelling strains,
And Harodim proclaim,
Of excellence the name;
Good-will to all, love to each other,
The due of every skilful brother,
Who worthily our ancient lore maintains.

Indulgence in pleasure,
By prudence we measure;
And, cheerfully parting, exchange an adieu;
Till we meet with fresh vigour, our tasks to renew.

ODE IV.

[Performed at Coach-makers'-Hall. Written by Mr. Brown. Set to Music by Mr. Remy.]

RECITATIVE.

WHEN first the golden morn aloft, With maiden breezes whisp'ring fost; Sprung from the east with rosy wing, To kiss the heav'nly first-born spring; Jehovah then, from hallow'd earth, Gave Masonry immortal birth; 'Twas then the new creation rung, And thus the Host of Heaven sung;

4192

Hail, hail, O hail, thou fource of love, Great Artist of this goodly frame! The earth and sea, the sky above, Thou form'st to thy immortal same!

SEMI-CHORUS.

To thee, our Sire,
The cherub choir
The air move with feraphic found,
Ye breezes fweet,
The cadence meet,
And waft it o'er the hallow'd ground.

AIR.

Ten thousand orbial beauties bright,
Which long confus'd in chaos lay,
Thou brought'st them forth to give delight,
And make the face of Heav'n gay.

SEMI-CHORUS.

To thee, our Sire, &c.

RECITATIVE.

'Twas thus the Heav'ns in concert rung, While Nature kind from chaos sprung, Brought forth her tender infant green, And flow'ry sweets, to deck the scene: To finish then the Artist's plan, Of purest mould he form'd the Man; Then gave him an immortal soul, And bid him live, and rule the whole; While angels, from their golden shrine Sung with angelic strains divine:

AIR.

Happy, happy mortals rife, Tafte with us immortal joys, Blooming on yon facred tree, Planted by the Deity, The hallow'd fruit is MASONRY.

Far beyond the pregnant sky, There the hopes of Masons lie, Masons happy choice above, Masons every blessing prove, Friendship, harmony, and love.

RECITATIVE.

Since perfect love and pow'r divine
First gave our science birth,
So friendship shall our hearts entwine,
And harmonize the earth;
Behold the virgin hither slies,
To crown us with her blissful joys.

AIR.

Blooming as fair Eden's bow'r,
Friendship, goddes heav'nly bright,
Dropping in a balmy shower,
Breathing concord and delight;
Each Mason feels the sacred fire
Glow with ardour in his heart;
The slame inspires him with defire
To relieve each other's smart.

Digitized by Google

FULL CHORUS.

From Heav'n fince fuch bleffings flow, Let ev'ry Mason while below Our noble science here improve; 'Twill raise his soul to realms above, And make his lodge—a lodge of love.

ODE V.

[By Mr. Thomas Dermody.]
Thou fairest Type of Excellence divine,
Whose social links the race of man combine,
Whose awful mandates coward vice control,
And breathe through nature one enlighten'd soul;
From thy mild sway benignant virtues rise,
Pour on the heart, and emulate the skies;
From thy sage voice sublime Instruction springs,
While Knowledge waves her many colour'd wings,
And star-ey'd Truth, and Conscience, holy zest,
Enthrone True Feeling in the glowing breast.
Then deign the labour of thy sons to guide,
O'er each full line in nervous sense preside,
Adorn each verse, each manly thought instame,
And what we gain from Genius give to Fame!

ODE VI.

[By Mr. WILLIAM WALKER.]

STRIKE to melodious notes the golden lyre! Spread wide to all around the ardent flame, Till each rapt bosom catch the sacred fire,

And join the glorious theme!
'Tis Maionry,

The Art fublimely free, Where Majesty has bow'd, and own'd a Brother's name! Through ample domes wide let the chorus roll, Responsive to the ardour of the soul, Hail! inspiring Masonry!

To thy shrine do myriads bend; Yet more glorious shalt thou be,

Till o'er the world thy pow'r extend. Still to the sons of Earth thy Light dispense, And all shall own thy sacred influence.

Though Genius fires, yet faint his rays appear,
Till-thy mysterious lore the foul refine;
'Tis thou to noblest heights his thoughts must rear,

And make them doubly shine.

O Masonry!

Thou Art sublimely free!
'Tis thou exalt'st the man, and mak'st him half divine.
Ye Masons, favour'd men, your voices raise!
You speak your glory while you sing its praise.
Hail! inspiring Masonry, &c.

Blest be the man, and blest he is, who bears
With virtuous pride a Mason's facred name;
And may each Brother, who the blessing shares,
Enrich the list of Fame.

Bleft Mafonry!

Thou art sublimely free!
Heav'u bids thy happy sons, and they thy worth proclaim
With loud assent! their cheerful voices raise,
Their great, immortal Masonry to praise.

Hail! inspiring Masonry, &c.

The tow'r sky-pointing, and the dome sublime, Rais'd by the mystic rules and forming pow'r, Shall long withstand the iron tooth of Time,

Yet still their fall is fure:

But Mafonry,

The Art sublimely free, Founded by God himself, thro' time shall firm endure. Still shall its sons their grateful voices raise, And joyful sound their Great Grand Master's praise.

At thy shrine, O Masonry!
Shall admiring nations bend;
In suture times thy sons shall see
Thy same from pole to pole extend.

To worlds unknown thy heav'n-born Light dispense, And systems own thy sacred influence.

Digitized by Google

ODE VII.

WAKE the lute and quiv'ring strings, Mystic truths Urania brings; Friendly visitant, to thee We owe the depths of MASONRY; Fairest of the virgin choir, Warbling to the golden lyre, Welcome; here thy ART prevail! Hail! divine Urania, hail!

Here in Friendship's facred bower, The downy-wing'd and smiling hour, Mirth invites, and social Song, Nameless mysteries among: Crown the bowl, and fill the glass, To every virtue, every grace, To the BROTHERHOOD resound Health, and let it thrice go round

We reftore the times of old,
The blooming glorious age of gold;
As the new creation free,
Bleft with gay Euphrofyne;
We with godlike Science talk,
And with fair Aftræa walk;
Innocence adorns the day,
Brighter than the fmiles of May.

Pour the rofy wine again,
Wake a louder, louder itrain;
Rapid zephyrs, as ye fly,
Waft our voices to the sky;
While we celebrate the NINE,
And the wonders of the Trine,
While the Angels sing above,
As we below, of Peace and Love.

ODE VIII.

[By Brother Dunckerlew]

ALMIGHTY Sire! our heavenly king,
Before whose facred Name we bend,
Accept the praises which we fing,
And to our humble prayer attend!
All hail, great architect divine!
This universal frame is thine.

Thou who did'ft Persia's king command, A proclamation to extend, That Israel's sons might quit his land, Their holy temple to attend.

That facred place where three in one, Compris'd thy comprehensive name; And where the bright meridian sun Was soon thy glory to proclaim.

Thy watchful eye, a length of time, The wond'rous circle did attend: The glory and the power be thine, Which shall from age to age descend.

On thy omnipotence we reft,
Secure of thy protection here;
And hope hereafter to be bleft,
When we have left this world of care.

Grant us, great God, thy powerful aid,
To guide us through this vale of tears;
For where thy goodness is display'd,
Peace sooths the mind, and pleasure cheers.

Inspire us with thy grace divine,
Thy facred law our guide shall be:
To every good our hearts incline,
From every evil keep us free.
All hail! &c.

Digitized by Google

ODE IX.

[By the Same.]

HAIL, univerfal Lord!
By heaven and earth ador'd:
All hail! great God!
Before thy Name we bend,
To us thy grace extend,
And to our prayer attend.
All hail! great God!

ODE X.

[Set to Music by Dr. Arnold.]

Assist me, ye fair tuneful Nine,
Euphrofyne, grant me thy aid,
While the honours I fing of the Trine,
Preside o'er my numbers, blithe maid!
Cease Clamour and Faction, oh cease,
Fly hence all ye cynical train;
Disturb not, disturb not the lodge's sweet peace,
Where Silence and Secrecy reign.

Where Silence and Secrecy reign.

Religion untainted here dwells,
Here the morals of Athens are taught;
Great Hiram's tradition here tells
How the world out of chaos was brought.

With fervency, freedom, and zeal,
Our mafter's commands we obey;
No lowen, no lowen our fecrets can fteal,
No babbler our myst'ries betray.

Here Wisdom her standard displays,

Here nobly the Sciences shine;
Here the temple's vast column we raise,
And finish a work that's divine.
Illum'd from the East with pure light,
Here Arts do their blessings bestow;
And all perfect, all perfect, unfold to the sight,
What none but a Mason can know.

Digitized by Google

If on earth any praise can be found,
Any virtue unnam'd in my song;
Any grace in the universe round,
May these to a Mason belong!
May each brother his passion subdue,
Proclaim charity, concord, and love;
And be hail'd, and be hail'd by the thrice happy sew
Who preside in the Grand Lodge above!

ODE XI.

URANIA, hail! to thee we fing,
And all with pleasure own the lay;
Which from thy facred fountain spring,
To clad the free-born sons of day;
O still attend our meetings here,
With peace serene, and joy sincere.

True joys unruffled, calm repose, In friendship's facred band behold, The happy recompence of those Who laws and liberty uphold; Who scorn all base, unmanly views, From vice resrain, and virtue choose.

May each Free-mason good and true,
In Britain's isse be ever found;
And in remotest regions too,
May love and harmony abound;

And all confess true Wisdom's power, Till Time and Masons are no more.

ODE XII.

ARISE, gentle Muse, and thy wisdom impart To each bosom that glows with the love of our Art; For the bliss that from thy inspiration accrues, Is what all should admire, and each Mason pursues,

CHORUS.

Hence Harmony springs, 'tis the cement of love, Fair freedom on earth and bright union above.

Tho' malice our joy should attempt to control, 'Tho' discord around like an ocean should roll; 'To the one we'll be deaf, to the other be blind, For wisdom alone is the strength of the mind.

The bright charms of beauty for ever will shine, Our Art to adorn with a lustre divine, Till Time, circling round, shall unfold the great truth, Which thus has united the sage and the youth.

ANTHEM L

GRANT us, kind Heaven! what we request, In Masonry let us be blest; Direct us to that happy place Where Friendship smiles in every face; Where Freedom and sweet Innocence

Where Freedom and sweet Innocence Enlarge the mind and cheer the sense.

Where scepter'd Reason, from her throne, Surveys the Lodge, and makes us one; And Harmony's delightful sway For ever sheds ambrosial day:

Where we blest Eden's pleasures taste, While balmy joys are our repast.

No prying eye can view us here; No fool or knave disturb our cheer: Our well-form'd laws fet mankind free, And give relief to misery;

The poor, oppress'd with woe and grief, Gain from our bounteous hands relief.

Our Lodge, the focial Virtues grace, And Wisdom's rules we fondly trace; Whole Nature open to our view, Points out the paths we should pursue. Let us subsist in lasting peace, And may our happiness increase!

initized by GOODE

ANTHEM IL

By Masons' Art th' aspiring dome
On stately columns shall arise,
All climates are their native home,
Their godlike actions reach the skies.
Heroes and kings revere their name,
While poets sing their lasting same.

Great, noble, gen'rous, good, and brave;
All virtues they must justly claim;
Their deeds shall live beyond the grave,
And those unborn their praise proclaim.
Time shall their glorious acts enrol,
While love and friendship charm the soul.

ANTHEM III.

"Let there be light!"—the Almighty spoke,
Resulgent streams from chaos broke,
To illume the rising earth!
Well pleas'd the Great Jehovah stood—
The Power Supreme pronounc'd it good,
And gave the planets birth!
In choral numbers Masons join,
To bless and praise this light divine.

Parent of light! accept our praise!
Who shedd'st on us—thy brightest rays,
The light that fills his mind—
By choice selected, lo! we stand,
By friendship join'd, a social band!
That love—that aid mankind!
In choral numbers, &c.

The widow's tear—the orphan's cry—All wants—our ready hands fupply,
As far as power is given!
The naked clothe—the pris'ner free—These are thy works, sweet Charity!
Reveal'd to us from Heaven!
In choral numbers, &c.

ANTHEM IV.

To Heaven's high Architect all praise, All praise, all gratitude be given; Who deign'd the human soul to raise, By mystic secrets sprung from Heaven.

CHORUS-

Sound aloud the Great JEHOVAH's praise; To him the dome, the temple raise.

SONG I.

[Tune, Attic Fire.]

ARISE, and blow thy trumpet, Fame! Free-masonry aloud proclaim,

To realms and worlds unknown; Tell them 'twas this great David's son,

The wife, the matchless Solomon, Pris'd far above his throne.

The folemn temple's cloud-capt towers, 'I'h' afpiring domes are works of ours,

By us those piles were rais'd:
Then bid mankind with songs advance,
And through th' ethereal vast expanse,
Let Masonry be prais'd!

We help the poor in time of need, The naked clothe, the hungry feed,

'Tis our foundation-stone: We build upon the noblest plan, For friendship rivets man to man, And makes us all as one.

Chorus three limes.

Still louder, Fame! thy trumpet blow;
Let all the distant regions know
Free-masonry is this:
Almighty Wisdom gave it birth,
And Heaven has fix'd it here on earth,
A type of future bliss!

SONG II.

[Tune, He comes, &c.]

UNITE, unite, your voices raife; Loud, loudly fing Free-masons' praise: Spread far and wide their spotless same, And glory in the sacred name.

Behold, behold, the upright band, In Virtue's paths go hand in hand; 'They shun each ill, they do no wrong, Strict honour does to them belong. How just, how just are all their ways, Superior far to mortal praise!

Their worth, description far exceeds, For matchless are Free-masons' deeds,

Go on, go on, ye just and true, Still, still the same bright paths pursue; Th'admiring world shall on ye gaze, And Friendship's altar ever blaze.

Begone, begone, fly discord hence! With party rage, and insolence! Sweet Peace shall bless this happy band, And Freedom smile throughout the land.

SONG III.

[Tune, Rule Britannia.]

When earth's foundation first was laid, By the almighty Artist's hand, 'Twas then our perfect, our perfect laws were made, Establish'd by his strict command,

CHORUS.

Hail, mysterious; hail, glorious Masonry! That makes us ever great and free.

In vain, mankind for shelter sought,
In vain from place to place did roam,
Until from Heaven, from Heaven he was taught
To plan, to build, to six his home.

Illustrious hence we date our Art,
Which now in beauteous piles appear;
And shall to endless, to endless time impart,
How worthy and how great we are.

Nor we less fam'd for every tie

By which the human thought is bound;

Love, truth, and friendship, and friendship socially

Unite our hearts and hands around.

Our actions still by virtue blest,
And to our precepts ever true;
The world admiring, admiring shall request
To learn, and our bright paths pursue.

SONG IV. [Tune, Rule Britannia.]

ERE God the Universe began, In one rude chaos matter lay, And wild diforder over-ran, Nor knew of light one glimmering ray : While, in darkness, o'er the whole Confusion reign'd without control. Then God arole, his thunders hurl'd. And bade the elements arise: In air he hung the pendent world, And o'er it spread the azure skies ; Stars in circle caus'd to run, And in the centre fix'd the Sun. Then Man hé call'd forth out of dust, And form'd him with a living foul; All things committed to his trust, And made him ruler of the whole; But, ungrateful unto Heaven, The rebel was from Eden driven. From thence proceeded all our woes, Nor could mankind one comfort cheer : Until Free-masonry arose, And form'd another Eden here;

Tis only on Masonic ground, Pleasure with innocence is found. 'Tis here the purest fountains flow, Here naught corrupt can enter in;
Here trees of knowledge stately grow,
Whose fruit we taste, exempt from in;
In friendship sweet we still abound,
While guardian Angels hover round.

SONG V.

[Written by Brother NOORTHOUCK, and fung in the PROVINCIAL GRAND LODGE at Margate in Kent, June 12, 1786, by Brother Robson.]

[Tune, Rule Britannia.]

WHILE trifles lead the world aftray,
And vice feduces giddy youth;
Rejoice, my brethren, in this aufpicious day,
That guides a fleady few to truth:
Raife, raife your voices, ye Kentish Masons all,
'Tis Sawbridge rules, obey his call.

Shall Masonry through Britain spread,
And flourish every where but here?
Forbid it, Virtue! while you our footsteps lead,
Kent foremost shall in worth appear:
Huzza, my brethren! to Sawbridge raise the song,
Our grateful strains to him belong.

When Harold's crown the Norman gain'd,
In Kent a hardy race he found;
Whose sons to cherish, their ancient fame unstain'd
Preserve it on masonic ground:
True to your duty, your ancestors, and land,
Let Sawbridge lead a worthy band.

Away with politics and news,
Away with controversies all;
We're here united, above all party views,
And gladly hail the social call;
Fill, sill your glasses; let Sawbridge be the toast,
Long may we his protection boast!

SONG VI.

[By J. F. STANFIELD, Sunderland.]

Not the fictions of Greece, or the dreams of old Rome, Shall with visions mislead, or with meteors confume, No Pegalus' wings my fhort foarings milguide; Nor raptures detain me on Helicon fide. All clouds now dissolve: from the east beams the day-Truth rifes in glory and wakens the lay. The eagle-ey'd Muse-sces the light-fills the grove With the fongs of Freemasons, of Friendship, and Love! Inspir'd with the theme, the Divinity flies, And thron'd on a rainbow—before her arise Past, Present, and Future—with splendid array, In malonic succession, their treasures display: She views murder'd Merit by ruffian-hand fall, And the grave give its dead up, at fellowship's call! While the Craft, by their badges, their innocence prove; And the fong of Freemalons is Friendship and Love! From those ages remote, see the Muse speeds her way, To join in the glories the Prefent display. In freedom and friendship, she sees the true band With their splendour and virtues illumine the land. Religion's pure beams break the vapours of night, And from darkness mysterious, the Word-gives the light! While the Lodge here below, as the choirs from above, Join the fong of Freemafons in Friendship and Love! That the Future might keep, what the Prefent bestows, In rapture prophetic the goddess arose; As the fung through the fkies, angels echo'd the found, And the winds bore the notes to the regions around; The kind proclamation our fong shall retain, 'Twas-'That Masoury long may its lustre maintain: And till Time be no more, our fraternity prove,

'That the objects we aim at, are Friendship and Love!'

SONG VII.

[Tune, Rural Felicity.]

YE dull stupid mortals give o'er your conjectures, Since Freemasons' secrets ye ne'er can obtain; The Bible and compasses are our directors,

And shall be as long as this world doth remain. Here friendship inviting, here freedom delighting, Our moments in innocent mirth we employ:

CHORUS.

Come, fee, Masons' felicity,
Working and finging with hearts full of joy.
No other Society that you can mention,

Which has been, is now, or hereafter shall be,

However commendable be its intention, Can ever compare with divine Masonry.

No envy, no quarrels, can here blaft our laurels, No passion our pleasures can ever annoy: Come, see, &c.

To aid one another we always are ready, Our rites and our fecrets we carefully guard; The lodge to support, we like pillars are steady,

No Babel contusion our work shall retard. Ye mortals, come hither, assemble together, And taste of those pleasures which never can clov.

And talte of those pleasures which never can cloy. Come, see, &c.

We are to the Master for ever obedient,
Whenever he calls, to the Lodge we repair;
Experience has taught us, that 'tis most expedient
To live within compass, and act on the square.
Let mutual agreement be Freemasons' cement,
Until the whole universe Time shall destroy.
Come, see, &c.

SONG VIII.

[Tune, When Phoebus the tops, &c.]
WHILE princes and heroes promifcuoufly fight,

And for the world's empire exert all their might,
We fit in the Lodges from danger fecure,
No hardships we meet with, no pains we endure;

But each brother cheerfully joins in a fong:
Our rites we renew,
Our pleasures pursue;
Thus we wast time along.

To restless ambition we never give way,
Our friends and our secrets we never betray:
Hencesorth, O ye Heroes, your ravages cease,
And the laurels ye wear, to Freemasons release:
Tho' ye won them by warfare, we claim them by peace.

They are ours, ours, ours, ours; Tho' ye won them by warfare, we claim them by peace.

SONG IX.

[Tune, Hearts of Oak.]

No fect in the world can with Masons compare, So ancient, so noble the badge which they wear, That all other Orders, however esteem'd, Inferior to Masonry justly are deem'd,

CHORUS.

We always are free, And for ever agree; Supporting each other, Brother helps brother,

No mortals on earth are so friendly as we.
When first attic fire mortals glory became,
Tho' small was the spark, it soon grew to a slame;
As Phoebus celestial transcendently bright,
It spread o'er the world a fresh torrent of light.
We always, &c.

The greatest of monarchs, the wisest of men, Freemasonry honour'd again and again; And nobles have quitted all other delights, With joy to preside o'er our mystical rites. We always, &c.

Tho' fome may pretend we've no fecrets to know, Such idle opinions their ignorance show; While others, with raptures, cry out, they're reveal'd, In Freemasons' bosoms they still lie conceal'd.

We always, &c.

Coxcomical pedants may fay what they can, Abuse us, ill use us, and laugh at our plan; We'll temper our mortar, enliven our souls, And join in a chorus o'er full flowing bowls,— We always, &c.

SONG X.

By Brother STEPHEN JONES. [Tune, Hearts of Oak.]

A System more pure ne'er was modell'd by man, Than that which we boast as the Freemason's plan; It unites all the world by the strongest of tics, And adds to men's bliss, while it makes them more wise,

From the prince to the boor,
Be he rich, be he poor,
A Mason is a BROTHER,
And each will help the other,
So grateful the tie is of FREEMASONRY.

That hence flow the purest enjoyments of life,
That banish'd from hence are dissension and strife,
That the lessons are good which we practise and teach,
Are truths that our foes vainly strive to impeach.
From the prince, &c.

The greatest of monarchs, the wifest, and best,
Have Masons become, and been true to the test;
And still with that Sanction our rights are pursu'd, Admir'd by the wise, and approv'd by the good.
From the prince, &c.

Yet let not the "Man of our hearts" be unfung, Nor forget the effects of his well-pleading tongue "; May the prayers of our orphans to Heaven afcend, And fecure its best bleffings for Moira their friend! From the prince, &c.

* Alluding to a collection of upwards of gool. being made for the Cumberland School, after a speech of the Earl of Moira's in its behalf at a public dinner.

The task were too tedious the deeds to record
Of the great and the good, that our annals afford;
In a word, let us utter this truth to mankind,
There's no temple more pure than the true Mason's mind.
From the prince, &c.

SONG XI.

[Tune, Goddess of Ease.]

GENIUS of Masonry descend,
And with thee bring thy spotless train;
Constant our sacred rites attend,
While we adore thy peaceful reign;

Bring with thee Virtue, brightest maid,
Bring Love, bring Truth, and Friendship here;

While focial-Mirth shall lend her aid, To sooth the wrinkled brow of Care.

Come, Charity, with goodness crown'd, Encircled in thy heavenly robe, Diffuse thy bleffings all around.

Diffuse thy bleffings all around, To every corner of the globe:

See where she comes, with power to bless, With open hand, and tender heart,

Which wounded feels at man's distress, And bleeds at every human smart.

Envy may every ill devise,

And Falsehood be thy deadliest foe, Thou, Friendship, still shalt towering rise, And sink thine adversaries low:

Thy well-built pile shall long endure,
Through rolling years preserve its prime,

Upon a rock it stands fecure,

And braves the rude affaults of Time.

Ye happy few, who here extend, In perfect lines, from east to west, With fervent zeal the Lodge defend,

And lock its fecrets in each breaft: Since ye are met upon the square,

Bid Love and Friendship jointly reign, Be Peace and Harmony your care,

Nor break the adamantine chain.

Behold the planets how they move,
Yet keep due order as they run;
Then imitate the Stars above,
And shine resplendent as the Sun:
That future Masons, when they meet,
May all our glorious deeds rehearse,
And say, their Fathers were so great,
That they adorn'd the universe.

SONG XII.

[Tune, Arno's Vale.]

When my divine Althæa's charms No more shall kindle soft alarms, And the keen lightning of her eye Passes unfelt, unheeded by; When meral Beauty's heavenly form Shall cease the frozen soul to warm; 'When manners thus corrupt we fee, Farewell the fweets of Masonry! When Science shall withdraw her light, And Error spread a Gothic night; When Pity's facred fource is dry, No pearly drop to melt the eye; When Truth shall hide her blushing head, And famish'd Virtue beg her bread; When manners thus corrupt we fee, Farewell the fweets of Masonry !. But while the fair transport our fight, And moral Beauty's charms delight: While Science lifts her torch on high, And Pity thaws the melting eye; While Truth maintains despotic power, And Virtue charms without a dower; While manners thus unstain'd we see, All hail, the fweets of Masonry!

SONG XIII.

On, on, my dear brethren, pursue your great lecture, Refine on the precepts of old architecture;

High honour to Masons the Craft daily brings, Who are brothers of princes, and fellows of kings. We drove the rude Vandals and Goths off the stage. Reviving the Art of Augustus' fam'd age; And Vespasian destroy'd the vast temple in vain, Since so many now rise where our principles reign. The noble five Orders, compos'd with fuch art, Will amaze the fix'd eye, and engage the whole heart; Proportion's fweet harmony gracing the whole, Gives our work, like the glorious creation, a foul. Then, Master, and brethren, preserve your great name, The Lodge so majestic will purchase you fame; Rever'd it shall stand till all nature expire. And its glories ne'er fade till the world be on fire. See, see, behold here, what rewards all our toil, Invigorates genius, and bids nature fmile: To our noble Grand Master let bumpers be crown'd, To all Masons, a bumper, so let it go round.

Again, my lov'd brethren, again let it pass, Our ancient firm union cements with the glass: And all the contention 'mongst Masons shall be, Who better can work, or who better agree.

SONG XIV.

HAIL, Masonry, thou crast divine!
Glory of earth, from Heaven reveal'd;
Which doth with jewels precious shine,
From all but Masons eyes conceal'd:
Thy praises due, who can rehearse,
In nervous prose, or flowing verse?

All Craftsmen true distinguish'd are,
Our code all other laws excel;
And what's in knowledge choice and rare,
Within our breasts securely dwell.
The silent breast, the faithful heart,
Preserve the secrets of the Art.

From fcorching heat and piercing cold,
From beafts, whose roar the forest rends;
From the affaults of warriors bold,
The Masons' Art mankind defends.
Be to this Art due honour paid,
From which mankind receives such aid.

Enfigns of state that feed our pride, Distinctions troublesome and vain,
By Masons true are laid aside,
Art's free-born sons such toys disdain;
Ennobled by the name they bear,
Distinguish'd by the badge they wear.

Sweet fellowship, from envy free,
Friendly converse of brotherhood;
The Lodge's lasting cement be,
Which has for ages firmly stood.
The Lodge thus built, for ages past
Has lasted, and shall ever last.

Then let us celebrate the praise
Of all who have enrich'd the Art;
Let gratitude our voices raise,
And each true brother bear a part.
Let cheerful strains their fame resound,
And living Masons' healths go round.

SONG XV.

[Tune, In Infancy, &c.]

LET Masonry from pole to pole,
Her sacred laws expand,
Far as the mighty waters roll,
To wash remotest land:
That Virtue has not left mankind,
Her social maxims prove,
For stamp'd upon the Mason's mind
Are Unity and Love.

Ascending to her native sky,
Let Masonry increase:
A glorious pillar rais'd on high,
Integrity its base.
Peace adds to olive boughs, entwin'd,
An emblematic dove,
As stamp'd upon the Masons mind
Are Unity and Love.

SONG XVI.

[Tune, In Infancy.]

HAIL, Masonry! thou sacred Art,
Of origin divine!
Kind partner of each social heart,
And fav'rite of the Nine!
By thee we're taught, our acts to square,
To measure life's short span;
And each infirmity to bear
That's incident to man.
Cho. By thee, &c.

Tho' Envy's tongue should blast thy fame,
And Ignorance may sneer,
Yet still thy ancient honour'd name
Is to each brother dear:
Then strike the blow, to charge prepare,
In this we all agree,
"May Freedom be each Mason's care,
"And every Mason free."
Cho. Then strike the blow, &c.

SONG XVII.

When Heaven defign'd that man should know All that was good and great below; This was the happy, choice decree, The blessings of Free-masonry. Hence Peace and Friendship deign to smile, Instructive rules the hours beguile: In social joy and harmony Are spent the hours of Masonry.

To Beauty's shrine they homage pay, Its power they know, and own its sway; And this their toast will always be, Success to Love and Masonry.

Of modern learning, ancient lore, Masons possess an ample store; At faction spurn, but loyalty Congenial is with Masonry.

When tafte and genius both combine, To shape the stone, or draw the line; In fair proportion just and free, All own the power of Masonry.

Whate'er in sculptur'd skill we prize, Or domes are rear'd, or structures rise; Such wonders ne'er mankind could see, But from the help of Masonry.

An edifice we're proud to own, Of wood not made, nor yet of stone; Whose angles, squares, and symmetry, Are emblems of Free-masonry.

It's founded on a brother's love, Relief and Truth its pillars prove; Its corner-stone is Charity; The building's then Free-masonry. By Nature rear'd, improv'd by Art, The mansion view, a Mason's heart, Which ne'er was equall'd, all agree,

When modell'd by Free-masonry.

SONG XVIII. [Tune, Mulberry Tree.]

YE fons of fair Science, impatient to learn, What's meant by a Mason you here may discern; He strengthens the weak, he gives light to the blind, And the naked he clothes—is a friend to mankind.

All shall yield to Masonry;
Bend to thee,
Blest Masonry;

Matchless was he who founded thee, And thou, like him, immortal shalt be. He walks on the level of Honour and Truth, And spurns the wild passions of Folly and Youth; The Compass and Square all his frailties reprove, And his ultimate object is Brotherly Love.

The Temple of Knowledge he nobly doth raife, Supported by Wisdom, and Learning its base; When rear'd and adorn'd, strength and beauty unite, And he views the fair structure with conscious delight.

With fortitude bless'd, he's a stranger to sears, And govern'd by Prudence, he cautiously steers; Till Temperance shews him the port of Content, And Justice unask'd, gives the sign of consent.

Inspir'd by his feelings, he bounty imparts, For Charity ranges at large in our hearts; And an indigent brother reliev'd from his woes, Feels a pleasure inserior to him who bestows.

Thus a Mason I've drawn, and expos'd to your view, And Truth must acknowledge the figure is true; Then members become, let's be brothers and friends, There's a Secret remaining will make you amends.

SONG XIX.

[Tune, God fave the King.]

HAIL, MASONRY divine!
Glory of ages shine,
Long may'st thou reign!
Where'er thy Lodges stand,
May they have great command,
And always grace the land,
Thou Art divine!

Great fabrics still arise, And graze the azure skies, Great are thy schemes! Thy noble Orders are Matchless beyond compare: No Art with thee can share, Thou Art divine! Hiram, the architect,
Did all the Craft direct
How they should build;
Sol'mon, great Isr'el's king,
Did mighty bleffings bring,
And left us ground to sing,
Hail, royal Art!

SONG XX.

[By Brother Noorthouck.]

Let drunkards boast the power of wine,
And reel from side to side;

Let lovers kneel at Beauty's strine.

Let lovers kneel at Beauty's shrine, The sport of semale pride. Be ours the more exalted part,

And feeds on wretched fare.

To celebrate the Masone' Art, And spread its praises wide.

To dens and thickets dark and rude
For shelter beasts repair;
With sticks and straws the seather'd brood
Suspend their nests in air;
And man untaught, as wild as these,
Binds up sad huts with boughs of trees,

But Science dawning in his mind,
The quarry he explores;
Industry and the Arts combin<sup>2</sup>d
Improv'd all Nature's stores:
Thus walls were built, and houses rear'd,
No storms or tempest now are fear'd
Within his well-fram'd doors.

When stately palaces arise,
When columns grace the hall,
When towers and spires salute the skies,
We owe to Masons all:
Nor buildings only do they give,
But teach men how within to live,
And yield to Reason's call.

All party quarrels they detelt, For Virtue and the Arts, Lodg'd in each true Freemason's breast, Unite and rule their hearts: By these, while Masons square their minds, The state no better subjects finds, None act more upright parts.

When Bucks and Albions are forgot, Freemasons will remain; Mushrooms, each day, spring up and rot, While oaks stretch o'er the plain:

Let others quarrel, rant, and roar; Their noify revels when no more, Still Masonry shall reign.

Our leathern aprons we compare With garters red and blue; Princes and Kings our brothers are, While they our rules purfue; Then drink fuccess and health to all The Craft around this earthly ball, May Brethren still prove true!

SONG XXI.

Come let us prepare, We brothers that are Affembled on merry occasion: To drink, laugh, and fing, Be he beggar or king, Here's health to an Accepted Mason. The world is in pain Our fecrets to gain, And still let them wonder and gaze on: They ne'er can divine The Word or the Sign Of a Free and an Accepted Mason. 'Tis this, and 'tis that, They cannot tell what, Nor why the great men of the nation Should aprons put on, And make themselves one,

With a Free and an Accepted Mason.

Great Kings, Dukes, and Lords,
Have laid by their swords,
Our myst'ry to put a good grace on;
And ne'er been asham'd
To hear themselves nam'd
With a free and an Accepted Mason.

Antiquity's pride
We have on our fide,
To keep up our old reputation;
There's nought but what's good
To be understood
By a free and an Accepted Mason.

We're true and fincere,
And just to the Fair,
Who will trust us on any occasion;
No mortal can more
The Ladies adore,
Than a Free and an Accepted Mason.

Then join hand in hand,
By each brother firm stand,
Let's be merry, and put a bright face on;
What mortal can boast
So noble a toast
As a Free and an Accepted Mason?

SONG XXII.

YE thrice happy few
Whose hearts have been true,
In concord and unity found;
Let us fing and rejoice,
And unite every voice,
To send the gay chorus around.

CHORUS.

Like pillars we stand,
An immoveable band,
Cemented by power from above;
Then freely let pass
The generous glass
To Masonry, Friendship, and Love.

- Digitized by Google-

The GRAND ARCHITECT, Whose word did erect

Eternity, measure, and space, First laid the fair plan

Whereon he began

The cement of friendship and peace.

Whose firmness of hearts, Fair treasure of Arts,

To the eye of the vulgar unknown; Whose lustre can beam

Whose lustre can beam New splendor and same,

To the pulpit, the bar, and the throne.

The great David's fon, The wife Solomon,

As written in Scripture's bright page;

A Mason became, The fav'rite of Fame,

The wonder and pride of his age.

Indiffoluble bands

Our hearts and our hands

In focial benevolence bind;

For true to his cause, By immutable laws

A Mason's a friend to mankind.

Let joy flow around,

And peace, olive hound, Preside at our mystical rites;

Whose conduct maintains Our auspicious domains,

And freedom with order unites.

Nor let the dear maid Our mysteries dread,

Or think them repugnant to love;

To Beauty we bend, Her empire defend,

An empire deriv'd from above.

Then let us unite Sincere and upright

On the level of virtue to fland:

No mortal can be So happy as we, With a brother and friend in each hand.

SONG XXIII.

WHEN a lodge of Freemasons are cloth'd in their aprons, In order to make a new brother,

With firm hearts and clean hands, they repair to their And justly support one another. [stands,

Trufty brother, take care, of eve-droppers beware, 'Tis a just and a folemn occasion;

Give the Word and the Blow, that workmen may know, There's one asks to be made a Freemason.

The Master stands due, and his officers too, While the craftsmen are plying their station; The apprentices stand, right for the command Of a Free and an Accepted Mason.

Now traverse your ground, as in duty you're bound, And revere the authentic oration,

That leads to the way, and proves the first ray Of the light of an Accepted Mason.

Here's Words, and here's Signs, and here's Problems and Lines,

And here's room too for deep speculation; Here Virtue and Truth are taught to the Youth, When first he's call'd up to a Mason.

Hieroglyphics shine bright, and here light reverts light On the rules and the tools of vocation; We work and we sing, the Crast and the King,

'Tis both duty and choice in a Mason.

What is faid or is done, as here truly laid down In this form of our high installation; Yet I challenge all men to know what I mean, Unless he's an Accepted Mason.

The ladies claim right to come into our light,
Since the Apron, they say, is their bearing;
Can they subject their will, can they keep their tongues

And let talking be changed into hearing?

This difficult task is the least we can ask,
To secure us on fundry occasions;
When with this they'll comply, our utmost we'll try
To raise Lodges for Lady Freemasons.

Till this can be done, must each brother be mum,
Though the fair-one should wheedle and teaze on;
Be just, true, and kind, but still bear in mind
At all times that you are a Freemason.

SONG XXIV.

[Tune, Belleisle March.]

In hist'ry we're told, how the Lodges of old Arose in the East, and shone forth like the Sun; But all must agree, that divine Masonry Commenced when the glorious creation begun, With glory divine; oh, long may'st thou shine, Thou choicest of blessings, derived from above! Then charge bumpers high, and with shouts rend the sky, To Masonry, Friendship, and brotherly Love.

Cho. With glory divine, &c.

Judea's great king, whose vast praises we sing,
With wisdom contriv'd, while the Temple he plann'd;
The mysterious Art then took place in each heart,
And Hiram with Solomon went hand in hand:
While each royal Name was recorded in fame,
Their works Earth and Heaven did jointly approve;
Then charge bumpers high, and with shouts rend the sky,
To Masonry, Frieudship, and brotherly Love.
Cho. While each royal, &c.

Then Masons were true, and the Craft daily grew;
They liv'd within compass, and work'd by the square;
In friendship they dwelt, no ambition they felt,
Their deeds were upright, and their consciences clear;
On this noble plan Freemasons began,
To help one another they mutually strove;
Then charge bumpers high, and with shouts rend the sky,
To Masonry, Friendship, and brotherly Love.

Cho. On this noble plan, &c.

Those maxims pursue, and your passions subdue, And imitate those worthy Masons of yore; Fix a Lodge in each breaft, be fair Virtue your guell, Let Wisdom preside, and let Truth tile the door: So shall we arise, to an immortal prize, In that blissful Lodge which no time can remove; Then charge bumpers high, and with shouts rend the sky, To Masonry, Friendship, and brotherly Love.

Cho. So shall we arise, &c.

SONG XXV.

By Brother John Richardson, of the ROYAL Brunswick Lodge, Sheffield.]

"O WHAT a happy thing it is, " Brethren to dwell in unity:" Whilst ev'ry action's squar'd by this, The true base-line of Masonry, Our plumb-rule fixed to the point, The Angle of Uprightness shows: From fide to fide, from joint to joint, By steps the stately mansion ruse.

Whate'er the order of the plan, The parts will with the whole agree: For, by a geometric man, The work is done in symmetry. From East to West, from North to South, Far as the foaming billows roll; Faith, Hope, and filver-braided Truth, Shall stamp with worth the Mason's soul.

But, chiefest come, sweet Charity, Meek, tender, hospitable guest; Aided by those, inspir'd by thee, How tranquil is the Mason's breast! An olive branch thy forehead binds, The gift that peerless Prudence gave's An emblem of congenial minds, And fuch masonic brethren have.

SONG XXVI.

[To the brethren of St. James's Lodge, Tarbolton.

By ROBERT BURNS.]

[Tune, Good night, and joy be wi' you a'.]
Addeu! a heart-warm, fond adieu!
Dear brothers of the mystic tie!
Ye favour'd, ye enlighten'd few,
Companions of my focial joy!
Tho' I to foreign lands must hie,
Pursuing fortune's slidd'ry ba',

With melting heart, and brimful eye, L'll mind you still, the' far awa'!

Oft have I met your focial band,
And spent the cheerful festive night;
Oft, honour'd with supreme command,
Presided o'er the sons of light:
And by that hieroglyphic bright,
Which none but Craftsmen ever saw:

Which none but Craftfmen ever faw; Strong mem'ry on my heart shall write Those happy scenes, when far awa't

May Freedom, Harmony, and Love,
Unite you in the grand design,
Beneath th' omniscient eye above,
The glorious Architect divine!
That you may keep th'unerring line,
Still rising by the plummet's law,
Till order bright completely shine,
Shall be my pray'r when far awa'!

And you, farewell! whose merits claim
Justly that highest badge to wear;
Heav'n bless your honour'd, noble name,
To Masonry and Scotia dear!
A last request permit me here,
When yearly ye assemble a',
One round, I ask it with a tear,
To him, "The Bard that's far awa'!"

SONG XXVII.

As long as our coast shall with whiteness appear, Still Masons stand foremost in verse; While Harmony, Friendship, and Joys are held dear, New bands shall our praises rehearse.

CHORUS.

Tho' lodges less favour'd, less happy, decay, Destroy'd by old Time as he runs; Tho' Albions, Gregorians, and Bucks, fade away, Still Masons shall live, shall live in their sons.

If Envy attempt our fuccess to impede,
United we'll trample her down;
If Endion should threaten, we'll them a

If Faction should threaten, we'll shew we're agreed, And Discord shall own we are one. Cho. Tho' lodges, &c.

While with ardour we glow this our Order to raife,
Promoting its welfare and peace,
Old Masons return our endeavours to praise,
And new ones confirm the increase.

Cho. Tho' lodges, &c.

Go on, cry our parents, for Time is your friend,
His flight shall increase your renown;
And Mith shall your guest be, and Bacchus attend,
And Joy all your meetings shall crown.

Gho. Tho' lodges, &c.

SONG XXVIII.

[On the Revival of Masonry in Cornwall.]

WHEN Masonry expiring lay,
By knaves and fools rejected,
Without one hope, one cheering ray,
By worthless fools neglected;
Fair Virtue sled,
Truth hung her head,
O'erwhelm'd in deep confusion;
Sweet Friendship too
Her smiles withdrew
From this blest Institution.

Cho. Fair Virtue fled, &c.

Cornubia's fons determin'd then Freemasonry to cherish, They rous'd her into life again,

And bid fair Science flourish.

Now Virtue bright, Truth rob'd in white,

With Friendship hither hastens,

All go in hand,
To blefs the band
Of upright Cornish Masons.

Cho. Now Virtue bright, &c.

Since Masonry's reviv'd once more, Pursue her wise directions,

Let Circumspection go before,

And Virtue square your actions; Unite your hands In Friendship's bands,

Supporting one another;

With honest heart, Fair Truth impart, To every faithful brother.

Cho. Unite your hands, &c.

Let coxcombs grin, and critics sneer, While we are blythe and jolly,

Let fops despise the badge we wear,

We laugh at all their folly;

Let empty fools Despise our rules,

By Jove we ne'er will heed 'em; Say what they will,

We're Masons still,

And will support our freedom.

Cho. Let empty fools, &c.

Cho. Let empty fools, &c.
But may kind Heaven's gracious hand

Still regulate each action; May every lodge fecurely fland

Against the storms of faction, May Love and Peace

Each day increase

Throughout this happy nation,

May they extend, Till all shall end

In one great conflagration.—Cho. May Love, &c.

SONG XXIX.

[Sung at a Provincial Grand Lodge for the County of Cornwall, held at Truro on the Festival of St. John the Baptist, 24th June 1779.]

[Tune, Casmo.]

COME, ye Masons, hither bring The tuneful pipe and pleasing string, Exalt each voice,

Aloud rejoice,
And make the spacious concave ring:
Let your hearts be blythe and gay,
Joy and mirth let all display,

No dull care Shall enter here,

For this is Masons' holiday.

Cho. Let your hearts, &c.

Friendship here has fix'd her feat, And Virtue finds a calm retreat; Go tell the fool,

'Tis Wisdom's school,

Where Love and Honour always meet.

Cho. Let' your hearts, &c.

Social pleasures here invite, To fill the soul with sweet delight,

While hand in hand Our friendly band

In Love and Harmony unite.

Cho. Let your hearts, &c.

May we oft affemble here,

And long the badge of honour wear,

May joy abound, And we be found

For ever faithful and fincere.

Cho. Let your hearts, &cc.

Take the flowing glass in hand, And drink to your Provincial Grand,

Long may he reign, The cause maintain,

And lodges flourish through the land. Cho. Let your hearts, &c.

SONG XXX.

[By J. Bisset, Steward of St. Alban's Longe, and Provincial G. S. for the County of Warwick.]

A MASON's life's the life for me,
With joy we meet each other,
We pals our time with mirth and glee,
And hail each friendly brother:

And hail each friendly brother: In lodge no party-feuds are feen,

But careful we in this agree, To banish care or spleen.

The Master's call, we one and all With pleasure soon obey;

With heart and hand we ready stand,

Our duty still to pay.

But when the glass goes round, Then mirth and glee abound,

We're all happy to a man: We laugh a little, we drink a little, We work a little, we play a little,

Cho. We laugh, &c.

We fing a little, are merry a little, And fwig the flowing can. And fwig, &c.

See in the east the Master stands,
The Wardens south and west, Sir,
Both ready to obey command.

Both ready to obey command, Find work, or give us rest, Sir. The fignal given, we all prepare,

With one accord obey the word,
To work by rule or square:

Or if they please, the ladder raise,

Or plum the level line; Thus we employ our time with joy,

Attending every fign.

But when the glass goes round,
'Then mirth and glee abound,
We're all happy to a man;
We laugh a little, and drink a little,
We work a little, and play a little,
Cho. We laugh, &c.

We fing a little, are merry a little, And Iwig the flowing can.

Th' Almighty faid, " Let there be light," Effulgent rays appearing Dispell'd the gloom, the glory bright To this new world was cheering; But unto Masonry alone, Another light, so clear and bright, In mystic rays then shone; From east to west it spread so fast, That, Faith and Hope unfurl'd, We hail with joy sweet Charity, The darling of the world. Then while the toast goes round, Let mirth and glee abound, Let's be happy to a man; We'll laugh a little, and drink a little, We'll work a little, and play a little, Cho. We'll laugh, &c. We'll fing a little, be merry a little,

SONG XXXL

[ Tune, From the East breaks the Morn.]

WHILST each poet fings, of great princes and kings,

To no fuch does my ditty belong:

To no fuch does my ditty belong;
'Tis freedom I praise, that demands all my lays,
And Masonry honours my song.

And swig the flowing can.

And Masonry honours my song. Cho. 'Tis freedom I praise, &c.

Within compass to live, is a lesson we give, Which none can deny to be true;

Which none can, &c.

All our actions to fquare, to the time we take care,

And Virtue we ever purfue;

And Virtue we ever, &c. Cho. All our actions, &c.

On a level we are, all true brothers share The gifts which kind Heaven bestows; The gifts, &c. In friendship we dwell; none but Masons can tell What bliss from such harmony slows;

What blifs, &c.

Cho. In friendship we, &c.

In our mystical school, we must all work by rule, And our secrets we always conceal;

And our, &c.

Then let's fing and rejoice, and unite every voice, With fervency, freedom, and zeal;

With fervency, &c.

Cho. Then let's fing, &c.

Then each fill a glass, let the circling toast pass. And merrily fend it around;

And merrily, &c.

Let us Masonry hail, may it ever prevail, With success may it ever be crown'd!

With fuccess, &c.

Cho. Let us Masonry, &c.

SONG XXXII.

Thus happily met, united and free,
A foretaste of heaven we prove;
Then join heart and hand, and firmly agree

To cultivate brotherly love. With corn, wine, and oil, our table replete,

The altar of friendship divine; Each virtue and grace the circle complete,

With aid of the musical Nine.

Thus bleft, and thus bleffing, employment supreme, May Masonry daily increase!

Its grand scheme of morals our favorite theme, The source of contentment and peace.

SONG XXXIII.

[By Brother STANFIELD.]
[Tune, Contented I am, &c.]

GRAVE bus'ness being clos'd—and a call from the south— The bowl of refreshment we drain: Yet e'en o'er our wine we reject servile sloth,

And our rites 'midst our glasses retain.

My brave boys, &c.

With loyalty brighten'd, we first toast the King— May his splendour and virtues entwine!— And, to honour his name, how we make the lodge ring, When the King and the Crast we combine.

May the Son's polish'd graces improve on the Sire— May the arts flourish fair from his smile— And long our Grand Master, with wisdom and fire, Give beauty and strength to the pile!

As the ruby-lip'd wine its foft spirit imparts, Louder strains and fresh ardours abound: What a glow of true pleasure enlivens our hearts, When our honour'd Provincial goes round.

The absent we claim, the dispers'd round the ball— The silent and secret, our friends— And one honour'd guest, at our magical call, From the grave of concealment ascends.

Immortal the strain, and thrice-awful the hand,
That our rites and libations controuls;
Like the sons of Olympus, 'midst thunders we stand,
And with mysteries ennoble our bowls.

What a circle appears, when the border entwines— How grapple the links to each foul!
'Tis the zodiac of friendship embellish'd with figns,
And illum'd by the star in the pole.

Thus cemented by laws, unfeen and unknown,
The universe hangs out its frame:
And, thus secretly bound, shall our structure be shewn,
Till creation shall be but a name.

SONG XXXIV.

[Tune, Balance a Straw.]

WHEN the Sun from the East first salutes mortal eyes, And the sky-lark melodiously bids us arise; With our hearts full of joy, we the summons obey, Straight repair to our work, and to moisten our clay. On the traffel our Master draws angles and lines, There with freedom and fervency forms his designes, Not a picture on earth is so lovely to view, All his lines are so perfect, his angles so true.

In the West see the Wardens submissively stand, The Master to aid, and obey his command; The intent of his signals we perfectly know, And we ne'er take offence when he gives us a blow.

In the Lodge, floth and dulness we always avoid, Fellow-crafts and apprentices all are employ'd: Perfect aihlers fome finish, some make the rough plain, All are pleas'd with their work, and are pleas'd with their gain.

When my Master I've serv'd seven years, perhaps more, Some secrets he'll tell me I ne'er knew before; In my bosom I'll keep them as long as I live, And pursue the directions his wisdom shall give.

I'll attend to his call both by night and by day,

I'll attend to his call both by hight and by day,
It is his to command, and 'tis mine to obey;
Whenfoe'er we are met, I'll attend to his nod,
And I'll work till high twelve, then I'll lay down my hod.

3 AU 59

Printed by Strahan and Preflow, New-Street-Square.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

RECORD OF TREATMENT, EXTRACTION ETC.

Shelfmark: 47-83 C.3.

S&P Ref No. DE 0116 /9544/3

Microfilm No.

Date	Particulars
27.3.2001.	pH Before or Existing	pH After
	4.6.	7.4.
	40.

Deacidification mag - bi - carb. gelatine size.

Adhesives Wheat Starch Paste.

Animal alue.

Limed/Laminated 5 WS 8.5gsm MSSVR.
5.8gsm WZO REPOW.

Chemicals / Solvents

Cover Treatment

Other Remarks

